10,000 Listen to Anarchist Oratory

Police Prevent Riots in Big N. Y. Outdoor Demonstration.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Anarchists, Socialists, Vague exponents of vaguer reforms, anti-Tammany howlers, and just plain "out-of-work" with grievances denounced everything they could think of in the way of government from soap boxes in Union Square today, while an audience of 10,000 cheered, hissed and laughed.

The oratorical stars were Alexander Berkman, Emma Goldman's co-worker, and "Wild Joe" O'Carroll. Protests against the arrest of Frank Tannenbaum, the I. W. W. leader, and denunciations of "police brutality" were the principal themes. Hannagan Offered Street Paving Job

Mayor Curley Offers Lawrence Commissioner $5,000 Salary.

Paul Hannagan, Alderman and Commissioner of Streets and Engineering of Lawrence, was yesterday offered the position of Superintendent of the Boston paving department by Mayor Curley, who made a special trip to Lawrence for the purpose of seeing the streets that had been under the direction of Hannagan during the past two years.

Mayor Curley offered Hannagan a salary of $5,000 a year, just twice the salary Hannagan receives at present. He further urged that Hannagan begin his duties tomorrow.

Hannagan told Mayor Curley he would come to Boston Tuesday and discuss the matter with him and Commissioner O'Rourke.

"Mayor Curley was entirely wrong when he made the statement that he had offered three unemployed men positions which they refused. He only offered me a job, and I wouldn't take it," declared Morrison I. Swift, addressing about 700 persons at the weekly meeting of the unemployed on Boston Common yesterday.

"I called upon Mayor Curley," he said, "with two other representatives of the unemployed, to see what he could do for the men. He said he could do nothing, that was all he said. HALL IS JILTED ON EVE OF WEDDING

Worcester Society Leaders Are Shocked by Breaking of Engagement to Harvard Man by Chicago Young Woman

Many Friends of Groom-to-Be Had Started West to Witness the Ceremony; "Not Sure She Loved Him," Girl Declares

WORCESTER, April 11.—Local society leaders were greatly surprised and shocked tonight when they received, through the mails, formal announcement that the wedding of Rowland F. Hall of No. 6 Oberlin street, this city, to Miss Alice Young, daughter of General and Mrs. Edward C. Young of Chicago, scheduled to take place on Wednesday next, had been cancelled.

The announcement, sent out from Chicago, came at the eleventh hour, even after many friends of the young groom-to-be had left here to attend the ceremony.

The only reason given for the cancellation of the wedding, which brings to an end a courtship full of romance, was given by Miss Young. She said:

"I am not sure that I love Rowland enough to marry him. It is better to wait a while now than to make a mistake which cannot be rectified later."

Young Hall, unaccompanied, reached this city late tonight. He was met at the depot by friends who had received word that the wedding would not take place. When approached by a reporter he waved him aside, refusing to make any statement.

The last time Miss Young was here she appeared to be perfectly happy with the companionship of young Hall. Elaborate arrangements had been made for the wedding, which was to be the initial Spring event in Chicago society.

Hall is the son of Edward Hall, one of the wealthiest inventors in the State. During the past Winter his parents have entertained lavishly and their large home on Oberlin street has been the scene of many select social gatherings.

Miss Young made her debut into Chicago society two seasons ago and was declared at that time to be one of the handsomest young women of the city. She immediately won a place amongst the leaders of society and her wedding was looked forward to with much interest.

Thousands of dollars worth of wedding gifts had been received by the young woman and the announcement that there would be no wedding has completely shocked her many friends.

Young Hall is well known here. He is a Harvard and Technology graduate and was prominent in club and athletic circles here.

The young couple had planned to make their home in Worcester and it is understood that a house had already been picked out for their future home.

Giulia Morosini Seeks to Get Nerve

NEW YORK, April 11.—While the personal effects of her husband were being removed, Mrs. Giulia Morosini Werner, the heiress who has just been separated from her policeman-husband, left her $1,000,000 home at Kinhurst today, telling her friends she was going away to recover her shattered nerve.

Reports that Elmhurst is to be sold were revived by the visit of several persons who made a minute inspection of the mansion and grounds. Among the personal effects of Werner was a $1000 toilet set given by his wife.

LIPTON MAY NOT RACE FOR THE CUP

Labor Troubles Are Interfering With the Construction of the Challenger, Shamrock IV., and the Launching Is Afar Off

Designer Nicholson Races to Southern France to Plead With Sir Thomas for Action to Meet the Present Crisis

GOSPORT, Eng., April 11.—It is a good even bet that Sir Thomas Lipton will not even attempt to "lift" the cup this year. The AMERICAN today finally succeeded in uncovering surprising information concerning the state of affairs in the ship building plant of Campbell & Nicholson here.

"The truth is, mate," said a workman employed by the designer and builder of the new Shamrock IV., "the blooming boat is nothing but a set of ribs now—now, with the proper launching date already here.

"If she goes off the ways the middle of May a lot of changes have got to happen, not the least of which is settling the grievances of the riveters and drillers, who object to working overtime at regular time wages."

Everybody in Gosport is keenly interested in the progress of the cup challenger's construction, and there are as many reasons for the unexpected delay of the yacht's taking water as there are names in the town directory. But the real reason everyone seems to have overlooked. It is nothing in the world but a disinclination on the shipbuilder's part to pay the usual extra wages for overtime work demanded by the riveters and drillers who have wasted more than a month waiting for special metal sheathing.

MYSTERY OF THE SHEATHING.

This sheathing is more or less a mystery. None of the workmen knows its actual composition except that it is chiefly aluminum. In any event the deliveries are more than a month behindhand, and when the first shipment arrived, ten days ago, the mechanics were ordered to work sixteen hours daily to get it in place, so the launching could occur not later than May 1. Even the lure of extra pay would not have weighed with the mechanics against the loss of all time for leisure and recreation, but when the announcement was forthcoming that the regular hour scale was to apply to overtime they refused to work at all.

NICHOLSON AVERTS A STRIKE.

A strike was averted by "Charley" Nicholson, the designer of the craft and the active head of the concern. His plan of compromise resulted in the men continuing work Sundays and overtime for regular pay on the understanding that the balance would be forthcoming from Sir Thomas. They even worked yesterday, Good Friday, which here outranks July 4 in America, so far as holiday spirit is concerned.

And this solves the mystery of Nicholson's whereabouts, which has been a subject of much speculation in Gosport for the last five days. Your correspondent learns that Nicholson took the train for Southampton and a boat for Cherbourg and thence went to southern France. The purpose of the trip is to see Sir Thomas, who is staying at Nice, in order to try to induce him to pay in cash a sufficient sum to cover the extra charges of the mechanics.

If the designer returns with the money work on the yacht will be rushed through to completion, but in the meantime it is interesting to note that the men knocked off today at noon and the big plant will be empty tomorrow unless a message is received from the "boss" that he is coming with a bankroll.

FOUR GUNMEN MUST DIE; GOFF DENIES LAST APPEAL; EXECUTION TOMORROW

MRS. "LEFTY LOUIE" ROSENBERG, the young wife of one of the four gunmen whose last plea for life is denied by Justice Goff.

Dramatic Scene in Court As Motion for New Trial Is Refused; Threatening Letter Is Sent to Presiding Jusitce at Hearing

State Electrician Arrives at the Prison and Begins Tests and Preparations for Quadruple Execution Tomorrow Morning

NEW YORK, April 11.—The four gunmen, convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, have lost their last fight. Justice Goff tonight denied the motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence.

The execution at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning can now be halted only by Governor Glynn. It is extremely doubtful that he will reverse the firm stand he has already taken.

Former Magistrate Charles F. G. Wahle and Lionel H. Krinzel, counsel for the four slayers, will go to Albany again tomorrow to make a last appeal to the Governor for a reprieve until after the Becker trial.

DELIBERATED 4 HOURS.

Supreme Court Justice Goff came from his chambers at 9:30 o'clock and personally announced his decision to the gunmen's counsel and a group of thirty reporters, who were waiting in the ante-room.

The gray haired justice, a sick man, had sat continuously for six hours hearing the evidence and the plea for a new trial. He took four hours to deliberate and prepare his decision, which finally doomed the men he sentenced to death more than sixteen months ago.

"The memorandum of the decision will be ready within half an hour. I have signed the application," said the justice in a soft, solemn tone.

Turning to former Magistrate Wahle, who had conducted the long fight for the gunmen, the justice said:

PRAISES WAHLE.

"I want to congratulate you, sir, and compliment you on your argument today. Not only today's presentation, but throughout this long trial you have conducted yourself in a way that has inspired my deep admiration. You have been a capable lawyer and a thorough gentleman, and your clients' interests have been safe in your able and you are a credit to the bar."

Wahle thanked him in a voice that broke with emotion. The tears rolled down his cheeks. He said:

"I thank you, judge. The hardest part of my duty is yet to come. They are waiting over there for me to bring them the news. I dread it."

Mr. Wahle then left for his office, where the relatives of the condemned men were waiting. He had told them at the conclusion of the hearing not to expect too much. Before leaving the building Justice Goff was asked by the newspapermen if he would discuss the contents of the mysterious book he received on the bench during the afternoon session.

"I will say nothing about it because I don't want the two things to be confused. The note will be given out later."

Colonel Hallowell had been ill for a week. He was seventy-five years old, a graduate of Harvard class of 1861, and was one of the students who left college to join the Union Army. He was several times promoted for bravery on the field and was wounded in two battles.

After the war he engaged in the wool commission business and later entered the banking business. He had a large estate in West Medford which is one of the beauty spots of the city. He is survived by three sons and three daughters.

Colonel Norwood P. Hallowell Dead

Was President of National Bank of Commerce.

Colonel Norwood Penrose Hallowell, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Boston died at his home, No. 16 Mystic street, West Medford, late last night.

After reviewing the testimony of these leading witnesses, the justice added:

THREAT AGAINST JUSTICE GOFF MADE IN MYSTERIOUS LETTER IN GUNMEN'S CASE

Court Refuses at Make Contents Known, but Will Follow Matter to the End.

they did. If no other circumstances existed save this silence and delay it would of itself create grave doubts as to the truthfulness of the testimony."

Continuing, the memorandum, the court said:

"If your appeal had been addressed to sympathy alone there could have been but one answer. But it was addressed to the law. It is, therefore, justified to deny the motion."

There were affidavits and testimony from nineteen witnesses. Only four of these the justice considered worthy of consideration.

As counsel for the gunmen were fighting desperately for a new trial that will act as a stay of the execution of Rosenthal's slayers, word was received at the court room of the arrival at Sing Sing of State Executioner E. P. Davis.

The man who is to put the four prisoners to death by the first use in testing of the engine of destruction that will exact the full penalty of the law for the killing of Rosenthal.

Warden Clancy at Sing Sing imparted the news of Justice Goff's refusal of a new trial to the gunmen under dramatic circumstances. This afternoon Clancy told the gunmen that he would let them know the decision as soon as he received it.

"If it's bad news, I'll call the P. K.," said Clancy. "If it's good news, I'll come myself."

"No," replied "Dago Frank," you come anyway."

At 10:30 Clancy, bearing the dispatch, entered the death house. The condemned men were absolutely quiet. Clancy hesitated at the door.

"Well, out with it, Warden," demanded Lefty Louis. "We can stand it."

"It's bad news, boys,' declared Clancy, and the Warden read the telegram.

The gunmen demanded to know how authentic the message was. He sent it, and just what Justice Goff said.

There was no demonstration. Whitey Lewis sank upon his bed. His face was in his hands.

"Well, that's about all," he whispered.

Then, as though inspired by a new thought, Whitey arose.

"Can you think of a judge in an important case like this, where four lives are at stake, who would not be as valuable as ays, using a big part of his time talking about a threatening letter and putting witnesses on the stand in relation to that letter. No big case would be decided ever if all judges did that."

DRAW UP NEW PLEA.

"It was all unnecessary," added "Gyp the Blood," "Why prolong it. We are framed. Nobody except God Almighty can save us."

A final plea for mercy was then drawn up and sent to Governor Glynn.

Again we ask Governor Glynn," it read, "in all fairness, to grant us boys a respite pending the trial of Lieutenant Becker, when truth will come out."

The plea was signed by all except "Dago Frank," who declared it foolish.

"What's the use. I'm through talking," snarled Frank. "Why beg mercy when there is no such thing."

NEW WITNESSES AT HEARING BEFORE GOFF

NEW YORK, April 11.—The hearing before Justice Goff on the motion for a new trial for the gunmen excited intense interest all day long and everybody seemed to be speculating as to the outcome.

Justice Goff, who had presided at the trial, agreed last night to this 11th hour procedure an the representation of counsel for the gunmen that new evidence had been discovered tending to show that the prisoners were not the real murderers.

District Attorney Whitman, rushing here from Chicago, appeared to oppose the motion for a new trial. The hearing was set for noon in the justice's chambers, but crowds thronged at the last moment to the Supreme Court proper. There was some delay in starting.

In the throng in the court room were Mrs. Harry Horowitz, wife of "Gyp the Blood," and Mrs. Louis Rosenberg, wife of "Lefty Louis."

Mr. Wahle, chief of counsel for the prisoners, in opening, said that seven new affidavits had been obtained, but he stressed two of them. One of these would be called upon to testify.

The proceedings were interrupted here while Justice Goff ordered a young man who delivered a note to the stenographers so he could leave the room. The message was placed on the witness stand. He said he was Gustave Berk, and that he had come to the court to deliver a note to E. R. M. Brown, a Jewish clergyman who has been working in the gunmen's behalf. The note had been handed to him in the hall of the courthouse, he explained. That was all he knew about it.

Mr. Brown, on the stand, disclaimed all knowledge of the note and its contents were not made public at the time. The note was read, but it but would not any only "It is a secret."

DRESSER FIRST WITNESS.

Carl Dresser, a bartender and signer of an affidavit, stating that he had seen Whitey Lewis, Harry Vallon and others speeding away in the automobile from the scene of the Rosenthal murder, was called to the stand.

Dresser said he knew Rose, Webber, Schapiro, Vallon and Rosenthal. He had known some of the men as long as six years before Rosenthal was killed and some only a year before that time. He met them at various times in gambling rooms and cafes in and around New York.

The witness said he also knew a bartender named Marshall who worked during July, 1912—the month of the murder—in the Garden Cafe at Fiftieth street and Seventh avenue. On the morning of July 12, 1912, Dresser said he was standing on that corner from 1 o'clock until shortly before 2 o'clock.

This was three days before the murder. He said he saw Rose, Webber and Vallon in front of the cafe and heard Rose tempt Webber and Vallon to "put it over on" Rosenthal when the latter emerged from the place with his wife and a man (not the witness) did not know. Details of this alleged occurrence had previously been cited in the witness' affidavit.

TOLD OF GRAY CAR.

Coming down to the time of the murder, Dresser swore that he was standing on the steps of the Elks Club, which is diagonally across the street from the Hotel Metropole; then he heard shots and then a gray car raced by him through Forty-third street. Schepps was on the running board, and in the car he saw Webber, Vallon and Shelly. There were two other men were in the car, said the witness, but they were not any of the gunmen now in Sing Sing. He said he told Policeman James Kelly what he knew during the week Becker was convicted.

District Attorney Whitman here took up the cross-examination.

"Where did you see Policeman Kelly?" asked the District Attorney.

"In the Criminal Courts building. I went there to find out whether Becker had been convicted or not."

"Exactly what did you tell Kelly?"

"I told Kelly the men who killed Rosenthal were not the men locked up."

"Did you tell Kelly, Rose, Scheppa and Vallon were in the car?"

"Exactly what did you tell Kelly?"

"I told Kelly the men who killed Rosenthal were not the men locked up."

"Didn't you tell Mr. Wahle you told Kelly that?"

"No. I said I merely mentioned the case to Kelly. I did not tell Kelly any names."

Dresner insisted that he had kept still about the matter because he had been in fear of his life. He had told that fear now, he added.

Mr. Whitman tried to get the witness to tell just what he was afraid would kill him. Dresner said there were "plenty of people" in New York to be afraid of. He was unable, however, to give any names.

TOLD STORY TO JOHN BECKER.

Last Monday, said the witness, when he had made up mind to tell what he knew he called up Detective Lieutenant John Becker, a brother of the former Lieutenant Charles Becker, and told him his story. His conscience, he said, was hurting him. He let the matter rest for two days, however, then went to Wahle, the gunmen's counsel.

"Why didn't you come to me and tell me the story?" asked the District Attorney.

The witness laughed loudly. "Why," he said, "if I had gone to you and told that I'd never even had a chance to get out of the criminal courts building without being shot. Jack Rose's friends would have put it over on me quick. You can depend upon that."

Under Mr. Whitman's questioning the witness became considerably excited and protested that the District Attorney made him nervous. He stuck to his affidavit, however, about being at the Elks' Club, and "would being at the Elks' Club, and "would make no positive statement as to the exact time. He insisted that he was telling the whole truth.

"Have you ever been a stool pigeon?" inquired Mr. Whitman.

"No, but I have worked for the Pinkertons," said the witness, "but not as a stool pigeon."

The District Attorney asked Dresner why he failed to warn Rosenthal when he heard the threat to Webber and Vallon, "Go put it over on him." The witness said he "didn't want to get into any trouble."

HIS FEAR OF ROSE.

When Mr. Whitman concluded, Wahle, for the gunmen, questioned the witness about his fear of Rose, Webber and Vallon as having caused his long silence. Dresner repeated that he had been afraid that these men or their friends "would have got me if I had told a story involving them."

"You are positive about your identification of the gray murder car and the men in it, are you?" asked Wahle ..."I am absolutely positive." He was excused.

The next witness was William E. Burwell, a professional billiard player of Waterbury, Ct., where he has a long police record.

Dresner, Burwell stuck to the text of his affidavit as made public yesterday, which described how Rose had seen Rosenthal shot down. The witness was shown pictures of the four gunmen, and he swore that the man he saw fire at Rosenthal was not among the four.

Before beginning his cross-examination, District Attorney Whitman instructed five men in the court room to stand up.

"Do you know these men?" he asked.

"I do," said Burwell. "They are Connecticut policemen. I have known them for years and years."

Mr. Whitman then plunged into the witness' police record.

Under questioning the witness admitted that he had been arrested many times and had in especially circles he was known as "St. Louis Kid."

He produced a memorandum book in which he said he had made notes about the murder which had been torn out by a New Haven woman to whom he had loaned it. He went to New Haven last night to get the book, he said.

SAW MAN WITH REVOLVER.

Questioned by counsel after Dresner the witness said he realized he would be asked about his police record, but that he knew he had important evidence and that it was his duty to come forward and presen it. He denied that he used any drug.

Justice Goff asked Burwell for a minute description of the man he saw shoot at Rosenthal. Burwell said the man was about five feet eight inches tall, of medium build, had a dark, soft hat on and was "sharp faced."

The witness did not know whether the man had a high sharp nose, such as Harry Vallon has. He told Justice Goff he did not know any man connected with the case, and he was unable to identify any of the men who had been in the murder car.

He was then excused and Samuel Kalmanson, formerly a clerk in an East Side store was called.

Kalmanson testified that he and a friend were walking through Forty-third street near the scene of the murder when they heard shooting. A man with a smoking revolver bumped into him, he said. Here the witness was shown a photograph of Harry Vallon and he identified it as the man who had held the revolver.

At present the witness said he was employed in Buffalo and lived at No. 165 Seneca street. But city. He had seen many pictures of Vallon in newspapers, he said, with and without a hat, and he repeated that he was positive of his identification. Mr. Whitman's cross-examination failed to shake him.

"PINKY" REO TESTIFIES.

The uncle met with business, reverses and he (Kalmanson) was placed in the care of the Republic. He denied that he had been sent there for any mischief. He was in the Republic three years. In reply to another question by the District Attorney he said the last time he saw Harry Vallon was when the gray murder car dashed from the Metropole.

The next witness was Frederick "Pinky" Reo, who said he was a specimel officer in a Harlem dance hall.

Reo a few days ago signed an affidavit for "Dago Frank" Cirofici. His affidavit was to the effect that one Gene Gordon, "Dago Frank's" sweetheart, was arrested on a charge of loitering on July 18, 1912.

Reo in his affidavit and his testimony on the witness stand said he met the woman as she was being taken into a police station in Harlem, and that she asked him to deliver a note to "Dago Frank." Reo said he took the note to Frank's home and delivered it to him about 2 o'clock in the morning of July 16, about the time that Rosenthal was killed. Reo said he also saw Frank an hour after that when the latter was under arrest in another police station in Harlem.

On cross-examination District Attorney Whitman asked the witness why he had told Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty that he had not delivered the Gordon woman's note to "Dago Frank."

The witness answered that he did not want to get mixed up in the case. Louis Libby, part owner of the murder car, was then called, but was not allowed to testify. Justice Goff also ruled against placing Jacob Rose's Rosenberg, wife of "Lefty Louis," and Mrs. Horowitz, wife of "Gyp the Blood," on the stand. Wahle said he wanted to prove by these women that Coupe, the clerk of the Elks' Club, who was brought back from England by the District Attorney and then placed in the house of detention as a witness but who was never called upon to testify, had told the wives of the two gunmen that although he had witnessed the shooting of Rosenthal he was unable to identify any of the men who had fired at him.

Wahle then read an affidavit from Thomas F. Robinson, a former policeman whois now serving a term of six years in Sing Sing. Robinson was one of the men caught in the Whitman graft hunt in the police department. Robinson's affidavit was in the main a corroboration of the testimony and affidavit of "Pinkey" Reo.

District Attorney Whitman called only two witnesses. The first of these was Harry McCafferty, a policeman who was Robinson's "partner" before the latter was sent to prison.

Vincent Meo, a bartender, alluded in testimony of Clerk Coupe of the Elks' Club, to Vincent, the bartender," was the prosecutor's other witness.

While, in summing up, made as strong plea for the gunmen, and declared he believed the testimony of the witnesses he had put upon the stand. He also told of at least a score of persons who had thought they knew something about the killing of Rosenthal, but who were "proved to be liars by me." He also said it was peculiar that Rose was not called to identify the man who testified he was the person Rose thought was a private detective.

FOUR GUNMEN TO PAY DEATH PENALTY

FOUR EAST SIDE PRODUCTS WHO DIE FOR FAMOUS CRIME

Gunmen Convicted of Killing Herman Rosenthal in Gambling Feud

The four products of the Manhattan East Side who pay the penalty of their crime tomorrow were convicted on November 19, 1912, of firing the shots which killed Herman Rosenthal as he stepped from the Hotel Metropole into Forty-third street, just off Broadway.

Rosenthal had caused the gambling world of the metropolis to quake with terror by his conference with the District Attorney, Charles S. Whitman. His promised confessions were a sequel to a gambling war in which the other underworld interests had tried to drive him from the fat field of the upper Tenderloin. Bomb outrages, slayings and assaults had marked this conflict. Believing he was to be deserted by Charles Becker, police lieutenant in charge of a "strong arm squad" and a partner in the Rosenthal gambling house, the desperate man was now about to expose the whole illegal conspiracy of police and crime.

The gambler was sitting in the Metropole about 2 o'clock in the morning of July 16, 1912. A man entered and asked him to come outside. Lurking in the shadows were "Bridgey" Weber, "Bald Jack" Rose and Harry Vallon. Nearby stood a motorcar with engine running. The policemen supposed to be on station nearby had been lured away.

"MURDER CAR" TRACED.

In the glare of bright lights and within 100 feet of Times square four young men shot Rosenthal to death and leaped into the motor car. A fifth man also entered, it is said by some, and urged the driver onward by holding a revolver to his head and striking him. The car disappeared in the direction of Fifth avenue. But so sure were the murderers Charles Becker would protect them that they left the correct license number on the "murder car," and this was noted by a man who happened to be a witness to the shooting.

The next day New York was in a turmoil. The District Attorney and Becker were both on the scene long before daybreak. There were ugly rumors of police attempts to cover the murderer's trail. It was recalled that Rosenthal was to tell a complete story to Mr. Whitman the very day of his death. The motive of the murder could not have been more clear.

Not for several days were the names of the four put to death today mentioned. The "murder car" was found, and the two owners, one of whom had driven that night, were arrested. A general alarm was sent out for "Jack" Rose, who lay in hiding in a fine Riverside apartment. On July 18 he strolled into police headquarters nonchalantly and was locked up. On July 22 a newspaper published the names of "Lefty Louie" and "Whitey Lewis" as two of the four gunmen.

HARRY VALLON ARRESTED.

Then Sam Paul, head of an organization of gamblers which had held an outing the Sunday previous to the murder; "Bridgey" Weber and Abe Sullivan, who had been with Becker the night of the murder, were locked up.

On July 22 Harry Vallon was taken into custody, and Becker was transferred from his headquarters squad to Bronx desk duty. Only now were "Gyp the Blood" and "Dago Frank" brought into the case as suspected principals.

There began a countrywide search for the four gunmen and Sam Schepps, a hanger-on of the gamblers who had arranged the murder.

"Dago Frank," stupid with opium, was found in Harlem on July 25, the day Alderman Curran demanded a special police investigation.

Public clamor strengthened the case against Rose, Weber and Vallon until trial of Becker's evidence and named Becker as the prime instigator of the crime. Becker was thrown into the Tombs without bail.

Rose also named the four actual murderers of Rosenthal. They were members of "Big Jack" Zelig's East Side gang, an organization which politicians had often found useful. Rose had hired them through Zelig. Rose told of telephoning Becker a few minutes after the murder and saying: "God, flod, this is terrible." "Don't worry, we'll protect you," he declared Becker replied cavilly. Rose also exposed New York's police graft, which he figured at $2,000,000 a year. He said Becker, a civilian in the police department, and two inspectors had died this.

"Whitey" Lewis fled to the Catskills, where he was arrested August 2. "Gyp" and "Lefty" were found hiding in Glendale, Queens Borough. They then said they had gone about the city openly many times.

In the meantime Governor Dix had appointed Justice Goff to try Becker for murder. Sam Schepps had been found at Hot Springs, Ark., and brought back to New York. On October 24 Becker was found guilty. Two days before "Big Jack" Zelig had been murdered in a street car. His death may have been an outcome of the Rosenthal case.

The four gunmen came to trial November 5. They elected to be tried together. Eleven days later the jury, after only a short deliberation, found them guilty.

They were taken to Sing Sing and lodged in the death house, whither Becker had preceded them. All five cases were carefully argued on appeal. The highest court in the State found that Becker was entitled to a new trial, but the four gunmen had been justly convicted.

TREMONT AND MATINEE WAISTS

We are entering the Shirt Waist season. During the months of April, May and June more shirt waists are sold than during any other three months in the year. When a woman wants a waist she should go to the best Waist Shop she knows of. We have been manufacturing shirt waists for 15 years; we still direct to the consumer; we recognize no competition whatever. We show hundreds of exclusive styles not found in any other store. Our waists—with all their individuality, dash and go, being copies of French, English and Vienna styles—cost no more than the ordinary waists found in other stores.

INFANTS DEPARTMENT

Visit all the children's departments in the city, examine all the new spring styles and obtain prices and then come to us. If our garments are not better made, if our styles are not up to the minute, if our prices are not less, don't buy. We want no one's money unless we make a satisfactory return.

INITIAL TUMBLERS

Another carload of the ever popular Initial Tumblers, like cut; made of fine blown glass, including your initial. Notwithstanding the fact that glass manufacturers have increased their prices, we still sell this ever popular tumbler at the rate of an ordinary plain tumbler.

VAIN SEARCH FOR ARNOLD GIRL IN HOME OF FATHER

Parent Denounces as Utterly False Pittsburgh Prosecutor's Statement That the Long Missing Dorothy Is in His House

NEW YORK, April 11.—Aroused by the statement of District Attorney Jackson of Pittsburgh that Miss Dorothy Arnold, the New York heiress, had been at her home for four months, in a weakened mental condition, Francis R. Arnold, her father, today invited ten reporters to search his residence and question his servants.

No trace of Miss Arnold, who disappeared so mysteriously on December 12, 1910, could be found. Mr. Arnold and his son, John, and John S. Keith, the family lawyer, declared most emphatically that the report from Pittsburgh was without foundation.

"Heretofore, I have refused to have the privacy of my home invaded," said Mr. Arnold, "but the statement of District Attorney Jackson is so outrageously cruel that I determined to invite the reporters here to go through my residence from cellar to roof. I want to assure you that no word has come to us from my daughter since the day of her disappearance."

Mrs. Arnold, who has been an invalid for more than a year, has been in Europe, Mr. Arnold said, since last November. She has no knowledge of the whereabouts of her daughter, and every member of the family has been convinced for more than two years that Dorothy Arnold is dead.

Before the reporters left the house, Mr. Arnold called in an old housekeeper who has been employed in the family for thirty-five years.

"How long have you been here, Maggie?" he asked the little gray-haired Irish woman.

"Since Mr. John was two months old," she replied.

"These gentlemen want to ask you some questions, Maggie," Mr. Arnold said to her, "and I want you to answer them honestly and frankly."

"When did you see Miss Dorothy last?" Mr. Arnold asked her.

"Four days before she disappeared, sir," said the servant.

"And she was so happy that day. I shall never forget it, Mr. Arnold, she—"

"Where were you the four days before she disappeared?"

"I was away, sir, for a few days."

"Have you seen my daughter since that time, or has she given reason to believe that Mrs. Arnold or Mr. Arnold or myself have been in communication with Miss Arnold."

"No, sir. I would certainly have told if I had. I have known her ever since she was a tiny baby, Mr. Arnold."

"Has my daughter been in this house since her disappearance?"

"She has not, sir."

"Now, gentlemen," continued the father, "ask this woman any questions you like. She will tell you the truth."

There were no questions.

Mr. Arnold continued:

"I asked you gentlemen to come here today because I wanted to talk with you and try to convince you that I do not know of my daughter's whereabouts. As I have said time and time again, I believe that my daughter is dead. I have promised you that if at any time we hear from my daughter that the newspapers will be notified. Do believe me, and do not credit these irresponsible stories that gain circulation every few months.

"We have received no word from Dorothy. Her disappearance is as much of a mystery to us as it is to you. There would be no reason to keep the fact a secret if our daughter had returned to her home, or if we had information of her whereabouts."

Defends Million Dollar Kid Good Son, Says Rich Mother

GRACE LA RUE, the actress, and Byron Chandler, the "million dollar kid" she is suing for divorce.

Two people who ought to know are speaking up for Byron Chandler, the "million dollar kid" of Manchester, N. H., New York and elsewhere.

One is his aged mother, Mrs. Fannie M. Chandler.

The other is the "M. D. K." Byron himself.

Dispatches from Manchester quote both mother and son in heartfelt statements. Both are in connection with the separation and alimony suit filed in New York by Byron's actress-wife, Grace LaRue.

Byron defends himself from a lively and emphatic feeling that he has been a badly misrepresented young man.

Mrs. Chandler has closed the big Chandler mansion in the North End of Manchester and is living again in the home of her girlhood—when she was Fannie M. Martin.

She is infirm from recent illness, but the very mention of her boy's name and Grace LaRue brought a protest to her lips. For years and years the mother has schooled herself not to talk for publication about Byron, no matter in what sensational events he figured. But yesterday she said impetuously:

"I know my boy better than Grace LaRue does, better than she ever could know him. I know him better than his intimates or the whole world could. I am his mother.

"Byron has been a good son. He loves me."

Next the mother found excuses:

"Byron wasn't brought up just right. We pampered him because he was the favorite Benjamin, my oldest son, was of a different type from Byron. He was reserved as a boy. He remains so, even now.

"My husband, Byron Chandler, was a self-made man. He was born in Bedford, in this State, and rose to the presidency of a national bank through sheer ability. He had two brothers, Henry and John. When the three were seen together people called them the farmer, the banker and the student.

"My husband wanted Byron to become a banker, too. But nothing ever came of it."

The mother paused and sighed, then added:

"All this trouble has borne very heavily upon me and I don't feel that I can stand much more—but I know Byron loves me."

Byron's own defence of himself contains plenty of "punch," as follows:

"Believe me—I didn't know as many chorus girls as does the average college chap who isn't an outright grind. I never hung around stage doors like the fabled 'Johnnies.'

"My father left me a goodly fortune. It was not a million, however. He wasn't cold in his grave before the lies went broadcast about me. I was represented as actually glorying in his death, dancing out of the door of the Amoskeag Bank where the money was, waving the bankbook in the air and shouting 'Now for joy!'

"As a matter of fact, I mourned my father greatly, and my father's money was safely invested in the best kind of securities. I am richer by far today than I was at the time of my father's death.

"I want to be let alone. As to showing Grace La Rue up, I will not need the assistance of the public to do that. When the time comes I'll tell my story.

"I am not a prude nor an angel, yet I don't wish to be regarded longer as a blackguard and vicious eccentric —that's all."

HIDDEN WILL SAYS WIDOW IN HER LOVE SUIT

Mrs. Maud Ford Lanigan's Claim Against Father-in-Law for Alienation.

TELLS OF "JIMMIE'S" PLANS

Mrs. Maud Ford Lanigan of Lawrence and Boston, the "Beauty of the Peninsula District," as she was known in her girlhood days in South Boston, has filed a suit in $50,000 against her father-in-law, James F. Lanigan, Sr., the millionaire ironmaster of Lawrence.

She accuses him of having alienated the affections of her husband, the late "Jimmie" Lanigan, Boston and Lawrence club and sportsman, vice-president of the Arlington Trust Company of Lawrence and brother of Charles Lanigan, the former Harvard baseball captain.

Yesterday Mrs. Lanigan, through her counsel, William R. Scharton, gave out the first detailed statement she has made since her plans to bring suit became known. Mr. Scharton said for his client:

"Before James F. Lanigan, Jr., died he told his wife that he had provided for her against every exigency and that he had made a will leaving all that he possessed to her, besides his life insurance.

"After the funeral Mrs. Lanigan demanded to see the will, but none was found. We believe that the will and insurance papers have been secreted."

"Jimmie" Lanigan, just out of college, eloped with her when his father sought to stop his wooing. After the marriage a reconciliation was effected by "Charlie" Lanigan, "Jimmie's" brother.

LIVED WITH SISTER.

"James Lanigan, Jr., went to live with his father. His wife was left with her sister, Mrs. Jane Macurdy, with whom she is living now at No. 395 Prospect street.

"Time and again the old gentleman prevented Mrs. Lanigan from seeing her husband. Once Mrs. Lanigan sat all day long in the office of the Lanigan mills, believing her husband was there, after being told by someone that he was 'out of town.'

"Lanigan supported his wife and called on her occasionally. Then she went to Boston for a visit. Her husband died while she was away. She was not even notified of his illness.

"She learned of his death through a friend, hastened to Lawrence and almost had to force her way into his father's house to view her husband's body. It was only after she threatened to call in the police that she was permitted to look upon the face of her dead husband.

"For a while after their marriage the Lanigans lived at the Lenox. Many of Boston's leading society people will be summoned to testify."

STATE HALT FOR THE FUNERAL OF EX-GOV. DRAPER

All Departments Cease Activity When Services Are Held at Kings Chapel.

The State will do honor tomorrow to the memory of former Governor Eben Sumner Draper, when funeral services are held for him in Kings Chapel, Boston, and in the Hopedale Memorial Unitarian Church, the magnificent structure which he and his brother George erected in memory of their father and mother.

The body will arrive at the South Station this morning on the Federal express. It is accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Bristow Draper and Eben Draper, Jr., who went South on receipt of the news of their kinsman's illness.

From the station the casket will be carried to the Draper residence on Beacon street where it will rest until Monday. There will be prayers for the family tomorrow at the home.

The Boston services at King's Chapel will be held at noon tomorrow. At that service the State will be represented by a committee of five members of the Legislature. The committee consists of President Coolidge of the Senate, Speaker Cushing of the House, Senator Baxeley of the Milford district and Representatives Carbary and Collins of Milford.

Immediately after the service there the body will be put on a special train and taken to Milford. In Milford and Hopedale business will be at a halt. Every store and factory will close, as will the schools.

MILL MEN TO MEET BODY.

Employes of the Draper Mills at Hopedale, will meet at the Grafton & Upton Railroad depot, Hopedale, on Monday, to receive the body of the former Governor.

Notice to this effect has been posted in the Draper Mills by the officials. It is the intention of the heads of departments to have as many as possible form in line when the body arrives.

The notice reads as follows:

To Draper Company Employes:

It is desired to have as many employes of the company as possible assemble in line under this instruction of their foreman at the Grafton & Upton Railroad depot in Hopedale, Monday, April 13, at 2:30 p. m., for the purpose of forming in line to receive the body of ex-Governor Draper.

Per request,

COMMITTEE OF EMPLOYES.

The services, directed by the Rev. Fred R. Lewis, will begin at 3:15. Every citizen of Milford will attend. The Milford Hospital, Dr. Draper's pet gift to the town, will be represented by Mr. Draper's fellow members of the managing board, including H. D. Bowker, E. Alden Eastman, George F. Ellis, John E. Swift, William H. Draper, Jr., Herbert L. Keith, Dr. George F. Curley, Judge John C. Lynch, George M. Billings and H. H. Lee.

MEMORIAL IN SCHOOLS.

The Milford Board of Trade will be represented by a committee of six, the Rev. Ralph Gilbert, William D. Leahy, Frank P. Dillon, Frank P. Lee, Harold M. Curtis and Thomas F. Flanagan.

In addition, there will be delegations from the Retail Merchants' Association.

Superintendent of Schools A. O. Caswell has announced that next Wednesday morning the schools will hold special commemorative exercises in honor of Mr. Draper.

Sisters of Bride Are Ribbon Bearers

Pretty Wedding Ceremony at Wingate Home in Brookline.

Muriel Wingate, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Wingate, No. 45 Stearns road, Brookline, was married last evening to Lloyd Willis Allen, Yale '05, whose home is in Shirley.

The ushers were F. Harold Daniel, Charles Olcott, Joseph Brier, Harold Kebbon, Lewis Doyle and Dana Somes, all of Boston and college mates of the groom.

Telephone Girls Plan for Parade

MEXICAN ASKS 24 HOURS MORE FOR APOLOGY

Federal Chief at Tampico Wants to Consult His Government on Arrest of Marines.

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—Censorship of all cable and telegraph news was put into effect tonight.

The United States embassy is greatly puzzled by the lack of news from Tampico since the delivery of Admiral Mayo's ultimatum yesterday. Mr. O'Shaughnessy has sent two telegrams asking for news, but has received no reply. It is reported that the rebels have surrounded Cuernavaca and are attacking the town.

VERA CRUZ, April 11.—Rear Admiral Mayo, in a wireless message to Admiral Fletcher, reports that General Sarazoza, the Federal commander, at Tampico, has asked for twenty-four hours time to consult with his government in the matter of the demand by Admiral Mayo for an apology and salute to the United States flag for the arrest of the landing party from the gunboat Dolphin.

This request was granted because of the impaired communication between Tampico and the capital. The general expressed his regrets and said the affair was due to the ignorance of an officer.

Admiral Mayo also reports that 450 refugees have been taken on board the Des Moines for transfer to the battleships, and that the Chester is taking others on board this morning.

The Admiral also asks that a transport with provisions be furnished as soon as possible for the landing of the refugees, otherwise they will be sent to Vera Cruz on the battleship Connecticut.

HUERTA TAKING HIS TIME.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—News reached Washington tonight that Huerta of Mexico would not take up the matter of the apology demanded by Admiral Mayo again until Monday. It is explained here that Mr. O'Shaughnessy has sent word that the period from yesterday, Good Friday, until Monday, is one in which Mexico, from time immemorial, transacts no public business.

It was also learned tonight that in view of this situation at Mexico City the United States naval commanders are not expected to press negotiations relating to the incident.

Further instructions following those sent yesterday calling off the insistence of Admiral Mayo upon an apology from Huerta's soldiers at Tampico, were sent tonight.

Officials are not very hopeful that Huerta will go any further than he has gone in the way of an apology, and they feel certain that he will assume a defiant attitude if General Villaca ,Blanz and De Maure expel General Villa from Torreon.

DEAL WITH DICTATOR.

Officials here are greatly embarrassed over the fact that O'Shaughnessy was obliged to go directly to President Huerta and deal with him officially. The negotiations have reached a pass where the United States is transacting business on the flag incident, not through the Foreign Office of Huerta, but with the dictator himself.

They fear that Huerta will make capital out of this situation. It is assumed here and in Mexico that the acts of the Navy and State Departments relating to the flag incident are directed in the Mexican troubles personally by President Wilson.

HALE'S FATE IN PROGRESSIVES' JURY'S HANDS

Twelve Men to Decide Whether or Not He Is Political Boss of Party.

When the Progressive party trial of Matt Hale, on the heinous charge of being an out and out political boss, halted late yesterday afternoon in Kingsley Hall, many innocent bystanders were wondering if, by any chance, the Progressives are merely putting over some between-seasons publicity.

For four hours the anti-Halers and the pro-Halers exchanged vocabularies and other things. Then the charges made against Hale by the Holbrook town committee, Richard H. MacDonald, chairman, were referred to a jury of twelve and the meeting adjourned for two weeks.

This is the jury which was drawn: Arthur W. Gilnea, Willis A. Foss, William R. Clark, Robert F. Annin, L. H. Wardwell, Joseph E. Wall, Philip W. Carter, Arthur W. Berry, Robert R. Coolidge, William B. Riggs and William M. Shumway.

HE CHALLENGES 35.

MacDonald of Holbrook (carried by Bird with 224 votes to 157 for Gardner, 152 for Walsh and 12 for Foss) made thirty-five challenges of prospective jurors. Hale challenged but one.

The Holbrookites made strenuous objection to trying Hale before the State Committee as a whole, intimating that the "machine" would be the "jury." It was Mr. Hale's own motion, finally, that the jury plan was tried.

Charge No. 1 is that Hale took away the veto power of the advisory council. Mr. Hale's answer is that the State Committee took this action by "unanimous vote."

Holbrook next objects to the designation of Leonard H. Martin to be campaign manager in Norfolk County. Hale avers that MacDonald had been boosted for this place but says he is glad he named Mr. Martin.

DENIAL BY HALE.

The third complaint is that Hale persistently and vigorously opposed the creation of a finance committee to handle the party funds. Hale answers that no such proposition has ever been made, in spite of the fact that any Progressive may bring such a proposal to the attention of the State Committee.

Charges four and five have to do with the editorial, repertorial, proprietary and judicial attitude of the Boston Journal to the Progressive movement in Massachusetts. Mr. Hale, through his counsel, says Mr. Hale's with the Journal, replies to these charges minutely and denies them in toto.

Daniel T. Callahan of Charlestown, quite a little runner for congress, acted as moderator of this unique town meeting and, juding by the comments, gave everybody the well-known Square Deal.

The occasion was enjoyed by one and all.

Alienation Bug Busy in Boston

Everybody's Suin' It for Damages

Harvard Professor Sizes It Up

Growing Independence of Woman Partly to Blame in Foerster's Opinion.

The "Alienation Bug" is abroad.

Many suits at law, alleging alienation of affections, have been filed in Greater Boston this week.

Damages are sought, heavy damages in some cases. Five suits filed in one day name a total of $95,000.

In one case parents accuse a man of alienating the affections of their daughter.

Another case is a "post mortem suit," in which a widow sues her father-in-law on the ground that he came between her and his son.

So many of these suits have been filed that students of sociology are taking notice.

BLAMES INDEPENDENCE.

The question of an "alientation bug" has been raised. Professor R. T. Foerster, of the Harvard Department of Social Ethics was asked about it by the AMERICAN. Professor Foerster thinks that the growing independence of woman is largely responsible, saying:

"Woman's growing independence, her increasing freedom from the drudgery of the home, and her ability to earn her own living, are large factors in the frequency of these suits.

"The question is not concerned so much with morals as it is with certain business aspects of life.

"A promise of marriage is broken. A woman's expectations of both a husband and money are denied in one and the same moment. She seeks the court for redress. She is willing to take the husband. If she cannot get her husband in that way she will take a money equivalent. The damage allowed is based upon the amount which the defendant is worth —the amount that the woman might have benefited by, had she married the man. Palpably she has small hope of getting the man when she starts her suit, though sometimes she would take him if she could get him. Frequently she tells that to the court—to make the case clear to the jury. But we know it is unusual for women to get husbands in this way.

CITES CASE OF CHORUS GIRL.

"Take for instance the suit for breach of promise of the chorus girl. No one believes that such types, who have perhaps enlisted the affections of some youngster, or perhaps an older man of wealth, are seeking to assuage their disappointment except in the amount of money damages that may be allowed them.

"The woman wants a husband. She will take him provided he can be made to become her husband in preference to the damages awarded by a court. But a man seldom marries by being forced to do so.

"Alienation and divorce suits are not alike fundamentally except that both are largely due to woman's increasing independence."

Professor Foerster added that it was plain that the increasing number of these suits would tend to make men more wary in their dealing with girls.

"Men will be likely to show greater circumspection in what they say," he asserted.

Love Suits Filed During Past Week

Love suits that have been filed during the past week:

JOSEPH F. COBB of Melrose demands that Fred R. Slater of Cambridge pay Cobb $50,000 for the loss of a wife's love.

CATHERINE A. DINEEN of Lexington wants $25,000 from A. L. Folger of Springfield for the latter's alleged breach of promise to marry her.

DR. HARRY V. DONSMORE of No. 176 Huntington avenue alleges that Mrs. Blanche C. Martin, a Lasell seminary teacher, alienated his wife's affections. Sues for $10,000.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT P. DANFORTH claim that Frederick W. Derby of Arlington alienated their daughter Persis' affections. They ask $5,000.

MRS. F. L. GWYNN of No. 2 Faulkner street, Dorchester, asks $5,000 of Mrs. John R. Graham of No. 6 Gibson street, alleging the alienation of Mr. Gwynn's affections.

MRS. MAUD FORD LANIGAN of Boston seeks $50,000 from James F. Lanigan, Sr., of Lawrence in a post mortem alienation suit in which she declares that she was not recognized at her husband's funeral.

MURRAY WOULD SEND 'DRUNKS' TO HOSPITALS

Municipal Judge Says They Are Not Criminals; Should Be Treated for Disease.

Drunkards are not criminals and should not be treated as such. They should not be confined in jails and prisons but should be sent to a special hospital and cured. This is the opinion of Judge Michael J. Murray of the City Police Court who one day last week released seventy-five men who were arraigned before him charged with being drunk.

Judge Murray gave the men a lecture and as each answered to his name, spoke a few words of cheer to him, and sent him out of the court. Not a single man who was released has since been arrested and thus far the experiment has been a success.

In an interview with a Sunday AMERICAN reporter Judge Murray gives his views on one of the most important questions from a sociological standpoint, that the courts of the State have to deal with at the present time.

By JUDGE MICHAEL J. MURRAY.

"In Massachusetts drunkenness has from early days been regarded as a crime. Drunkenness is not a crime; it is a disease, brought on by the continual use of intoxicating liquors.

"Persons arrested for drunkenness should not be sent to jails or prisons, they should be taken to a hospital or to an institution created for the special purpose of caring for inebriates, where they may be kept, given proper medical treatment to cure them of the habit of drinking and where their minds and bodies can be rebuilt so that when they are cured they will be able to go out in the world and become law-abiding persons.

"Imprisonment for drunkenness is not only too severe as a penalty upon the drunkard and his family, but is also generally ineffectual as a deterrent or as an agent of reformation. Imprisonment for a week or more will sober the prisoner, but will not usually reform him of his habit. Meanwhile the prisoner may have forfeited his job—his chief source of self respect—and must face a discouraging period of unemployment upon his release from prison. His innocent family often suffer more than he.

"Many intoxicated persons have reached that state through misfortune rather than through wilful disobedience of the law. Men drink usually for sociability or else to remove physical or mental discomfort. The convivial drunkard—who does not ordinarily become intoxicated except on Saturday nights, holidays or celebrations—should be shown the wastefulness and folly of his practice. He should also be linked with friends who are abstinent and with clubs or institutions for recreation in which alcohol is not served.

DYER ATTACKS CURLEY MOVE UPON SCHOOLS

High School Course as a Check Against Criminal Tendencies of Youth.

Dr. F. B. Dyer, superintendent of Boston schools, indirectly scored Mayor Curley, before the members of the Twentieth Century Club, for saying that the grades in the grammar schools should be increased and the high school courses reduced.

Mayor Curley advised that the grades in the grammar schools be increased from eight to nine, and that the high school course be reduced to three years. His reason was that many boys and girls have to get their education entirely from the grammar schools and then go to work.

"What becomes of these children who go from the fifth, sixth and eighth grades of the grammar schools and are obliged to go to work without any training in the high school?" said Mr. Dyer. "Some of them turn out well, but do you know that that criminal class is recruited largely from these boys and girls who are forced out of an education?

"This is the reason why we are asking for continuation schools with forty teachers who will look up these children deprived of an education and ask them to spend four hours a week to make up an incomplete education.

"I ask for the moral support of the business men of Boston, that we may keep the boys and girls in school until sixteen years of age, or let the legislature be given us so that we may have guidance over the youth until this age. These continuation schools will do much to rectify the mistakes made.

"Judge Hayden of Roxbury told me that the criminal career of the boys began before the age of sixteen and that their misdeeds were done between the hours of seven and nine in the evening.

"Much to the credit of the schools of Boston, 70 per cent. of the children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen are in public and private schools. No other city has such a large percentage."

Daniels Approves Great Dry Dock

Boston's Biggest Will Hold Any Battleship Now Afloat.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus, in a letter to the Directors of the Port of Boston, yesterday, put his official approval on the building of the monster dry dock, proposed by the directors, which is to be erected on the State flats in South Boston.

The drydock will be larger than any dry dock in this country and will be capable of holding the largest battleship afloat. Secretary Daniels commends the work of the directors. He says that the site seems to be exceptionally favorable.

Woman Badly Hurt When Porch Breaks

While Mrs. Sarah Wallace was shaking a rug from a second floor piazza on Cross and Bryant street, Mahlen, yesterday, a section of the railing gave away and she fell to the ground. She received a concussion of the brain, fractured right arm, broken collar bone and two fractured ribs. At the Homeopathic hospital her name is on the dangerous list.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Dispatches to the State Department today say the forces of President Bordas of Santo Domingo have defeated the followers of Arias.

The State Department regards Arias and his followers as bandits and smugglers.

Women Laugh at Mrs. Taft as 'Anti'

Suffragists Also Sorry for Reactionary Wife of Former President.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Mrs. William H. Taft's action in becoming a member of the anti-Woman Suffrage Association at New Haven, Ct., was ridiculed by Chicago suffragists today.

"Mrs. Taft's attitude is in keeping with her husband's administration," said Mrs. Charlotte Rhodus, president of the Woman's party of Cook County. "It is like some of the planks o' the Republican platform—mossgrown and antiquated. I am sorry that Mrs. Taft doesn't progress with the rest of the world."

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald Gives Easter 'Chicks'

Also Distributes Lilies from His New Touring Car.

shortly before midnight last night, ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald drove up to police headquarters in his large new touring car. For more than fifteen minutes he was closeted with Inspector Michael Shields who was on duty.

When he entered his machine again Mr. Fitzgerald surprised the police reporters by opening the door and showing them three chickens calmly amusing themselves on the inside. No—No—not that kind, these were Easter chickens of the egg variety, about a week old.

"Really boys, there is nothing to say trip here," he said, "and nothing to the chickens. They are for a poor little boy in Dorchester. I came to see Mr. Shields on a personal matter. I have been so busy that this was the only time I could find to see him," he continued.

Besides the chickens the car was filled with Easter lilies. Mr. Fitzgerald explained that he was distributing them among his friends.

Fur Storage

Our facilities are unsurpassed for the proper care and absolute protection of your furs, rugs and draperies, as ours is the only department store with cold storage fur vaults on the premises.

Your furs, rugs and draperies are not packed in hampers and shipped to suburban storage houses; they are unpacked in our large, airy examination rooms, where they are thoroughly inspected by our fur specialists and then perfectly cleansed by the modern "Blown-Air Process," which removes every particle of dust, moths, etc., without injury to the fabric or garment. Each article is hung in the vaults on a separate hanger, where freezing blasts of cold air are constantly being blown about them. In the Fall, when you wish to take your furs out, they can be had on fifteen minutes' notice, as they never leave our premises.

The charges are 3% of your own valuation, with a minimum charge of $1.00 on large articles and 50c on small.

IS BOSTON CHINESE A JEKYLL OR A HYDE? GOVERNOR WALSH WILL DECIDE TOMORROW

Prisoner Claims He Is Not the Celestial Wanted in Chicago as Slayer of Merchant.

Governor Walsh will decide tomorrow whether the young man confined at the Charles Street Jail is Yee Tee Ho, as the young man says he is, or Harry Eng Hong, as is claimed by the great State of Illinois.

Representing Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, Mr. Henry Jamieson, a Chicago attorney, and Thomas A. Ferriter, a Chicago police inspector, are here to take Harry Eng Hong back to Chicago, to be placed on trial for the murder of Mock Chung, a Chinese grocer, on the night of February 12, a year ago.

The murder was one of the results of a war between the Chinese tongs of Chicago.

"But," pleads the young prisoner of Charles street, "I am not Harry Eng Hong. I am Yee Tee Ho. Every Chinese has two names. Harry Eng Hong is not even my second name. I never heard of him. My other name is Jung Kin."

Also appear many lawyers in the young man's behalf—Thomas J. Barry, Colonel Edward L. Logan and Herbert F. Callahan—and come a score of Chinese, in modern American toggery and with not a pigtail among them, to swear that he is Yee Tee Ho, as he says he is.

The attorneys declare also that the Illinois requisition papers are far from flawless. They raise technical and legal objections to the removal of the prisoner from Massachusetts.

GUARD WITNESS.

For days the matter has been under investigation by the Attorney-General's department. There it has been assigned to Assistant Attorney-General Louis R. Eyges. Mr. Eyges has held several hearings. It is up to him to say whether there are legal defects in the requisition papers. Incidentally, he will give the Governor the benefit of his opinion on the question of identity.

Meanwhile, there is one young Chinaman in Boston who isn't going out of nights, and who will not be seen in Chinatown. This is Mr. Sou Gow.

Sou Gow is a guest at the Quincy House, with Inspector Ferriter and Acting Assistant Attorney-General Jamieson of Chicago.

Sou Gow is the only Chinese witness who has yet come forward to hold up his right hand and swear that the prisoner is Harry Eng Hong. When Sou Gow goes to the State House, he walks carefully between Jamieson and Ferriter. He is taking no chances.

The fugitive from Chicago justice walked into the building at No. 549 Clark street on the night of February 13, 1913, spoke a few words in Chinese to Mock Chung, the grocer—whose back was turned to him, the grocer busy with a bit of carpentry—pulled a pistol and sent five bullets into Mock Chung's back.

Mock Chung was the head of the Hep Sing Tong in Chicago and, as might have been expected, there was a mighty Hep Sing Tong demand for The murderer got away.

CALLS PRISONER "HON."

And then all was silence, and watchful waiting, on the part of the Hep Sing Tong, until two weeks ago Friday, when, as the result of a mysterious tip from Chicago, Inspector Conway of the Boston Police Department—twenty-seven years on duty in and around Chinatown—went to the house at No. 87 Oxford street and asked for Hong.

A white woman came to the door, the white wife of a Chinaman.

"Hong," the Inspector says she called out, "here's an officer come to see you."

The white woman, Catherine Young Wing, says Inspector Conway misunderstood her.

"I never heard of Harry Eng Hong," she says. "The prisoner, known to me as Yee Tee Ho, is my sweetheart. My husband was deported to China eleven years ago.

"What I called out to Yee Tee Ho was not 'Hong,' but 'hon,' the popular United States abbreviation for 'honey.'"

Conway found a cameo ring on the prisoner. Engraved on the inner band was the word "Hong."

Catherine Young Wing explained this, too.

"Before I met Yee Tee Ho," she says, "I had been keeping company with one Harry Hong. I bought this cameo ring at Pearlstein's in Beach street, and had the 'Hong' engraved in it for Barry. We quarrelled and in parting he threw the ring back to me. Without making any alteration in the engraving I presented the ring to Yee Tee Ho on the Chinese New Year's in 1913."

"I WON'T EAT COW."

In an endeavor to establish whether the requisition papers from Chicago are sufficient to warrant extradition, Assistant Attorney-General Eyges has already listened to 200 pages of evidence in the case.

The police warnings sent out from Chicago at the time of the murder say that Harry Eng Hong, twenty-eight, five feet four inches tall and weighing 120 pounds, has a habit of saying "I won't eat cow."

Whether the prisoner who claims to be Yee Tee Ho has ever been heard to say "I won't eat cow" does not yet appear.

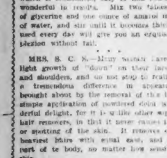
Anna Held's Advice to Beauty Seekers



The formulas given here by Miss Anna Held cover every imaginable factor in the requirements of beauty. These formulas produce unusual results. They are extremely economical—you may mix them at home, and you then obtain an article of unquestioned superiority, at a mere fraction of the high cost of prepared articles which are never so effective.

Miss Held will undertake to answer correspondence by mail but you will likely find below an answer to the very question you have in mind.

MRS. G. R. S.—The trouble with many women is that in their effort to beautify their complexions, they daub their faces with a lotch-potch of almost everything advertised. Now do like a sensible woman and stick to one particular article. You can surely have the skin beauty you want, and in a very short time, too, if you will faithfully use this cream, which is economical, easy to mix yourself, and wonderful in results. Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and the same of ammonia in a pint of water, and stir until it becomes thick. This used every day will give you an exquisite complexion without fail.

MRS. S. C. S.—Many women have a very light growth of "down" on their faces, arms and shoulders, and while this is not serious, it is a tremendous difference in appearance to be sought about by the removal of the hair. A simple application of peroxide will remove this awful delight, for it is unlike other superfluous hair removers, in that it never causes irritation or swelling of the skin. It simply bleaches each fine bearded hair with equal ease, and on any part of the body, no matter how sensitive the skin.

ELEANOR Q.—Steaming is the best to remove wrinkles is very bad for the skin. The modern creams sold in powdered form for sprinkling are extremely useless. If indeed they can be said to be effectual at all. The results of the following formula should be one of very great surprises. Deep wrinkles, to the forehead, about the mouth, the thousands of tiny wrinkles and crows' feet may be made to vanish as though by some magic wand. To a pint of hot water add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, two ounces of rosewater. When cool it will be a satisfying cream. Use liberally.

DOUBTFUL—Even if you do not use any hair treatment at all, it is absolutely necessary for the health of your hair to shampoo it thoroughly every week or so. Most women do not wash their hair often because of the difficulty and the condition of the hair after drying. If you use a teaspoonful of rigid dissolved in half a cup of hot water, and rub it well over, you will be surprised how clean of all scurf your scalp will appear and how easily manageable your hair will be. It dries quickly, rather that rapid process, makes it a real delight.

MRS ANXIOUS—You certainly should not have hair, even at your age, of remarkable fine texture development, so long as you have the famous Vacuum treatment to rely on. You can make up the treatment at home yourself by dissolving thoroughly half a cup of sugar and one ounce of gelfil in a half-cup of hot water. Of this, take two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. This Vacuum method is considered to be the most effective, and is safe to take.

* * *

PHILIPPA—Once those who have actually used the full-weight simple formula can realize its remarkable hair-growing powers. If there are any bald spots still left, it will force them to grow hair no matter how bald the user may be. For women with thin, short, dull-looking hair, it is ideal. It should be rubbed into the scalp thoroughly and used every few days. Mix together one ounce of betanzyline, a half pint of alcohol and half a pint of water, or use one full pint of rum instead of the water and alcohol. It is then ready to use.

Rantoul Contest to Be Resumed in Court

Witnesses Being Summoned in Legal Battle for Children.

Witnesses are being summoned for the next stage of the Rantoul case—the opening hearing in Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge, on Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul's petition for permanent possession and care of her two children, Mabel Lowell, aged nine, and Harriett Charlotte, aged seven.

Mrs. Rantoul, granddaughter of James Russell Lowell, the poet, recently lost her suit for divorce against Edward L. Rantoul. Under a previous temporary decree, which has since expired, Mrs. Rantoul was given the care of the children in Winter, while they were to have permission to pass the Summer with their father at Beverly Farms. Mr. Rantoul has been paying $150 a month to Mrs. Rantoul for their support.

Labor Bureau Big Help to Business

Sears Tells of Work Accomplished by State Organization.

Walter Lincoln Sears, former member of the Common Council and active in establishing the State Free Employment Bureau, told the New England Association of Commercial Engineers at the Revere House last night the history of the work of the bureau. Established twenty years ago, he declared it has inaugurated methods of procedure which have been copied even in Europe.

"Labor distribution," he explained, "is a problem that has taxed the ablest minds of the world for a generation. The efficient distribution of labor is a vital matter, and the public employment office or labor clearing house, is an important factor in the solution of the problem.

"Publicity will accomplish results, and as one means toward that end, I recommend a 'Bulletin of Opportunities' to be issued by the Federal Government, similar to the Weather Bureau Map."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

RARE RABBITS, FAD OF DEXTER, RICH CLUBMAN

IS AN EXPERT NATURALIST

The rearing of long-eared, pink-eyed white rabbits and the study of butterflies, fish and guinea pigs is the novel avocation adopted by a Boston millionaire and clubman, William Endicott Dexter, of No. 391 Marlboro street, to pass leisure hours at his summer home, "The Maples," at Pride's Crossing.

Mr. Dexter is already an authority upon the little Polish rabbit, a 2½-pound species which he has succeeded in marketing at exceedingly high prices per pair. His naturalist farm today is one of the centres of interest on the North Shore. Besides the Polish species, Mr. Dexter has imported and bred very successfully a white English rabbit which, like the Polish stock, has won prizes at many of the large shows throughout the country.

A naturalist at heart, interested in insects and animals, Mr. Dexter's summer home typifies this deep seated interest; in the large aquarium there stocked with different kinds of fish, and his large collection of butterflies, moths and other winged creatures, the gathering of which has occupied many months of his time. The news that a rare butterfly has appeared in the vicinity of Pride's is a signal for the millionaire to start in pursuit, armed with a net and tin box.

"We breed the rabbits for points, just as dogs are bred," he explained yesterday, in speaking of his collections.

"There is, of course, a poor market for the white Polish rabbits. They are sold for pets and for laboratory experimental purposes, principally.

"The English rabbits are white with a black stripe over the head. The Polish stock bring as high as $6 a pair and they weigh about 2½ pounds each, having been bred down from a former weight of about six pounds.

"There is an aquarium at the Maples, and I am interested in my hens and the other fowl raised there—just as a naturalist can be interested in his breeding stock and his collections."

Mr. Dexter is the son of the late William Dexter. He is a Harvard graduate, class of '97, and is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club, the Brookline Country Club and the Harvard Club. He married Miss Mary F. Lindsey.

Carrillo "Bull" Enlivens Canal Trip

Stewards on Fruiter Make Hit on Voyage by Publishing Paper.

Two stewards aboard the United Fruit boat "Carrillo," Thomas G. Jones and Frank Marsh, enlivened the ship's last trip by publishing a paper, "The Bull," entirely written, drawn and printed by themselves, on brown paper, with pen and ink.

There were 1,000 copies printed—two left at Panama, and the rest distributed on the voyage. Jones pictured happenings aboard ship, and reading matter, "news" and "advertisements" poked fun at the fellow passengers, officers and crew.

DEDICATE CHURCH WINDOW.

SPRINGFIELD, April 12.—At the Easter morning service at St. Paul's Universalist Church tomorrow, a beautiful art glass window will be dedicated to the memory of George E. Gilbert and his wife, Ella P. Gilbert.

Substitution and Cut Prices

usually go hand in hand

They comprise the greatest evils that are practised on an unsuspecting public. Do you know why dealers attempt to sell you their own article or something "just as good" in place of what you call for? It's a matter of profit—they make more money on that article regardless of your health. It is not fair to your judgment nor to us as manufacturers who have told you through truthful advertising the immense amount of good has done for others and will do for you.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

How It Is Done!

A retailer advertises Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey (which is made to sell at $1 a bottle and well worth every penny of it) at a cut price, sometimes below cost, to attract trade to his store, and when you ask for Duffy's finds out what you want it for, then tries to sell you some unknown something "just as good." He does not spend his time trying substitution for nothing? Not he! If he sells the substitute he is the one who profits, not you. He makes money on this article and is willing to chance a loss on the genuine hoping to sell you. His clerks are probably getting a bonus for pushing the substitute as well.

The retailer (and there are many of them) who gives you what you ask for without a quibble, is the one who has your interest, as well as his own in mind—he should get your business. You feel comfortable while trading with him.

We do not approve of price cutting—for cut prices, along with substitution, mean destruction—not competition. But—if prices are cut to attract your attention—insist on what you ask for. Get Duffy's and benefit yourself—don't help the dealer who tries to fool you by accepting an unadvertised, and possibly an unworthy product.

Remember—The concern that can advertise a reliable article year in and year out for many years, has something of worth to sell you or they couldn't advertise.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in sealed packages—never in bulk. The Company signature is on the label—the Company name blown in the bottle. Get the Genuine. Sold by most druggists, grocers and dealers at $1.00 a bottle.

PRISON THREAT FOR BIG MEN IN BILLARD DEAL; BOX WITH 3 KEYS STARTLING EVIDENCE

Government Will Indict New Haven Witnesses if They Do Not Answer Questions.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Councilor Folk of the Interstate Commerce Commission announced tonight that he had sent notices to the lawyers for the recalcitrant witnesses who refused to answer any of the questions asked them yesterday concerning the relations of the Billard Company and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, that their clients must return to Washington and be prepared to testify on Thursday, April 15, under penalty of imprisonment if they refuse.

The persons who are affected by this latest move of Counsellor Folk are:

Samuel Hemingway, president of the Second National Bank of New Haven.

H. V. Whipple, president of the Merchants' National Bank of New Haven, and believed to be a stockholder of the Billard Company.

E. E. Field of New Haven believed to be the treasurer of the Billard Company.

Charles S. Mellen and John Billard are not included, as they were not given an opportunity to refuse to testify yesterday.

If the witnesses persist in their attitude, indictments in the District Courts here will follow immediately.

MAY BE IMPRISONED.

Any person who shall neglect or decline to attend and testify or to answer any lawful inquiry or to produce books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements and documents, if in his power to do so in obedience to the subpoena or lawful requirements of the commission, shall be guilty of an offence and, upon conviction thereof, by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or more than five thousand dollars or by imprisonment of not more than a year, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Monday morning the Interstate Commerce Commission will present to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia a petition asking for a writ of mandamus compelling the witnesses who yesterday refused to answer questions to appear in this jurisdiction and tell all they knew.

Even in the event that the writ is not issued by the court, the Interstate Commerce Commission will not be checked, according to those in the latest councils. It is asserted there is already ample evidence at hand showing manipulation of the millions that disappeared in thin air.

BIG MASS OF EVIDENCE.

As the result of a special investigation, conducted by the Department of Justice into the financial operations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, there has been accumulated in the department a wealth of material that can be used against those concerned in the railroad's scandal. This material has been placed at the disposal of the commission.

This information, coupled with that already secured by the commission in its opening investigations, it is declared, points unerringly to the men who looted the railroad's funds and the methods used.

One of the most damaging pieces of evidence brought against the railroad officials and those of the Billard company, is the secret manipulation of a second treasurer of the Billard Company.

Charles S. Mellen and John Billard are not included, as they were not given an opportunity to refuse to testify yesterday.

If the witnesses persist in their attitude, indictments in the District Courts here will follow immediately.

MAY BE IMPRISONED.

Any person who shall neglect or decline to attend and testify or to answer any lawful inquiry or to produce books, papers, tariffs, contracts, agreements and documents, if in his power to do so in obedience to the subpoena or lawful requirements of the commission, shall be guilty of an offence and, upon conviction thereof, by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or more than five thousand dollars or by imprisonment of not more than a year, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Monday morning the Interstate Commerce Commission will present to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia a petition asking for a writ of mandamus compelling the witnesses who yesterday refused to answer questions to appear in this jurisdiction and tell all they knew.

Even in the event that the writ is not issued by the court, the Interstate Commerce Commission will not be checked, according to those in the latest councils. It is asserted there is already ample evidence at hand showing manipulation of the millions that disappeared in thin air.

BIG MASS OF EVIDENCE.

As the result of a special investigation, conducted by the Department of Justice into the financial operations of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, there has been accumulated in the department a wealth of material that can be used against those concerned in the railroad's scandal. This material has been placed at the disposal of the commission.

This information, coupled with that already secured by the commission in its opening investigations, it is declared, points unerringly to the men who looted the railroad's funds and the methods used.

One of the most damaging pieces of evidence brought against the railroad officials and those of the Billard company, is the secret manipulation of a second treasurer of the Billard Company. In this were stored all the papers and other details of negotiations dealing with many illegal transactions. The strong box belonged to the Billard company and was kept in the great vault of the New Haven system. There were three keys to the box, which could not be opened unless the three were simultaneously used. The major key, it is asserted, was in the possession of John L. Billard. The key in the right was held by Samuel Morehouse, and the left "key was operated by Samuel Hemingway.

"The mere fact that there were three keys to this box, shows that there was something crooked," said an official of the Interstate Commerce Commission. "The officials of the New Haven and those of the Billard Company could not trust one another, it would seem. But as secretly as they manipulated their scheme and with all the cunning with which they covered their tracks, the proof is coming out."

MAY SUMMON CLERKS.

The commission knows all about a series of coupon-clipping contests that took place when the new bill was opened to pay interest on dubious promissory notes of the Billard Company.

In these clipping expeditions the services of many clerks were often required. The names of these clerks are known and several of them may be asked to take the stand at the next hearing and testify against their employers.

The Black List

These are the little Presidential parasites and patronage brokers who voted to abandon the country's rights for what they thought was their personal advantage.

Let the voters remember them on election day and show them that it is not advantageous to betray the nation and the people who have trusted them.

Turn the Traitors Out

THEORISTS WILL DEFEND TOLL REPEAL

Even Friends of Surrender Amazed by Character of Witnesses Called.

SOME NEW COMPLICATIONS

WASHINGTON, April 11. — Ten more persons prominent in public life were added to the list of witnesses who will appear before the Senate Committee on oceanic canals to discuss the pending bill for the repeal of the free-tolls exemption clause in the Panama Canal act.

The list includes Oscar S. Straus of New York, former Secretary of Commerce; Joseph H. Choate of New York, former ambassador to England; Henry White of Washington, D. C.; William Reed of Chicago, H. G. Herget, president of the Manufacturers' Association of Chicago; Horace White of New York, Dr. Benjamin I. Wheeler of Berkeley, Cal.; Frederick L. Judson of St. Louis, Frederick W. Lehman, former Solicitor of the Department of Justice of Scotland, and George L. Record of Jersey City, Progressive party leader.

This list was submitted by the friends of repeal and the invitations were sent to the men named today. A date for their appearance before the committee has not been fixed. Those from distant points will be accommodated as soon as they arrive in Washington, while word will be sent at short notice to those who can report in Washington, without inconvenience.

NEW COMPLICATIONS.

Advocates of repeal, who glanced at this list today were puzzled. They have inquired what light the proposed witnesses can throw on the merits of the toll controversy. There is no disposition on the part of the advocates of repeal to call men before the committee who can give first hand information about the effect of the repeal on commercial shipments. This information, they say, should come not from theorists but from business men, whose interests are at stake and will confine their statements to cold facts and not indulge in theory.

The injection of the proposed treaty with Colombia at this time has complicated the situation in which the administration finds itself. It do not understand how the administration can reconcile its present position on tolls with its provision in the proposed treaty with Colombia," said Senator Jones today. "The Great British nation should give one hand consent to the exemption of a foreign nation of the payment of tolls and then insist that we, who built the canal, shall have no right of exemption and that we should accept both propositions is a puzzle to me.

"Other South American republics can be expected to protest vigorously against a treaty that gives one South American country advantages which are denied to the others."

OBJECT TO INDEMNITY.

Senator Poindexter will deliver a speech in Indianapolis next week, in which he will deal with the tolls question and especially the proposal to indemnify Colombia for acts done under the direction of Senator Poindexter's political chieftain, Theodore Roosevelt.

The Roosevelt adherents in the Senate generally take the position that the payment of a single dollar to Colombia by way of indemnity will be quite as objectionable as the payment of the large sum of $25,000,000 proposed in the treaty.

Hearings on the repeal bills will be resumed next Monday, when Commissioner of Navigation Chamberlain and S. S. Huebner, the marine traffic expert, employed by the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries during the investigating of shipping pools, will be examined.

MRS. SANBORN'S "MOVIES" STIR UP WINCHESTER

Mothers' Association Resists Effort to Show Educational Films.

APPEALS TO THE SELECTMEN

Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, millionaire philanthropist, has offered to equip and maintain a motion picture theatre in Winchester, but members of the Mothers' Association, school officials and others strenuously oppose her gift.

To the remonstrants it doesn't make any difference that Mrs. Sanborn is the first woman in the country to make such an offer, or that she insists that the theatre then go to Boston and adjoining towns. It was pointed out also that there was no desire for profit and that Mrs. Sanborn would meet all bills.

Superintendent of Schools S. F. Herron favored Mrs. Sanborn's plan. He said children learned faster from what they saw than from what they heard or read.

Her husband, N. M. Nichols, truant officer and custodian of the school building, denounced picture shows. He said they filled the children's minds with vicious thoughts, as was demonstrated by a Winchester boy who started to shoot up his home. He said if the people knew what wickedness came from picture shows they wouldn't want one in Winchester. He said it made his duties harder.

No Punch Bowl for Navy; Pickle Dish!

ALBANY, April 11. — Governor Glynn, Lieutenant-Governor Wagner and Speaker Sweet are a committee created by the Legislature to purchase a silver service for the battleship New York, $10,000 having been provided for the gift.

"I suppose," suggested a newspaper man to Governor Glynn, "that in view of Secretary Daniels' order prohibiting the wine mess in the navy a grape juice bottle will be substituted for the punch bowl?"

"Well," remarked the Governor, smiling, "I haven't talked with Wag or Sweet, but I should think a pickle dish would be more appropriate."

HARRY K. THAW, WHO GROWS FAT AS HE AWAITS FREEDOM

New Hampshire's distinguished resident hopes to get decision on habeas corpus appeal from the court this week.

THAW GROWS FAT WAITING FREEDOM

CONCORD, N. H., April 11.—Decisions by Judge Aldrich of the United States District Court on Harry Thaw's habeas corpus and bail petitions are expected early in the week. While waiting for the decision Thaw is getting fat.

Judge Aldrich's next session begins April 28, two weeks from Tuesday. It is reported that he will forward his decision to Clerk Hodgman in good time to reach the city by that date.

Whether the habeas corpus petition is denied or granted, Thaw will immediately appeal, and the question of bail will still be pertinent.

If bail is granted Thaw will be able to travel where he pleases, but if refused he will have to continue in the custody of Sheriff Nathan Drew and Special Officer Clark D. Stevens.

In an effort to keep down his increasing flesh, Thaw takes long walks.

Political interest is injected into Thaw's affairs since Sheriff Drew has been boomed as a candidate for Republican nomination for Governor.

The 17th of this month will mark the seventh month of Thaw's residence at the Eagle Hotel in Concord.

WOMAN 'ROASTS' POLICE STATION

WORCESTER, April 11. — The Worcester police station was "roasted to a frazzle" this afternoon by Miss Emma R. Goodwin, who "covered" headquarters for the day.

The Worcester Women's Club issued the Worcester Gazette today, taking the assignments usually given to the regular staff.

"Headquarters" fell to Miss Goodwin. News was a big dull. The city court developed only a few drunks. The only accident case was an attempted suicide.

In her eager scratching for news Miss Goodwin asked Chief George F. Hill to show her the station. The Chief, who has been trying ever since he became chief, to get a new station, joyously ushered her all over the place, not skipping a thing.

Miss Goodwin went back to the Gazette office brimful of news about the "disgraceful" condition of the station building. She dashed off such phrases as:

"Small, dark, unventilated and inadequate offices."

"Wretched cells."

"Fuel guilty if I put a dog in such a wretched kennel."

"Tortures the air."

"Disgrace to the city."

Miss Goodwin added a few pleasant words about "courteous officers of the law, who faithfully perform their duty," and then signed her name, and the club woman who was acting as city editor ran it in full.

Chief Hill says: "Absolutely true!"

Wood and Speaker Home.

Joe Wood, the Red Sox pitcher, Mrs. Wood, and "Tris" Speaker, the $15,000 beauty, have arrived here and have taken quarters at Putnam's Hotel. Heine Wagner is also here, having arrived Thursday.

SAYS SULPHUR IS SURE TO RELIEVE ITCHING ECZEMA

Get an Ounce of Bold-Sulphur Cream and Heal Skin Eruptions Right Up.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs or body, when accompanied by itching, is usually due to rank and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little Bold-sulphur cream, said a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation, and soothes and heals the Eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has acquired a secure position for itself in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its gratifying healing properties. No thing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure, it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away, and it is used years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

Those troubled should obtain at any pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant, and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very gratifying.

This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

John A. Curtin Will Run for Congress

Brookline Representative to Head Republican Ticket in the 13th.

Representative John A. Curtin of Brookline will be the Republican candidate for Congress in the Thirteenth District against Congressman John J. Mitchell of Marlboro next Fall.

This statement was made flat-footedly yesterday by Republicans of prominence in the party.

The Curtin talk follows the suggestion that former Congressman Sam Powers of Newton might be induced to make the run. Mr. Powers is counsel for the telephone and the shoe machinery interests. His comeback campaign appears to have blown up at the quarter mark.

Major Curtin is an attorney, a native of Boston, forty-four years old, and a graduate of the University of Berlin.

Japanese Line Coming to Boston

TOKIO, April 11.—A lively competition has been going on between Japanese steamship companies which hope to get a government subsidy for a steamship line through the Panama Canal to the eastern coast of the United States, with terminus at Boston. At the present it looks as if the Nippon Yusen Kaisha would be elected, and that the company will be accorded a subsidy of $1,600,000.

Milk Driver Beaten; Two Arrests Made

Henry A. Stone, thirty-three, of No. 19 Pearl terrace, Cambridge, and Morris Miller, twenty-two, of No. 22 Pearl terrace, were arrested last night, charged with assault and battery on Louis Digroli, a driver of a milk wagon, belonging to the H. P. Hood Milk Company. The alleged assault took place in front of No. 58 Hemenway street, Back Bay, Saturday morning. Digroli was found in a semi-conscious condition by the police.

Solons to Cheer Everett Orator

Anticipate Lecture on Quo Vadis by Silver-Tongued Lad of the House.

Legislators and others, who have been wondering "what's become of 'Billy' Weeks," learned the answer yesterday, when they were invited to hear the Everett orator talk on "Quo Vadis" one week from tomorrow in Tremont Temple.

For five long years Weeks was the "boy orator" of the House of Representatives. There has been no better voice in the House since his time, competent critics have said that there were few better ones before him.

Mr. Weeks is an attorney, still on the sunny side of forty. His talk in Tremont Temple will accompany moving pictures. Many members of the present Legislature are going down to hear Weeks what he has been coming to him for centuries.

Lift Injunction on Greenacre Trustees

Chairman Alfred E. Lunt, of the New Hampshire Fellowship trustees, announced yesterday that the Maine Supreme Court had lifted the injunction against the trustees granted in connection with an equity suit brought by Dr. Filmore Moore, a close friend of Miss Sarah J. Farmer, the original founder of the Fellowship.

SUFFRAGIST FIGHTS 3 BIG POLICEMEN

Tiny English Militant Creates Commotion in London Police Court.

LONDON, April 11.—A diminutive suffragette with the soul of an Amazon, was arraigned in Bow street police court today charged with smashing ten cases of Asiatic curiosities in the British Museum. She created such a commotion that her case had to be adjourned.

The girl gave the name of May Steward and her age as 27. When led into court by a burly policeman she had to raise herself on her tip toes to peer over the rail of the prisoner's dock. As soon as the charge was read the trouble began.

HURLS A MISSILE.

Miss Steward emitted an ear piercing shriek and before a warden could to quiet her picked up a bundle of legal papers and hurled it at the magistrate. The missile struck the public solicitor on the forehead causing him to stagger.

"You must listen to me and give me justice," cried the prisoner. It required the combined efforts of three policemen to overpower her and lead her back to her cell.

In the afternoon she was again arraigned and held for trial.

Tumultuous scenes also marked the second hearing this afternoon. As soon as Miss Steward was placed in the dock she began struggling and screaming. She was surrounded by six stalwart policemen, and although the could not be seen, her protests echoed through the courtroom.

"I don't recognize these proceedings as legal and I won't answer any questions," cried the girl.

This was the signal for a sympathizing suffragette to lift up her voice in protest. The latter was immediately ejected. The curator of the museum testified that the damage to the museum cases was about $140.

BREAK UP MEETINGS.

BRADFORD, England April 11.—Militant suffragettes stormed the meeting place of the delegates to the annual conference of the Independent Labor party today and broke up the session. Shouting "Votes for women" they repeatedly interrupted Keir Hardie, the famous labor leader, who presided, and he was compelled to abandon his efforts to deliver his address.

BELFAST, April 11.—A militant suffragette who refused to give her name was today sentenced to two months' imprisonment for smashing windows in the headquarters of the Ulster provisional government (the organization of Anti-Home Rule Orangemen). It is believed she was sent from London to harass the Ulsterites.

Waltham Buys Site for Public Library

The city of Waltham has purchased for $17,500 the property now occupied by the Central House. A modern library will be built on the site of the hotel with a fund left the city by the late Francis Buttrick. The original bequest and accrued interest now amounts to $120,000. The city will pay for the site out of the public treasury.

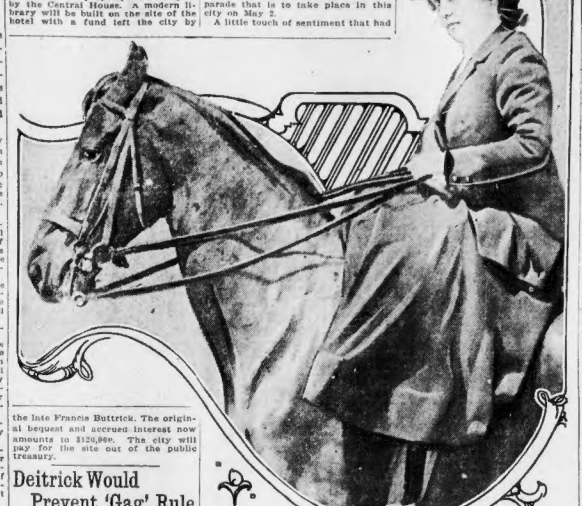
Mrs. Curtis Picks Charger "War" Steed for Suffragis

MRS. THOS P. CURTIS



"General Phil," a handsome imported Irish charger, that is as near like the animal that carried General Sheridan on his famous ride at the battle of Winchester, as could be secured after a long search, is to have the place of honor as far as horses are concerned, in the big suffrage parade that is to take place in this city on May 2.

A little touch of sentiment that had its first seed sown upwards of two score years ago, when the great Civil War here toddled upon his knee the woman who is to be the chief marshal of the parade, was responsible for the naming of the horse and his selection to lead the parade.

The woman in question is Mrs. Thomas F. Curtis of Nahant. Mrs. Curtis' father, the late General M. P. Small, was on General Sheridan's staff both during and after the Civil War.

As a child, hardly more than just able to walk, Mrs. Curtis climbed upon General Sheridan's knee and listened to fairy stories that he liked to tell her. From others she learned of his famous ride. In response to her pleadings, she says, the old General would take her to a great barn stall in which an old charger was spending his last years on earth and point him out as his great war steed. In consequence of this, Sheridan became Mrs. Curtis' war hero while the old charger became, in her opinion, the ideal steed for a great military commander to ride.

SEVEN IN PERIL AS SLOOP HITS ROCKS IN GALE

Two Women and Three Children Taken Off the Seabright With Difficulty.

Two women and three children, one a five months old infant, barely escaped death when the 25-foot sloop Seabright, owned by Captain G. B. Thomas of Revere struck the rocks on Great Brewster Island off Point Allerton during the stiff southwest "blow" yesterday afternoon.

Captain Thomas accompanied by his wife and little ones, a brother, E. F. Thomas and the latter's wife, were bound from Cohasset to Quincy, where the two families planned to spend the Summer.

The life saving crew at the Stony Beach Station, seeing the plight of the sloop were preparing to rush to its assistance, but before they could reach the vessel the sloop drove ashore on the spit between Buz Light and Great Brewster, floated and crashed upon the rocks of the island.

With the surf pursuing them the two men with difficulty carried the children and the women to safety. A fisherman opened up his hut, built a fire and fed the castaways.

Captain Thomas told the life savers he would remain beside his vessel until she could be gotten off or went to pieces.

"She is worth $250," he said, "which represents every dollar I have in the world."

An attempt will be made to float the sloop today, but she is probably damaged beyond repair.

King Alfonso Would Play Polo, But ---

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—King Alfonso of Spain personally will select the team which will represent Spain at the international polo tournament in San Francisco for which the Panama-Pacific Exposition has appropriated $100,000. Were, it possible for the monarch to overcome probable objections of his cabinet based on the dangers of assassination, he would be a member of the team.

British Poloists Already Selected

LONDON, April 11.—Although it is a bit early for speculation regarding the make-up of the polo team for the international matches, a probable combination has already been pieced from among the Englishmen now at practice in Madrid. This team is composed of Captain E. D. Tomkinson as No. 1, Major F. W. Barrett as No. 2, Captain Vivian Loc.-ett as No. 3 and Captain C. F. Hunet as back.

PROF. JAGGER FINDS CAUSE OF ERUPTION

Technology Scientist Investigates Burning Mass of 1832 Degrees in Japan.

That the presence of water in liquid volcanic lava, even when the burning mass registers as high as 1832 degrees Farenheit, is one of the causes of the great eruptions that frequently endanger the lives of thousands of persons around Sakura on a Southern Japanese Island is the discovery reported back to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by Professor Thomas A. Jagger, the world-famed geologist and volcano expert from Japan.

Professor Jagger's dispatches to his colleges at home have roused great interest in the work that he is doing upon the still warm surface of the erupted territory.

When the news of the action of the baleful and evasive Japanese crater reached the world in January Professor Jagger was then at Hawaii in charge of the Technology station there for measuring and observing seismic disturbances. Within about two weeks he was in Japanese territory and had begun to string a wire cable 1,000 feet across the throbbing crater.

Beneath this wire was the liquid mass of still molten burning matter. By means of electrically sensitized thermo instruments run upon a pulley which played along the wire and could be let down into the lava the professor found that the temperatures of this liquid registered as high as 1,000 degrees centigrade, which is 1,832 degrees Farenheit. With another appliance running along the cable he caught and analyzed the simmering gases escaping from the lava and found that these gases is spite of their high temperature contained water in certain forms.

Professor Jagger has reported the probable loss of only twenty-five people, due to the overflow of lava in the volcanic district which has a population of 10,000.

The city of Kago Shima, he declared, was prevented from destruction only because of the protecting banks of old lava which had flowed around the town at some earlier period. These dykes kept the new streams of the deadly metal out of the city. Of the volcano itself he writes:

Sakura has two craters, northwest and southeast respectively; the southeast one is on the side remote from Kago Shima, being by reason of its hot salfataras the one most probably in action in the present eruption. There is a line of important active volcanoes extending north from Sakura into Kyushu.

Since his early arrival at the eruption, even before the eruption had stopped, the noted volcanic expert has been facetiously called by his learned rivals the great American Johnny-on-the-spot volcano explorer.

Shaw Witnesses His "Pygmalion"

With Him in Box Is Cornwallis-West, Whose Bride Is Leading Lady.

LONDON, April 11.—George Bernard Shaw tonight sat in a box at His Majesty's Theatre and witnessed the first production of his new play, "Pygmalion." With him was George Cornwallis-West, who has the good fortune of having been married to two most brilliant women.

While the audience was delighted with Mrs. Patrick Campbell's superb acting, the two men appeared to be utterly miserable. Mr. West suffered doubtless on account of his wife, Mrs. Campbell, whom, rumor has it, he wishes to retire from the stage.

Tremendous interest had been aroused by the fact that Mrs. Campbell, the newly-wed, has to use a very haughty word, "bloody," in her character as Eliza Doolittle, a Covent Garden flower girl.

Since John Quit Drinking

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman,
In all this little town,
And my merry laugh and singing,
Takes the place of sigh and frown.
For JOHN'S NOT DRINKING
And in the home it means
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I, well, don't know exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN REMEDY,
As my sly call could be—
And I took it in John's supper
And I put it to the test.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothed kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
And cried some, too, I guess,
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute,
He was being cured of drink,
And sent he's as well as any man,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John to quit s-drinking"
I can't tell all times enough;
And he would tear me a limb
For what I would be doing
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the rest of all—
Thru GOLDEN REMEDY.

KEARNS, CURLEY NOMINEE, IN FIRM FLAYED BY FINANCE BOARD FOR BIDS COLLUSION

Man Named for School House Commission Lead ing Factor in Famous Metal Company.

This Mr. William F. Kearns of Dorchester, whom Curley has named to the Civil Service Commission as the Curley choice for chairman of the Schoolhouse Commission.

Folks on the outer edge of Boston politics have known for a long time that Mr. Kearns is one of Mr. Curley's best little pals.

The same people were asking yesterday if, by any chance, "William F." might be the same Kearns whose Eastern Expanded Metal Company came in for a castigation a few years ago at the hands of John A. Sullivan's the Schoolhouse Commission——

And they wondered if the Civil Service Commission, which has been eating out of Curley's hand up to date, will give the Kearns nomination the close scrutiny it appears to demand.

For, be it known, the Schoolhouse Commission spends millions upon millions of city money.

Taking no thought of the bills for repairs and incidental expenses—considerable items in themselves—this Schoolhouse Commission, to the head of which Mr. Curley would put his friend Kearns, spent nearly $1,000,000 in the year 1909-'10, nearly $1,000,000 in 1910-'11, about $1,300,000 in 1911-'12, and nearly $1,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

DIRECTOR IN COMPANY.

In these days of sharp practice in the expenditure of the people's money, the man at the head of the Boston Schoolhouse Commission should be a man without blemish.

And, once more, who is William F. Kearns?

A "certificate of condition," filed at the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in the State House on February 3, 1903, by the Eastern Expanded Metal Company, showed that William F. Kearns was a stockholder and director.

At that time, indeed, William F. Kearns was known to be the manager and active representative of the Eastern Expanded Metal Company.

In 1907 the Directory of Directors reported William F. Kearns to be a director and the general manager of the Eastern Expanded Metal Company, with offices at No. 161 Devonshire street.

Of what particular interest is the Eastern Expanded Metal Company at this time?

Its interest lies in the fact, that the Eastern Expanded Metal Company —the same being Mr. Kearns—was found by the alert Finance Commission to have had a very malodorous relation to the city of Boston.

You may find the story on page 254 of Volume 1 of the reports of the Finance Commission, told in interesting and significant language under the caption "Combination of Fireproofing Concerns."

The two concerns whose transactions with the city have been investigated are the Eastern Expanded Metal Company and the Roebling Construction Company, corporations doing an extensive business in this city.

These companies combined for the purpose of parceling out the work. Contract for contract was generally conceded, although in some cases money was paid as the price of abstaining from competition. This resulted in high prices to the customer, and exactions were thus obtained from all sorts and conditions of men and corporations.

Even charities secured no exemption, and the prices obtained from a hospital, a home for crippled children and the city of Boston were recorded in one check, which represented the price of collusion on these jobs. The two companies arranged to parcel out the work on many schoolhouses, the Roebling Company taking some, while the Eastern Expanded Metal Company secured the rest.

Both concerns, however, by keeping up the appearance of an active and real competition with the attendant circumstances of figuring and bidding, gave the city officials to understand that there was no collusion.

BONUS TO RIVAL BIDDER.

The methods adopted are illustrated by the case of the Emerson School in East Boston, for the erection of which bids were invited in January, 1902. The fireproofing was figured by the Eastern Expanded Metal Company at $5,375. To this sum $500 was added for the Roebling Company, and a bid submitted to the city of $5,875. The Roebling Company agreed to bid $5986, and did so. The work was then awarded by the general contractor to the concern which was apparently the lower bidder, the Eastern Expanded Metal Company, for $5,875. This sum was paid by the city to the general contractor and by him to the Eastern Expanded Metal Company, and at the conclusion of the work this company paid the Roebling Construction Company the $500 agreed on.

The Civil Service Commission is yet to act on the Kearns nomination. It may be that the commissioners have never heard of Mr. Kearns in connection with the Eastern Expanded Metal Company.

It is unbelievable that the commission is without a full set of Fin. Com. reports. In any event, the AMERICAN is glad to submit to the C. S. C. all the information here set forth.

Stories have been circulated in Boston to the effect that one of the members of the Civil Service Board may shortly be invited to a lucrative position in the service of the city, quite as Mr. Curley coaxed the head of the Fin. Com. from that position to a $9,000 berth as Corporation Counsel.

Those citizens who estimate Mr. Curley as a calculating, cold-blooded gentleman, who long ago put politics as a business, and who have, therefore, been amazed to find him apparently flirting with the alleged Good Government crowd, are almost certain that their suspicions are not ill-founded.

These watchful and waiting critics of the administration at City Hall point out that, here lately, Councilor John A. Coulthurst called attention to a proposed contract between the city and the Electric Lighting Company, for illuminating the streets of Boston.

Mayor Curley gave his august approval to this contract under circumstances indicating—to some—that he could hardly have given the matter that careful attention which his rage for economy, if genuine, would have compelled him to do.

Then there was the incident of the gas contract.

Mayor Curley favored giving the Gas Lighting Company a contract for part of the street lighting, in spite of the fact that the Finance Commission years ago found that the city could purchase its own lamps and get three times the light for less money.

The citizens referred to say they do not see much economy in these proposals of Mayor Curley.

FAVORITE ECONOMIES.

They declare that when Mr. Curley economizes he does so gladly and enthusiastically at the expense of:

Policemen.
Firemen.
Clerks in City Hall.
Matrons at $6 a week.
Girl pianists in the Gyms.
Public playgrounds.
The Aquarium.
The Zoological Garden.
Hospitals.
Public concerts.
The poor department, etc., etc.

While Mayor Curley apparently is not greatly burdened by the "economy thought" when that economy is to be at the expense of the Electric Light Company or the Gas Lighting Company.

There will be another chapter or chapters to this story when the Civil Service Commission has acted as to William F. Kearns.

The Schoolhouse Commission will deal with architects and contractors.

Former Representative Francis L. Daly of Ward 17, for instance, a sidepartner of the Mayor, is in the plumbing supplies business. Mr. Daly handles lots of things that go to the equipment of a modern schoolhouse.

City Hall hasn't been talking economy so much of late.

City Hall is settling down to business.

And about now is a very good time to be watching the real James M. Curley.

FUNERAL OF W. J. HIGGINS.

The funeral of William J. Higgins, of South Boston, was held yesterday at his late home, No. 855 East Broadway, City Point, followed by services at St. Eulalia's Church, conducted by the Rev. Fr. Mortimer E. Twomey.

MANAGER OF FIRM SCORED BY FIN. COM. UNDER SULLIVAN

William F. Kearns, whose nomination by Curley is now before the Civil Service Commission.

GIRL'S CHARGE OF 'INSOLENCE' UP TO BOARD

Miss Alice O'Connor, Lawrence Teacher, Accuses Supt. Goodhue of Salem.

The case of Frank W. Goodhue of Salem, salaried Superintendent of the Asuit Poor, is up to the members of the State Board of Charity.

Complaint of the State official who is charged by Miss Alice O'Connor, a teacher in the public schools of Lawrence, with insolence.

"A recommendation from a Lawrence politician," Miss O'Connor alleged Goodhue said to her, "is no good. All you have in Lawrence is cheap politics!"

Mayor Scanlon of Lawrence, Senator James R. Tetler of Methuen, Representatives Butler, Cuddy and Carr and Former-Speaker John N. Cole are the leaders in a Lawrence movement to compel an apology or insist upon Goodhue's removal.

Men acquainted with the make-up of the State Board of Charity declare that its members will never approve of the sort of treatment that Miss O'Connor is alleged to have experienced.

On the State Board are Leontine Lincoln of Fall River, chairman; Abraham C. Ratshesky, Thomas Downey, David F. Tilley, Frances G. Curtis and Jeffrey R. Brackett of Boston; Ada Eliot Sheffield of Cambridge, Charles R. Johnson of Worcester and Charles H. Adams of Melrose.

Miss O'Conner had been engaged in social settlement work at Lawrence as a member of the League of Catholic Women. Fascinated with the work she determined to seek a place in the service of the State. She took an examination, passing with a high average, six points above her nearest competitor. Her knowledge of social work, pauper laws and settlement regulations is said to be extremely broad.

Duly notified that her mark was the highest, she was asked by the Civil Service Board to appear forthwith before Goodhue.

Goodhue, according to the young woman, began a tirade the moment she appeared before him.

The officials of Lawrence say the vacancy is being "temporarily" filled by a Miss Lee of Salem, a neighbor and, they add, distant relative of Goodhue.

Offers $500,000 for Show Window Baby

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Baby Frank, three years old, one of the living exhibits of the Florence Crittenden home, who has won many friends by his appearance in a show window exhibit, today brought an offer of $500,000 for the home on condition he be given to the donor.

Police Dampen Fire of I. W. W. Crowds

Berkman Denounces Commissioner Woods' Men as "Hirelings of Czar."

NEW YORK, April 11.—While fifty policemen in plain clothes, fifteen inspectors and several personal representatives of Police Commissioner Woods mingled with the crowds, Alexander Berkman started the fireworks at the I. W. W. demonstration at Union square this afternoon by calling the New York police "hirelings of a czar."

"The treatment given the I. W. W. men last Sunday would have brought the blush of shame even to the cheek of the Russian Czar," he said. "Tannebaum was railroaded to prison."

"Wild Joe" O'Carroll was cheered five minutes when he began speaking. There were cries of "Go to it, Joe! Let us have it!"

The police kept the 4,000 persons in the square in check and there were no repetitions of last week's disturbance.

Reserve Committee Defends Bank Sites

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Federal Reserve Bank Organization Committee has issued a statement defending its choice of Reserve Bank cities and definition of reserve districts. The committee called attention to the fact that since thirty-seven cities were applicants and only twelve named, twenty-five had to be disappointed.

Duke of Croy Sells 60 Coal Mines

BERLIN, April 11.—The Duke of Croy, husband of the former Miss Leishman, has struck a good business bargain with the Krupp firm. He has sold his company for a sum which must amount to many millions of marks, the right to operate sixty coal mines on the Croy estates at Duelmen, Westphalia.

'AUNT' TO FIGHT FOR 7-YEAR-OLD SOMERVILLE GIRL

Woman of Mystery Declares Daughter of Temple Street Man Is Her Child.

"Louise is my child and I shall not give her up," declares a mysterious New York woman who has taken Louise Gertrude Smith, the seven-year-old daughter of William W. Smith, Jr., of No. 19 Temple street, Somerville.

Smith is prepared to fight the woman's claim in court.

He asserts that his wife, who died October 7, 1913, assured him the child was their own.

The birth records at the Boston registry show that the child is the daughter of William W. Smith, Jr., and Henrietta Gilbert Smith, the latter being the name of Smith's deceased wife.

On the day of the funeral of Mrs. Smith, October 9, 1913, the New York woman came all the way from New York to be present at the services. When she left to visit her parents in Holliston she asked to be allowed to take the child on a week's vacation. Since that time Mr. Smith has sought vainly to regain possession of the child.

"She was the one bright spot in my life," he said yesterday, "the one hope that I had to live for. The death of my wife was a severe enough blow; but for this woman, a comparative stranger, to come into my house and take my child away, adding to this the claim that she is its mother, is the severest blow that was ever come to me. My wife's lips are sealed now. She cannot speak for herself or for me, but I will win regardless of this fact."

Bryan's Llama Is Held Up in England

LONDON, April 11.—The llama in whose welfare William J. Bryan is interested arrived in Manchester, where the steamship Verdi's new refrigerating plant is to be installed, but has not been allowed to land, as English law in the matter of foot and mouth diseases is strict. Experts are examining the goggle-eyed creatures secretly to see if he can pass the alien laws. If the decision is favorable he will be housed in the gardens of the Royal Zoological Society.

Two-Sixty Standard. The greatest motorcycle value ever achieved. 7 H.P. Wisconsin equipped with Electric Head Light—Electric Tail Light—Electric Signal—Two Sets of Storage Batteries—Corbin-Brown Rear Drive Speedometer
Price $360.00 F. O. B. Factory. See Catalog for detailed description.

Standard Indian Models for 1914 Are Electrically Equipped

FOR several years past the Indian engineering department has been experimenting with electric devices as applied to motorcycle use. The products of various manufacturers have been carefully examined. The process of choosing, testing and eliminating has been carried out until the resulting equipment which is now offered to Indian riders is confidently declared to be the best that can be secured.

Electrical Equipment All Standard 1914 models are fitted with Electric Head Light, Electric Tail Light, Electric Signal, Two Sets of Storage Batteries and Corbin-Brown Rear Drive Speedometer.

38 Betterments for 1914 Including this remarkable equipment there are "38 Betterments" in the new machine—improvements in design and in structural and working parts.

Taken as a whole, the 1914 Indian Models, with Electrical Equipment, upset all previously formed ideas of motorcycle excellence. Indeed, they establish a new standard of motorcycle values.

Indian MOTOCYCLES FOR 1914

The Two-Speed Gear The attention which the motorcycle industry is at present giving to two-speed devices bears out the soundness of judgment and foresightedness of Indian engineers in anticipating this popular requirement.

Five years ago the Indian Two-Speed Gear was perfected and introduced. Since that time it has been thoroughly tried out under all conditions of road use. Its superiority is demonstrated by the enthusiastic endorsement of its many thousands of users.

Popularity of the Twin Of present day motorcycle types, the Indian Twin Cylinder is, without any question, the favorite. The Indian was the Pioneer builder of Twin Cylinder Models. It has continuously urged the advantages of this type. It has brought the Twin Motor to such a state of perfection and has so demonstrated its worth that the demand for Twin Models in 1913 comprised 90% of the total Indian output.

The Indian Twin has no equal for rapidity of acceleration, capacity for hard work and power output in proportion to weight. It has suppleness and flexibility, a snappy delivery that instills confidence in its owner to conquer any road, and tremendous endurance.

The power, stability, ease of control and low cost of upkeep of the Indian Twin recommend it to every rider who contemplates the purchase of a 1914 motorcycle.

To obtain a full realization of the comprehensive 1914 Indian line, with its "38 Betterments" and its remarkable electrical equipment, you should examine the models in detail. Ask for the new 1914 Catalog. It makes plain a host of compelling Indian facts which cannot fail to be of interest to all motorcycle-interested men.

1914 Indian Models range in price from $200 to $325 F. O. B. Factory

COMMITTEEMEN STARTLE STATE WITH EXPENSES

Lieutenant-Governor Barry Holds Up Bills of Tuberculosis Investigators.

The sensation of the year at the State House is the expense bill of the Recess Committee to Investigate Tuberculosis.

The committee met on about forty-two different days between the close of the last Legislature and the opening of the present session. A fierce legislative battle was necessary this year before the House would agree to pay its members a penny. Compensation was then left to the Governor and Council.

Somewhat reluctantly the Council agreed upon $1,000 a man, the usual compensation of recess committeemen in the past.

One week later the expense bills made their appearance, as follows:

M[illegible] Carbary, Milford	$67.80
Samuel [illegible] Collins, Amesbury	124.90
[illegible] Jewett, Lowell	60.00
Michael S. Keenan, Lynn	47.40
Stenographer [illegible]	209.50
Printer [illegible]	[illegible]
Dr. [illegible] H. Bogers [illegible] Framingham	110.00
Benjamin F. Haines, Medford	24.60
C. A. Chandler, E. Bridgewater	97.50
Edward M. Ha[illegible] Pittsfield	233.68
[illegible]	110.40

Ordinarily the Council would have given this bill the once over and the money would have been waiting at the Treasurer's.

BARRY SAYS, "WAIT," "HOLD ON."

The man who said "wait," "hold on [illegible] out about this," was Edward [illegible] Barry, Lieutenant-Governor.

Lieutenant-Governor Barry is chairman of the Finance Committee. He [illegible] the facts. His associates [illegible] Councillors [illegible] Mortimer and Hogan, [illegible] matter merited careful [illegible]. They studied, therefore, the individual bills.

Representative Carbary of Milford [illegible] for "[illegible] one-month trip [illegible] from Milford to Boston," at a cost of $63.30 and one trip from [illegible] to Boston and return $4.50. Total $67.80.

[illegible] Collins of Amesbury [illegible] for "forty-nine trips from Amesbury to Boston to meetings of the committee" $16.96. Mr. Collins also [illegible] a bill for "carriage hire" at $24.50 and a "trip from Bridgewater to Boston" at 50 cents. His total was $124.90.

[illegible] Mr. Collins for vouchers for the "carriage hire," whereupon the Amesbury man explained that the figures $24.50 appeared in the wrong column. He had meant to charge for "meals" instead of "carriage hire." And the Lieutenant-Governor now wants to know if Mr. Collins charges the State for meals when he comes down to the Legislature.

Jewett of Lowell modestly charged up "three forty-two-trip tickets" at $20 each, a total of $60.

Councillors claim that the Recess Committee sat on not more than forty-five different days. They say Jewett missed some of the meetings [illegible].

ALSO CHARGES FOR "MEALS."

Keenan of Lynn charged for attendance at 73 sessions of the committee, which sometimes did sit twice in a single day. Keenan's charge [illegible] for [illegible] fares and $29.20 for railroad fares. He wants $10.50 for meals and 50 cents for a trip from Bridgewater to Boston.

[illegible] He asks [illegible] for $61 for "four days' automobile service." He came in from [illegible] with an auto to carry [illegible] committeemen out to North Reading. Councillors maintain that railroad trains would have filled the purpose.

Cleveland A. Chandler's bill is for "attendance at forty-five meetings of the committee" railroad fare from East Bridgewater to Boston, $22.[illegible] Mr. Chandler placed [illegible] automobile at the disposal of his associates. He asks for $7[illegible] for "five days' automobile service." The total bill is $97.50. He tells the Councillors they needn't pay if they don't feel like it. Councillors point out that while Representative Chandler resides in East Bridgewater, his regular place of business is in Boston. They say he comes to town almost daily.

Representative "Ben" Haines of Medford has the smallest bill in the lot, but it has caused a large share of the gossip. Mr. Haines vacationized at Orr's Island, Maine. He came up from Orr's Island on three occasions to sit in at committee hearings. He wants $8.20 for each round trip. Total, $24.60.

To Play Comedy by Longyear, Jr.

"Red Streak" Makes Big Hit

Father Is Boston's Richest Man, but Boy Made Good in the Mines.

Harvard dramatists and the mooted playwright clique of classic Cambridge got a surprise last week with the news that John Munro Longyear, Jr., of No. 1619 Massachusetts avenue, Harvard student in the graduate school, mining engineer and son of the millionaire copper magnate and Greater Boston's richest citizen, John M. Longyear of Brookline, had received a professional offer for a musical comedy of his own composition.

The opera is entitled "The Red Streak," and was produced by an amateur company at the Michigan State College of Mines two years ago where it made one of the hits of the season.

The offer for the musical piece to be produced professionally in New York and probably later here, has surprised the Cambridge playwright colony.

Jack Longyear is known as a chip of the old block [illegible] from short pants he has been doing things a step in advance of his fellows.

He rose from ordinary miner, in which job, overalled and grimy, he spent his time shovelling pay dirt [illegible]

"Movie Queen" Is Michigan Girl

Stella Hoban Proud of Her Birth in Old Muskegon Lumber District.

Stella Hoban, who comes to the Colonial tomorrow in "The Queen of the Movies," was last seen in Boston as Simone in "Oh! Oh! Delphine." Miss Hoban is a native of Muskegon, Mich., and is very proud of the fact that she comes from what was thirty years ago the greatest lumber port in the world, in the days when the lower peninsula of Michigan was controlling the pine lumber for the world.

Miss Hoban studied music in Chicago and later on went to Italy, where she sung at La Scala with the intention of preparing her voice for the grand opera stage. She frankly admits that her training in Italy has been a wonderful help to her in musical comedy.

Fail to Identify Burglar Suspect

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 11.—John C. Dunbar, the young man arrested on the charge of having a kit of burglars' tools pleaded not guilty today in the Sixth District Court and was held in $2000 by Judge Gorham for a hearing, April 23. Dunbar [illegible] to tell anything about himself. He was thought to be one of the [illegible] who bound and gagged two watchmen in the store of Timothy Smith & Co., in Boston, and looted the safe of $600. Lars P. [illegible], one of the gagged watchmen from Boston, was unable to identify Dunbar.

'Acting a Thankless Art,' Says Warfield

"Leaves Nothing Behind Like the Author, Sculptor or Painter."

David Warfield, who is appearing at the [illegible] revival of "The Auctioneer," [illegible] discussing the art of painting, sculpture and acting, and comparing the rewards derived by the [illegible] successful in each line of endeavor, said:

"If it were not for the law of compensation which an all-wise Providence has made a rule of life, one would say that acting is the most thankless of all the arts. An actor is famous today and forgotten tomorrow. [illegible] they left behind them, the actors of yesterday? Nothing but a memory, a standard for other players [illegible] to come.

"The painter leaves behind him great pictures [illegible] memorial. A sculptor carves [illegible] memorial in marble that lives forever, and the great author [illegible] because his soul lives in his books."

JOY FOR LEPER BOY NEAR WITH WIRELESS KIT

Boston American's Enterprise for Archie Thomas, Penikese Exile, Succeeds.

Archie Thomas soon will be in possession of the wireless apparatus which the Boston AMERICAN determined to get for him some weeks ago. The AMERICAN started out with the idea of getting a sender, or, as the wireless sharps say, a "transmitting apparatus," to go with a somewhat antiquated and patched-up receiving [illegible] at the [illegible] where he is confined, through the kindness of President W. M. Seabury of the Wireless Specialty Apparatus Company, and others. What he will get will be a complete new apparatus and [illegible] power [illegible] to furnish the electricity for operating it.

The idea of mitigating the sentence of lifelong isolation which society imposes upon the forlorn leper boy at Penikese by furnishing him a wireless plant for his instruction and amusement, made such an appeal to kind hearts all over New England that money soon began to pour into the AMERICAN office. At first the contributions were for the most part, one, two and five dollars. During the past week, however, the subscriptions have increased in number and amount.

A great stroke of luck for Archie was getting sympathy of the Junior Charity Club. The members are young society maids and matrons of Greater Boston who give freely of their talents for good causes. They have long been aiding in the support of Edith Myers, a young woman of Brush Valley, [illegible] whose infirmity was called to their attention by an article written for the Boston AMERICAN by Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Their charities about Boston include support of hospital wards, fallen girls and poor and infirm people outside of institutions.

MRS. YOUNG JOINS COMMITTEE.

Mrs. Enid Kinder Norcross made inquiries at the AMERICAN office which led to an interview with the president of the club, Mrs. Edgar M. Young of Winchester. The result was that Mrs. Young was added to the committee to purchase the instruments for Archie and the club will make up any deficiency in the cost of the finest instruments obtainable that may exist when the subscriptions stop coming in.

Lewis L. Webb of Brookline, secretary and treasurer of the Amateur Wireless Association of New England called yesterday to inform the AMERICAN that his club had voted $25 for the Archie Thomas fund. This sum may be increased. Mr. Webb [illegible] difficulty was found in securing sufficient money to obtain a complete first-class equipment.

The employes at the Main, Fort Hill and toll telephone exchanges yesterday subscribed $22 to the fund. The employes of the eastern division of the Marconi Company at the Filene building made up a purse of $5. Other sums have been promised and doubtless will be received by the AMERICAN in a few days.

WIRELESS EXPERT IN CHARGE.

Inspector Henry C. Gawler, United States expert in charge of the enforcement of wireless regulations in New England, yesterday sent this letter to Archie Thomas:

"I have been requested by the Boston AMERICAN to purchase an amateur radio equipment for you, and I have been further requested to see that this equipment is properly and efficiently installed. I have agreed to do so.

"To assure you a good, efficient equipment I have requested the following committee to handle the purchasing of your apparatus and they have agreed to do so: Dr. Greenleaf Whittier Pickard, chairman; Thomas M. Stevens, Melville Eastham, H. C. Gawler, Mrs. Edgar M. Young.

May Send Delegate on Sea Fisheries

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The House Foreign Affairs Committee had before it today a message from President Wilson asking Congress to determine whether it will authorize acceptance of the French government's invitation to be represented by a delegate to the international exposition of sea fishery industries at Boulogne sur Mer, June 1 to October 1, next.

NavyObeys Daniels in Silence, Says Dewey

WASHINGTON, April 11.—"There has been no drunkenness in the navy in recent years," Admiral Dewey said today in discussing Secretary Daniels's order abolishing the wine mess.

"The United States naval officers are the most obedient men on the globe. Not a word may be expected from any of them about the abolition of the wine mess. They will comply in silence."

Offer 300,000 Acres of Land for Sale

LONDON, April 11.—The 300,000 acres of land in Sutherlandshire, which the Duke of Sutherland will offer for sale in the Autumn, is by far the biggest area ever put into the open market. Each of the nine blocks would make a little principality; and each contains a district suitable for experiments either in forestation or sheep farming. As at present arranged the smallest block will be 15,000 acres.

But enormous as the area is, it will not amount to half the value of the total land to be sold this year in the North of Great Britain.

NEW ENGLAND CATCHES CLEAN-UP DAY SPIRIT

Movement for Improving Living and Working Conditions Spreads.

All New England is catching the spirit of tidiness incited by civic, trade and community improvement organizations of Boston who have launched a "clean-up and paint-up" campaign culminating May 3 to 9.

The movement is endorsed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Massachusetts State Board of Trade, Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, Boston Chapter National Fire Protection Association, Boston Credit Men's Association, Pilgrim Publicity Association, New England Iron and Hardware Association, New England Hardware Dealers' Association, Paint and Oil Club of New England, Boston Women's Publicity Club and other organizations.

The New England Clean-Up and Paint-Up Committee frankly admits that without the aid of women's clubs the campaign for improved living and working conditions will be wellnigh fruitless, but with their help all things are possible.

Dozens of cities and towns throughout New England have already signified their intention of joining Boston in this crusade against dirt, rubbish, unsanitary places, both outdoors and in, the first week in May.

The assurances of co-operation being received from women's clubs by the New England Campaign Committee are gratifying and it is hoped that every clean-up committee of every woman's club in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut will at once correspond with George C. Morton, box 1215, Boston, who is chairman of the New England committee in reference to literature and that they will also act promptly on their own initiative to start a live campaign locally.

Mrs. Thomas Sherwin of the Women's Municipal League is chairman of the Boston Clean-up and Paint-up Campaign Committee. Mrs. G. A. O. Ernst is one of the active Civic Workers of Boston.

Here is an opportunity to do great things for New England. The money, time, energy and talent put co-operatively into clean-up and community improvement work by the various forces, will bring important advantages quickly to both business men, wage earners and housekeepers.

SAYS ALDERMEN SHARE IN WORST GAMBLING DEN

McCarthy of Somerville Shocks Chamber by Public Accusation of Fellow-Members.

Alderman William T. McCarthy of Somerville, in [illegible] over a resolution to allow bowling alleys in that city exploded a bomb in the aldermanic chamber when he shouted:

"There are men in this chamber who are interested in the worst gambling joint in the city."

Since that moment local waters in Somerville have been roiling violent whirlpools [illegible] investigations have been made. Alderman Edward [illegible] started things when he charged [illegible] gambling was carried on [illegible] every poolroom and bowling [illegible] in the city.

That charge was made two weeks ago in the course of [illegible] granting George [illegible] to operate ten alleys in [illegible] on the third floor of the Hodser building on Union square.

The Board of Aldermen refused to grant the license. Alderman McCarthy urged reconsideration. It was refused. Then he proposed revoking every bowling [illegible] in the city, and said:

"Gambling is rampant [illegible] and men in this chamber [illegible] sneered and laughed when I asked reconsideration of the Gonia [illegible] petition are interested in the worst gambling joint in this city. I desire to present proof to the License Committee in the interest of public decency and fair play. I have no other motive."

The board adopted an order to consider an ordinance prohibiting the licensing of bowling, billiard and pool establishments above the first floor of any building.

Alderman Connell explained:

"I opposed the Gonia petition because the bowling alleys were to be on the third floor out of view of the police. The higher up you get these places the greater the opportunity for gambling."

"Why did you oppose Alderman McCarthy's order asking the License Committee to consider revoking all bowling alley licenses?"

"Because the order was too sweeping," replied Connell. "If the order had called for a special committee to investigate gambling charges I would have supported it. With that authority and a stout club it may be I would be willing to try to stop all gambling in Somerville."

American Escapes from Juarez Jail

Cardinal Logue Fears for Home Rule Bill

BELFAST, April 11.—Cardinal Logue, the Roman Catholic primate of Ireland, said today:

"The people in the Northeast of Ireland are making so strong a fight against the passage of the Home Rule bill that I am afraid it will result in alterations which will destroy its working value."

GIRLS! BEAUTIFUL, CHARMING HAIR, NO DANDRUFF—25-CENT DANDERINE

Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair and stops it falling out.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

It is quite common [illegible] and similar articles with storage companies. Experiments conducted under the direction of Dr. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology, have shown that all danger of injury [illegible] moths and their associates may be obviated by keeping the temperature at about 40 degrees Fahrenheit. This low temperature keeps the [illegible] dormant and in a harmless condition. [illegible] storage is good if every one has a cold storage plant or can afford to pay for storage, but it isn't necessary.

By the use of "Martin's" odorless Moth Powder you can keep your garments hanging in your closet, absolutely protected from moths and ready to use instantly by brushing off the powder. This preparation kills the moth and destroys all larvae.

Sold by drug and department stores [illegible] for 50c and $1.00 per can [illegible] mail. Eleven different powders for [illegible] Name kind when ordering.

MAMMA, DADDY AND CHILDREN ALL LOVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness—take "California Syrup of Figs."

For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful tonight means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the 'California Fig Syrup Company.'" This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

A.—The best method known in the American home—the rule of love.

A.—Pretty well.

Q.—You are said to have been particularly intimate with Julia Siegel. Have you heard from her since the recent developments in her family?

A.—(1) I know her fairly well. (2) No.

Q.—If Mr. Brown does not go back to Lowell will he engage in business in Providence?

A.—His business connections were severed in Lowell in February in order to engage in his new line of business in Providence.

The statement made by ex-Mayor [illegible] of Mrs. Brown is as follows:

For the purpose of correcting some wrong and erroneous impressions in the public mind I desire to state that Mrs. "Dolly" Eddy-Brown was not fleeing from the service of legal process when she left Boston recently.

Mrs. Eddy-Brown came to Providence from Boston on March 30, and with [illegible] Brown visited the [illegible] obtained a marriage [illegible] of this according to a [illegible] previously arranged some time before. She returned to Boston, and on the following day Mrs Eddy, Mr. Brown and a friend packed the baggage. One [illegible] trunk belonging to Mrs. Diana Eddy, which contained [illegible] and [illegible] articles intended for use [illegible] new home in Providence.

This is the trunk referred to by some of the newspapers as containing the jewels, securities and monies of Henry Siegel. As the attorney of Mrs. Diana Eddy-Brown, I promptly offered the District Attorney's office the privilege of examining its contents, which offer was quite as promptly declined. The District Attorney was never interested in the contents of the trunk, but only used the trunk as a tracer.

[illegible] same day, Mrs. [illegible] Brown left for [illegible] on arrival went to [illegible] where [illegible] Brown's family resides, all according to a prearranged plan. The [illegible] included the [illegible] party, to be [illegible] quiet little [illegible] for April 4.

NO POMP AFTER CEREMONY.

After the wedding ceremony the very small company repaired to the Crown Hotel, and a little later the bridal couple left by train for Pomfret, Ct. This narrative of an occurrence, except as to names, can well be applied to many [illegible] events.

When the couple left Boston on March 31 the District Attorney did not want Mrs. Eddy; no summons had been issued by any court or by the District Attorney's office, therefore she was not running away from any legal service or from Boston—simply leaving Boston for Providence, where a few days later she was to become the bride of James S. Brown.

[illegible] to avoid publicity as [illegible] they went away from [illegible] the rear [illegible] and, to [illegible] the [illegible] on the following Saturday were of a similar nature watched as they thought by newspaper men, and the couple enjoyed the [illegible] and [illegible] of the dash to the taxi [illegible] little thinking that the [illegible] was to become a matter of any public interest whatever.

NOT EVADING SERVICE.

They did not know about a legal summons being out, for service on Mrs. Eddy at that time, and therefore were not intending or wilfully evading it. The bridal couple were in blissful [illegible] for Mr. [illegible] Saturday evening, and the story of officers, detectives and reporters was related to me on the following Sunday.

I bought the Sunday papers, [illegible] went to the place where the couple was stopping and broke in upon the [illegible] world.

I [illegible] as to her legal rights and as to the proper procedure to follow, and to my advice she gave her prompt and unqualified assent; freely and fully. My dealings with the District Attorney's office in Suffolk County [illegible] clearly what the [illegible] of my advice was.

The unfavorable and undesirable notoriety attached to Mrs. Brown is entirely undeserved, but what has happened cannot be recalled. The demand as well as desire now is to correct and remove, as far as possible, the injurious impression made on the public.

Mrs. Diana Eddy Brown is a lady of refined tastes, who has lived quietly in Dorchester, with her two sons, one seventeen and the other fourteen years of age, in a home supported by her father-in-law, Mr Eddy. She has had some private income derived from her music, this has not been at all large.

"HAD SIEGEL ACCOUNT."

She has had an account at Henry Siegel's and some other stores in Boston, and the adjuster at Henry Siegel's will say that Mrs. Eddy's monthly bill was always a matter of adjustment because of prices or charges. Her bills were paid with money given her by her father-in-law, Mr. Eddy.

Why connect Mrs. Diana Eddy-Brown's name with Henry Siegel's simply because the lady [illegible] an account in his store or because Mrs Henry Siegel is pur[illegible] in the divorce courts. She [illegible] have an account in the store, received a moderate line of credit, and always paid her account at the store with real money.

She knows Henry Siegel, but more particularly Joseph Siegel, Henry Siegel's nephew, and manager of the Boston store, and his wife Sally. All of these people were together at times. Mrs. Diana Eddy-Brown was never interested in Henry Siegel's finances or business and knows absolutely nothing about them. He was merely an acquaintance, and Henry Siegel would have never been in her company except for Joseph Siegel and his wife.

[illegible] allegations contained in the [illegible] for divorce filed in New [illegible] County by Marie Vaughn [illegible] declared by Mrs. Diana [illegible] to be absolutely [illegible] who know the two [illegible] you at once [illegible] possibly be anything [illegible] between them, certainly no love and affection.

WIFE THE ATTRACTION.

It was Joseph Siegel's wife who appealed to Mrs. Eddy-Brown's tastes and excited her interest and friendship, and these two were frequently seen together.

Mrs. Eddy-Brown never sang in public or private at Mamaroneck, where it is claimed Henry Siegel met her and fell in love with her.

Mrs. Eddy-Brown has been the guest of the Siegels all of them, at various times. What of that? What professional singer, of any note, but what has been entertained in private homes by friends and lovers of music?

Splendid women like Mrs. Eddy-Brown are welcome everywhere and anywhere, and if she is not a splendid type of women, why do her throngs of acquaintances and friends in Boston and Dorchester rally unsolicited to her support at this time.

This unfortunate affair with its tears and sorrow is to be deplored, but in a few days more Mrs. Eddy-Brown will be restored to her circle of acquaintances, entrenched stronger than ever in their love and affection.

Mrs. Eddy-Brown does not know Mrs. Henry Siegel, and never even saw her, and was, of course, powerless to prevent the use of her name in connection with Mrs. Siegel's divorce petition.

Mrs Eddy-Brown dislikes this sensational publicity, and yet she does not shrink from any inquiry that may be made in the interest of the public good.

In reference to suggestions made connecting the name of James S. Brown with the finances of Henry Siegel, it is only fair to say that Mr Brown does not know Henry Siegel and has never had any dealings, financial or otherwise, with Henry Siegel or any of his stores.

"Bills at Siegel's Store Paid by Father-in-Law"

She has had an account at Henry Siegel's, Filene's and some other stores in Boston, and the adjuster at Henry Siegel's will say that Mrs. Eddy's monthly bill was always a matter of adjustment because of prices or charges. Her bills were paid with money given her by her father-in-law, Mr. Eddy.

—Statement of Mrs. Eddy-Brown's attorney.

JOHN DOE WITNESS IN SIEGAL TRIAL; NEW SENSATION IN CASE

Mrs Marie Vaughan Siegel will positively be a witness when the Suffolk Grand Jury on Monday takes up its investigation of the Siegel failure here. This word at the Court House, coupled with a strong rumor that John Doe indictments would be sought against a man not yet named in the Siegel case, made twin sensations in the Siegel investigations.

Mrs Siegel.

Mrs. Dolly Eddy-Brown—the woman Mrs. Siegel names in her divorce suit.

James W Hall, who has supervised the examination of the Siegel books here for Mr. Pelletier.

James L. King, a bank employe.

Mary F. Fitzgerald, a bank employe.

Mary A. Doyle, a bank employe.

Police Inspector Silas F. Waite.

Police Lieutenant John J. Rooney.

The hearing before the Grand Jury is expected to last ten days, and scores of witnesses will be summoned.

Mrs. Siegel is at Lakewood, N. J., suffering a slight indisposition, and this gave a rise to a rumor she would not be able to come to Boston to testify.

Mrs. Siegel is expected to make startling charges regarding her husband and Mrs Eddy-Brown.

70 Indictments by the Grand Jury

The Suffolk County Grand Jury has reported seventy indictments and twenty-three no bills, the largest number of cases considered by any Grand Jury for three years.

Mary McGowan was indicted for arson. She is charged with setting alight a six-family house on Nawn street, February 24 after a quarrel with her sister, who lived in the house.

Six men are indicted for an alleged assault on Joseph E. Nutter, clerk of an Atlantic avenue boarding house. They are also charged with robbery. The men, said to be members of the "Mohawk Gang" are Angus Morrison, James Chestnut, Frank Adams, William McVicker, Patrick Morgan and Alfred Pitzold.

Laura Maynes Builds $40,000 Home

TEN ROOM HOUSE JUST BIG ENOUGH, SHE SAYS | THREE CARAT DIAMOND FLASHES ITS SECRET

'Agassiz to Share It?' 'Nothing to Say'

"If it be true that 'coming events cast their shadows before,'" then the building of a $40,000 house on Commonwealth avenue, Newton, by Miss Laura Maynes, whose romance with Maximillian Agassiz, wealthy Boston clubman, has been the chief topic of discussion in Back Bay Society circles during the past season, is indicative of June brides and wedding bells.

Nor will Miss Maynes, herself, deny that such is the case. She has just returned from a long sojourn on the continent of Europe, but is now busily engaged in superintending a gang of laborers who are laying out the grounds of the new Maynes estate at No 45 Commonwealth avenue, near the Lake street terminal, Boston and Newton line.

Miss Maynes, arrayed in costly mole-skin cloak, was found by an AMERICAN reporter in earnest consultation with her gardener in the middle of the driveway, one day last week.

DOGS BARK WELCOME.

Her pet dogs, "Big" and "Tony," a sleek Pommeranian and a nimble fox terrier, barked a noisy welcome at the approach of the stranger.

In answer to the reporter's questions Miss Maynes smiled one of her inimitable Maynes smiles, which have proved such a confusion to Maxmillian Agassiz, and her eyes sparkled with suppressed merriment.

"Really, you know, I have just this minute returned from Europe and haven't had a chance to collect my wits," said Miss Maynes.

"I just wanted a house all by myself, so I gave my instructions to Roscoe L. Davidson of Newton Centre and when I returned from abroad the house was done.

"I'm sure I don't know the style of architecture or anything, except that it is a good house and just large enough for my purposes."

DIAMOND ON FINGER.

"Are you going to housekeeping soon?" ventured the reporter. Another silvery laugh. "Oh, don't you wish you knew? My, what a story it would make!" said Miss Maynes. "But now, really, I have 'nothing to say'—at least, not yet," Miss Maynes hastily corrected herself. And the three carat solitaire diamond on her left hand ring-finger flashed a stolid defiance at the reporter's impudence to ask such a foolish question.

"But isn't this ten-room house pretty large for just one young lady?" interrogated the inquisitive newspaperman.

"Oh, I don't know; I have bachelor-maid friends who live alone in houses about this size," replied Miss Maynes. And she gave the inquisitive reporter another of her smiles that might mean anything. When it comes to [illegible] Miss Maynes has Mona Liza "beaten to a frazzle," as an esteemed statesman of the day would put it.

"[illegible] what is the present status of your engagement to Max Agassiz?" insisted the reporter.

THROWS LIKE WAGNER.

Miss Maynes stooped and selected a small stone, moist with the yellow [illegible] beds [illegible] calling one of her seven dogs, the little fox-terrier, this modern Diana threw the stone with the swing of Hans Wagner. It landed against the side of the next house and between two large plate-glass windows. "Mercy, but that was a narrow escape. Go get it, 'Tony,'" ejaculated Miss Maynes.

The reporter repeated his question.

"Now, if I was to tell you, you'd know [illegible]," tittered Miss Maynes saucily. Then she raised both hands deprecatingly and another ripple of suppressed merriment escaped her. "Remember, I told you that I had [illegible] I [illegible] stick to my [illegible]. If you [illegible] be real good perhaps I will give you a beautiful scoop a little later. It all depends on how you treat me in the paper. Wait awhile and I'll give you a real story. I cannot talk now."

"But you'll admit that your new house is large enough for two, won't you?" pressed the newspaperman.

"It is a very good house and makes a very nice place to live. But I must go in now. Good day; and remember about the big story by and by!" and the fair mistress of the Maynes mansion vanished up the driveway followed by two yelping, happy canines.

Would Turn Entente into an Alliance

LONDON, April 11.—The Daily Citizen asserts that negotiations are proceeding at St Petersburg, on British initiative, to convert the entente between France, Russia and Great Britain into a triple alliance. The object in view is that later Germany would be forced to join, and the quadruple alliance thus formed would lead to an agreement for the limitation of armaments.

Finds Cellar Afire; Calmly Gives Alarm

TWO DISHES FOR A MEAL? AH! BUT NO!

Boston Chefs Aghast at Such a Gastronomic Outlaw.

The "Two-Dish League," in the minds of Boston chefs, is a gastronomic outlaw—to complete the baseball simile.

"Never!" says Antonio Dellamano, who creates dinners at the [illegible] set Hotel, when the suggestion was broached to him that "two perfect dishes" might constitute a satisfactory dinner.

Signor Dellamano's colleagues in other hotels and clubs endorse his denial all around the cuisine circle.

This "Two-Dish League" is the ingenious idea of M. Joseph Galtier, an essayist of Paris. He proposes, according to the cable dispatches, only two [illegible] rather than dinners of so many courses that one is lost in a riot of eating.

Boston [illegible] say there is a happy medium [illegible] or six course dinner which [illegible] food and variety and has [illegible] or the diner leaves the table—delighted.

"No matter how perfect the two dishes may be the guest will leave the table hungry. Simplicity consists not in robbing the menu of its courses, but in making every course so delicate that the appetite of the diner is spurred, not satiated. The most elegant dinner must contain at least six [illegible] courses. These may be disposed of rapidly or leisurely, according to the time or inclination of the [illegible]. A dinner of six courses is just [illegible]

[illegible] chef at the Copley-Plaza, says two dishes may be enough for invalids or children.

"I, myself," he added, "don't believe in a heavy dinner, but if it is limited to two dishes it is almost impossible for anybody to enjoy it. I think that a dinner of seven courses would satisfy [illegible]

Herr [illegible] thinks that a [illegible] like [illegible] would be [illegible] better [illegible] two-dish [illegible]

Jean Jeton, who caresses the palates of the Algonquin Club gourmets, was properly horrified. He ex[illegible]

"Limit dinner to two dishes? That is not a dinner. We used to [illegible] sixteen or seventeen dishes. Now the usual number is six to ten. I think eight courses should satisfy anyone. But a two-course dinner would lack atmosphere and gaiety and good fellowship. It would be dull." M Jeton was asked to design an ideal menu, whereupon he dashed off the following:

Bitter Ruffs
Consomme Double Yvette
[illegible]
New Asparagus Ice Marie
Baby Guinea Hen en Cocotte Veronique
Romaine
[illegible]
Petit Souffle de Mandarine Neva.
Coffee

Trancoro Lombard, chef at the Somerset Culb, says:

"M. Galtier's suggestion is merely a Parisian fad. It will soon be forgotten. The simplest of dinners must contain soup, fish, meat, vegetables and coffee. If we have extreme simplicity we must still have six or seven course dinners—never two-course ones."

"I am an old-time chef," said Clement C. Adrian chef at the Tuileries, "but I believe dinner should contain at least six or seven courses. Here would be a dinner to please anybody:

Oysters
Bouillon, Boiled Shad, Cucumbers.
Creamed Mushroom on Toast
Saddle of Lamb
Mint Sauce
Bermuda Potatoes — Green Peas
Salad
Ice Cream — Cake
Coffee

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime
Ask for Sulpherb Tablets.

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern method puts the cream of tartar and sulphur into a sugar-coated tablet and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets), but Sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at [illegible] per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, sores, etc., [illegible] can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking this old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Product Company, Dayton, Ohio. Free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

"The Death of the Elder Pulitzer Made the New York World a Ship Without a Rudder"

But the World does not confess to the much more serious loss of honesty of purpose, of intelligent direction ...

This other forgery was credited to Representative Henry A. Barnhart, and Mr. Barnhart has hastened to deny every detail of the publication in the most vigorous and unequivocal terms. Mr. Barnhart repudiates the World's forged interview.

Even these daily forgeries of the World in the effort to bolster up a false and indefensible position are of no special interest or importance either to this paper or to the public. Forgery is no new occupation to the World.

The AMERICAN defended the World at the time, but the paper cannot forever be defending the World from the consequences of its imbecile acts and incendiary utterances.

There must be, and always will be, as long as this country is free, honest criticism of any mistaken policy of a political administration.

There must be, as long as journalism is independent, fearless journalistic crusades to maintain the liberties of this country and the rights of the citizens.

There will ever be debates, more or less acrimonious, between partisans of different parties and editors of different opinions. But in a frantic and futile effort to secure some petty personal or political or mean and mercenary advantage, there should never be such a contaminating suggestion as disgraced the columns of the World in its effort to communicate a corrupting thought to its readers.

The people of the United States, as a whole, are wise and capable and judicious. They know how to deal with immoral and unpatriotic journals of the World's class. They are withdrawing their support from the World at the rate of 24,000 average per day from the evening paper, and 14,000 daily average from the morning and Sunday papers. The severity of this popular rebuke will soon make the World an impotent agency for evil.

From the mere standpoint of journalistic rivalry, the AMERICAN might be pleased at the downfall of its ex-competitor, but as an American newspaper, concerned in the welfare and repute of this country, the AMERICAN must regret that the methods which are degrading and destroying a once great newspaper property, are also, as far as the World's ... influence can be felt, disgracing American journalism.

POLITICAL BUNGLING BRINGS WAGE-EARNERS TO A CRISIS

For Every 100 Jobs There Are 110 Applicants and Grave Fear of Cuts in Pay Envelopes. Danger of Even Worse Times Unless Administration Changes Tactics.

By B. C. FORBES

Business Editor.

B. C. FORBES

Are wage reductions coming?

When 110 men clamor for 100 jobs the rate of pay offered is apt to decline. Strong unions can check the ... to some extent, but, as a broad principle, the labor market, in common with all other markets, is influenced by the law of supply and demand.

Thanks largely to political hostility and bungling, the supply of labor is today greatly in excess of the amount that can be used.

To my mind, this is the worst indictment that can be brought against the present administration. A government that makes it impossible for abnormal numbers of willing workers to earn a living for themselves and their families is not a success. When it continues to do so, without even a plausible excuse, its conduct becomes criminal.

Unless Washington changes its tactics, and changes them very promptly, wages in many, many cases will be lowered.

Already the nation's pay envelope has suffered seriously.

I wish to repeat the suggestion—I would put it in the form of a plea—that Congress announce that, owing to the chaotic views and utter lack of agreement on what should be done, and how, all anti-business legislation be postponed.

Such a step would have an electric effect upon sentiment ...

WEST END'S ANSWER

West End Consolidated broke silence yesterday and made public Tonopah a detailed statement of its position in the controversy with Jim Butler. We had this statement in our New York office at 9 o'clock Thursday, 24 hours before its publication in Tonopah, thereby again demonstrating the superiority of our news service, as, among eastern brokers, the highly important document was furnished exclusively to us.

Thursday evening we issued this WEST END ANSWER to Jim Butler's campaign of publicity in the form of a Special Bulletin.

If you would know the grounds upon which WEST END asserts confidence in its ability to MAINTAIN TITLE TO THE DISPUTED ORE BODY FOR ALL TIME TO COME, you must have a copy of that special bulletin.

Any of our offices will furnish it upon REQUEST.

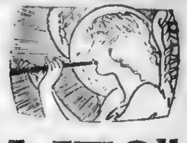
EASTER SUNDAY



"I AM THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE"

Happiness for All This Day

By RT. REV. SAMUEL G. BABCOCK, D.D.
Suffragan-Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

WHAT a blessed day is Easter! How strong and clear is its note of joy. It is the queen of days, the brightest ... of all festivals. As an early ... exclaimed: "There is no one so forlorn and ... as not to find happiness in this great festival."

In ancient times men expressed their joy on this day by setting at liberty slaves and in other ... of mercy and charity.

It is the day which assures us of the fulfilment of the promise of Jesus: "Ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy."

It tells us life is stronger than death ... sorrow and gilds us with gladness.

[illegible] pledges unmistakably the realization of ... hopes.

It also answers the question of our future ... and gives the present an importance ... which otherwise would not belong to it.

It assures ... persistence of personal individuality.

A Message of Life and Joy

By REV. A. H. NAZARIAN, D.D.
Pastor of People's Temple, Berkeley Street

N[illegible] Easter ... After the cold Winter ... of death ... day, Easter is a return ... and flowers.

Conservatory and arboretum ... sweet message of immortality.

Cherish Hope of Immortality

By REV. DANIEL EVANS,
Professor at Andover Theological Seminary, Cambridge.

THE return of Easter ... We look farther and see more ... The spiritual world in ... comes into the range of our vision.

We feel again, in all the depth of ... and in all the greatness of their value, the ... of immortality which came to us in ... the renewal of life in Nature. The ... of the deathlessness of personality, the vastness of the soul's possibilities, the precious experience of love and friendship and service and the profound and blessed ... with God. The Christian conviction of the ever living Christ is at once the confirmation and the ... of these intimations.

A universe with a dead Christ would be a Christless universe. A universe with the Christ alive forevermore is a universe which conserves Christlike values and realities.

We, therefore, cherish the ... of a blessed immortality for every human soul, and base this life on the nature of God revealed in Christ and on the worth of the soul as estimated by Christ.

The Oldest of Festival Days

By REV. GEORGE HODGES.
Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge.

EASTER is one of the oldest of festivals, for it goes back not only to the resurrection of Christ, and not only to the escape of the Hebrews out of Egypt, but to the jubilation of primitive religion at the season when the death of Winter is followed by the new life of Spring.

The feast belongs to Christians and Jews and to all the races of man—the feast of redemption, of freedom, of the victory of nature and of the spirit, of the conquest of death and the bringing of life and of immortality to light.

Marks Flood Tide of Life

By REV. O. P. GIFFORD, D.D.
Pastor of the Brookline Baptist Church

EASTER marks the flood tide of faith. Eastern, western and Protestant Christianity ... in singing the common chorus, "O Death ... is thy victory, O Death, where is thy sting?"

The sand bars of separation are covered, the little pools become a mighty sea of union ... unites all in silence, Life unites all in a song of victory. The tomb is empty, the heavens have received their own. "Christ is risen!" The risen Christ is proof and pledge that we shall rise in turn. He is the first fruits, the later harvest is one in kind. The grain of life shall be reaped from the fields of death and gathered into the garner house of God.

"Because I live ye shall live also," said the Christ. The sigh and the sob give place to the shout and the song. Life is Lord of Death.

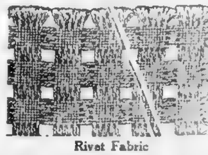
How Goodyear Fights Loose Treads

After we ended rim-cutting we took up loose treads—another major tire trouble.

At the base of the tread in every tire there must be a breaker strip. In all tires save Goodyears this strip is made of closely-woven fabric. And road use often separates this breaker strip from the rubber.

We bought the rights to a patent fabric which we picture here. It cost us $50,000, and it forms our breaker strip.



Rivet Fabric

This fabric rivets itself to the rubber. The tread rubber is forced down through these openings, while in a plastic state, forming hundreds of large rubber rivets. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse.

This lessens by 60 per cent the risk of this tread separation. And no other maker employs it.

Millions Saved

That is one way in which we save tire users millions of dollars yearly.

Another is our "On-Air" cure. No-Rim-Cut tires are final-cured on air bags, under actual road conditions. This saves the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric. This extra process costs us $1,500 daily, and no other maker employs it.

In these tires alone is rim-cutting ended in a satisfactory way. We control the method.

And these tires alone have our double-thick All-Weather tread—a smooth-running anti-skid.

16 Makes Cost More

After years of tests on countless cars they have come to outsell any other tire in the world.

Yet there are 16 makes of tires which sell at higher prices. Some nearly one-half higher. Three such tires cost as much as four Goodyears. That's a curious situation.

Hang All the Golden Oratory Medals on Pete Swallow--

He's in Mrs. Fisk's Play at the Hollis This Week, and Will Deliver Himself of Some Breezy Indiana Talk.

"M[illegible] [illegible] is to appear [illegible] two weeks at the Hollis, is the story of how Della Sayles, the [illegible] manufacturer [illegible] younger son of a lord of high degree" in England.

During [illegible] she had as a [illegible] Swallow—"Pete," for short, and a babbling brook of Indiana oratory—who was a monument salesman, but when she [illegible]

Swallow—And this, if I be not mistaken is [illegible]

Miss [illegible] me! Come, Lottie! [illegible]

[illegible] Needle type— [illegible] in a certain particular way to give the very handsomest impression. [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Swallow [illegible] I——

Swallow—There! Say like that 'ere sand-hill over [illegible] in' all this country to [illegible] one [illegible], with the eternal sea, [illegible], beyond—that's the site for your needle. An' put some simple, elegant mottah on her base, like HOPE, in [illegible] inch, high relief letterin'—you catch the [illegible] you create a dignified, noble and solemn effect; in short, a nine- [illegible] effect!

[illegible]

Swallow—[illegible] two words "I SLEEP" [illegible] chaste, very modern [illegible] goin' the rounds in certain [illegible] we do business. But, on the [illegible]

[illegible] me, Mr. Swallow, but I [illegible] Mr. Rawson.

J[illegible] you do, sir.

[illegible] privilege, sir, to shake hands with [illegible] and honorable a bulwark of American finance. Your name, sir, is a [illegible] conservative policy, [illegible] we have the honor [illegible] the largest monument business in the State of New Jersey, but equally throughout the length and breadth of my own native State of Indiana, the population centre of this great [illegible]. To be known, and favorably known, in Indiana is, then, equivalent to being [illegible] everywhere.

Justin—Indeed! Indeed!

Anthony—There's logic for you.

Swallow—"Hark to the voice of Indiana," whisper the sister States. "It is the voice of the people; and the voice of the people—vox populi, vox Dei—is the voice of God."

Justin—You overwhelm me, sir!

Swallow—Thank you; thank you, sir. You honor me too much in saying so, yet yours, sir, is in all truth an enviable lot. Fame, wealth, position, honors—all are yours. From a pinnacle of self-satisfied serenity you may look down upon the puny struggles of your fellow [illegible]. This beautiful and luxurious villa, sir, is in itself an emblem and monument to your success. This handsome young financier, your son, is, as I well see, the pride and joy of his father's heart.

Anthony—There you have me.

Swallow—Nor need I ask [illegible] the stalwart fellow I met yonder on the garden walk is also a scion of the House of Rawson—no, for I saw the father in the son's eyes.

Anthony—Good for Godfrey.

Swallow—Congratulations, sir, upon the two of them—a brace of Romans!

Justin—Thank you.

Swallow—I make bold to postulate that your brother [illegible] your companion and rival in mounting the high ladder of plutocratic attainment.

Anthony—No. Godfrey's interests are along quite different lines. Lately he has taken up farming.

Swallow—A farmer? Well, God prosper the [illegible], say I, and say it with all my heart and [illegible]. Why, agriculture, sir, is the very bone and sinew of this great Commonwealth of ours. "Stay by the farm, young man," is my counsel to the restless, city-bedazzled youth of today. "I have lived the life of cities; I have known it to the innermost, worm-infested core——"

Anthony—How interesting.

Swallow—And it ain't what it's cracked up to be, my young friend; no, sir, not be a long sight! Temptations spawn and fester in them busy marts of traffic.

Anthony—Quite true.

Anthony—Yes—yes!

Swallow—But in the country, far from the madding crowd—ah, there one may breathe God's own pure air, drink water, drink water from the old oaken bucket that hangs in the well, and, in short, live as they was intended to live, by an all wise, all powerful Creator!

Justin—I am surprised, sir, you did not take up oratory as a vocation.

Swallow—Oratory! Ha! Say, we're all like that in Indiana. We imbibe it with our mother's milk. The State resounds and echoes with it from boreal north to sunny south, and from Orient east to sunset west. It was this little oratorical gift of mine—my silver tongue, as friends are wont to speak of it—that first pointed the way to my success in the tombstone business.

Justin—Indeed! Indeed!

Swallow—My Indiana birthright it is that's landed me where I am; and I'm grateful, and deeply grateful, to the mother State that brought me forth.

Justin—You ought to be.

Swallow—But, say—where are the petticoats?

Anthony—Mrs Bumpstead-Leigh and Miss De Salle will be down directly, I think.

Swallow—And the old girl?

Anthony—Mrs. De Salle is ill. I fear you will not have the chance to see her.

Swallow—Look a here. She didn't know I was a-comin', did she?

Justin—By some oversight I neglected to inform her.

Swallow—That's very cleverly said, sir, but I mean it quite contrariwise, and no offence taken or given.

Anthony—Mr. Swallow tells me he has the greatest curiosity to meet Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh, never having talked to a lady bearing a hyphenated name.

Swallow—True it is, though I might add that I recently had the privilege of fillin' an order for a hyphenated tombstun. Four names, in all thirty-six letters, includin' the hyphen, which counts exactly like a letter, and all to go on one line.

Anthony—One line!

Leavitt—Quite a problem.

Swallow—I recommended one o' these here broad stuns, broad and low.

Anthony—Oh, yes!

Swallow—A block o' pink Rhode Island granite, polished so you could count your teeth in it, and on top, a sort of sofa pilluh in white marble, with a very chaste fringe and tassuls at the corners. The whole effect was stylish and up to date.

Anthony—It sounds so!

Swallow—And the name "GWENDOLYN FREDERIKA THREADINGWELL hyphen SMITH" showed up most handsome, hardly seemin' to require the customary "In memory of" above it.

Justin—I can easily understand that.

Swallow—I may declare without boastin' that our company pays more attention to the artistic natures of its mortuary memorials than any other throughout the length and breadth of this country; and in case any of you in this house should ever be under the sad necessity—as Mr. Leavitt here is at the present moment—of considerin' a suitable monument, even so modest a monument as a slab of granite so gray—as the hymn well says—gray bein' the cheapest variety—I take pleasure in leavin' a few o' my professional cards. Oh, you've got one. (To Leavitt.) All inquiries receive the promptest attention. Our representatives are pleased to make calls even where there is no immediate prospect of doin' any business—just to size up the field, as you might say.

Leavitt—That's certainly enterprise.

Swallow—Enterprise? Well, that's what you need in the monument business. You never know when a good thing may drop your way.

Leavitt—I suppose not!

Swallow—Why, it was only just the other day I struck up an acquaintance on the train with a lively young woman in mourning weeds—a peacherino, too, if I may add this word—— (To Leavitt.) But, say Leavitt, what time does my train go?

Leavitt—One seventeen, Mr. Swallow.

Swallow—Ahem! Say, it don't look like I was goin' to have time to eat with the folks, does it?

Justin—But I think there's a dining car on the train, Mr. Swallow.

Swallow—Diner? Cough up a dollar for fancy vittles that ain't worth thirty cents? Not for Swallow!

Justin—I will have Kitson bring you a bite, if that will serve your end better, Mr. Swallow.

Swallow—That will serve the [illegible]. Thank you very kindly—if it wouldn't be much bother.

Justin—Oh, no, no! Not at all.

Swallow—Talk about your [illegible] stiff! I never could see it. W[illegible] throughout the length and breadth of this great country of ours and a open heart. I say, look for what you expect and that's what you'll see. You kow-tow to people and naturally they play the top-lofty. Treat 'em like they was equals and old friends, and old friends they be thence and forever. (To Anthony.) Say, can't you hurry up your bunch of English swells? I came here to look 'em over. And I don't intend to get left.

Anthony—Don't worry. There's plenty of time yet.

Swallow—So you reckoned you was going to marry a DEE Salle, did you, young man? Ha! Ha!

Anthony—Don't speak so loud!

Swallow—Why, ain't the rest going to get let into the joke?

Anthony—Not until I know for certain there is a joke. I must see with my own eyes.

Swallow—You'll see fast enough! Just wait till she finds out who's here. If I can't knock her galley-west with one crook of my little finger, my name ain't Peter Swallow.

Swallow—Why should I? I'd like to know. You've heard the whole story yourself; don't it fit? Ain't it a perfect dovetail? Don't it make her out to be the prettiest, smartest bunch o' lies that ever came down the pike? Oh, and it ain't as if she wasn't capable of it, neither; no, sir—the little monkey!—the pert little monkey!

Anthony—You haven't told us how this Della Sayles looked.

Swallow—Ain't I? Fourteen hands high, she was—just up to my shoulder. Neat, trim, handsome, with the smartest little foot and ankle a girl ever showed; and a waist—well, sir—it was a waist; and when I say waist, well—and—there's nothing more to be said. "Della, you little puss," I used often to say to her, as she was a settin' here (indicates lap) of a late evenin' in front o' the old [illegible]. "Della, you little puss, where'd you ever [illegible] that? Your ma ain't got one. Your dad's a regular rhinoceros. But you—well, the wasp and the butterfly are your only rivals in the waist line, my dear." And she'd laugh, and laugh, and [illegible], and so it would go night after night. Oh, happy days! Happy days!

Anthony—But her features, you haven't [illegible]. What were [illegible]

Swallow—A flower garden, sir, a flower garden. The rose vying with the lily—and her [illegible]

Anthony—Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh has blue eyes.

Swallow—Forget-me-nots! Forget-me-nots! Well, by gosh, she went and forgot me quick enough! She gave me the go-by, and gave it good and hard. At first I was deeply embittered, life was a howling wilderness of despair. Oh, but one gets over them things. For a few weeks, young man, your loss will seem a big thing to you, very like; but then you'll begin to look about you again, and, remember, there [illegible] other fish in the sea. It's that thought [illegible] lightens the [illegible].

Anthony—It's not my case we're discussing, if you please.

Swallow—Ahem! A little wee bit sensitive, ain't ye! Well, I don't blame ye, young feller. I was myself. I'd wince; [illegible] flare up against my best friend. Oh, but if I [illegible] she was a [illegible] tricky, [illegible] I never [illegible] I ran up against [illegible] Elinora Dooze [illegible] She was play[illegible] I saw her. Pooh! Pooh! You call that acting? Why, my little Della could put the razoo all over her, and never let on she was acting at all! That was just the trouble; ye never could tell! (Enter Kitson with plate for Swallow.) Well, I reckon her game's called this time. It's her finish. Ha, ha. (To Kitson.) Thanks. Say, waiter, ain't you got any English mustard in the house?

Kitson—[illegible]

Swallow—Well, bring me some mustard and a cup of coffee and some loaf sugar.

Kitson—Anything else, sir?

Swallow—Well, throw in a couple of toothpicks, and I'll be fixed first rate.

Pete Swallow, the "babbling brook of Indiana oratory," talks on and on, and the others in the picture can't stop him. Maybe it is because they haven't a Maxim silencer. A scene from Mrs. Fisk's play.

The Chapeau Premier

By ANTHONY EUWER

OH, why should I bibble
If clouds leak and dribble?
Now, that's what I'm wantin' to know
Oh the Winter wind harrow
My soul and my marrow,
If I'm first with my new Spring chapeau?

My lid—don't you love it,
And wouldn't you covet
One built for yourself half so cutely?
Would you not be delighted?
Well, don't get excited,
The thing's copyrighted abs'lutely.

The moment 'twas turned
Out the patterns were burned—
Not wholly a bad little ruse if You're enabled to wear
The chapeau solitaire—
The Ne Plus Ultra exclusive.

And even supposin'
It's draggled and frozen,
And I not reimbursed in great measure
By the feeling I get
Whether shiny or wet—
The sensation of exquisite pleasure.

Of coming out first—
A delight all uncursed
With rivals around to alloy it.
How selfish, you say!
Be that as it may,
I'm just catty enough to enjoy it.

So why should I bibble
If clouds leak and dribble?
Now, that's what I'm wantin' to know,
Or the Winter wind harrow
My soul and my marrow,
If I'm first with my new Spring chapeau?

A Memorable Easter Sermon

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

BUD WYSER was a crackerjack salesman.

To a bald-headed man he could sell a comb and brush; to the curator of a zoological garden he had sold rubber boots for the snakes.

He could talk some. His vocabulary consisted of four hundred and ninety more words than were contained in Webster's unabridged.

He landed in Lanesville about three weeks before Easter.

He was representing Trimmer & Toppeak, the Hoboken milliners.

Among other things in his big bag he had a bipedish decoration for an Easter bonnet. It was a beautiful bird that looked like a cross between a Bird of Paradise and a deformed English sparrow.

"And they're stuffed with oatmeal, lady," he was saying to Aunt Estelle, "so that after Easter all you need do is rip it from your bonnet, soak it in hot water for four minutes, and serve. Besides, this is the only specimen I have with me. If you buy it, take my word for it, you will outshine all of the other ladies in church on Easter morning; it's so unique; so odd; so cheap. Thank you; here's your change; no you can rest assured that I will sell THAT bird to no one else in the town."

He didn't sell THAT one, but he sold a bird just like it to every woman in the valley. Aunt Estelle believed him; so did all of the other women to whom he told the story.

Every woman's bonnet, bedecked with the gaudy bird, was guarded as zealously as the old red volume of Pentecostal Hymns.

Easter arrived on schedule without being one minute late.

The tiny white church that stood high up on the hill, which made asthmatic folks who climbed it wheeze like a broken pipe in the church organ, was undergoing a silent pandemonium.

Every woman that entered the church strutted in as proud as the bird on her hat must have been in life, if it ever was alive.

Getting inside, one look around caused a chill to run up every woman's back that made her vertebrae rattle. The second look made her feel as small as the contribution of the wealthiest farmer in town.

Every woman already in the church and those coming in had their bonnets trimmed with the same kind of bird!

Bud Wyser had done his work well, the rascal.

When the Reverend Ebenezer Corntossel climbed into the pulpit he rubbered at those in the church and then held on to the railing to keep himself from falling.

"Brother Pabst," he gasped, absent-mindedly, "my gun."

Then he suddenly remembered where he was.

He sermoned.

Oh, how he lit into that whisp of snipe.

Speaking about the loaves and fishes he sarcastically said that nowadays it would have to be birdseed and fishbones.

The muster of peacocks squirmed uneasily.

Speaking about the old churchgoers he said in the [illegible] days they used pews, but it looked now as if the church would have to install roosts.

That siege of herons sniffed contemptuously.

Speaking about the sign in front of the church he believed that it should be torn down and one put in its place reading "Zion's Evangelical Lutheran Apiary."

The bevy of quail [illegible].

Speaking of Noah sending a dove from the Ark he [illegible]

He was right and he might have added that a player must have everything in golf and then be at the top of his form in order to win in a big tournament over St. George's course, either at medal or match play. I consider it more trying than Prince's or Walton Heath or Mid-Surrey or even the famous stretch of rushes at Westward Ho.

Seeking amateur championship honors there will be a field of one hundred and fifty players of good class, including a dozen stars.

JOHNSON

The Washington terror will open the season against Carrigan's Boston battlers at Fenway Park

Walter Johnson, the greatest pitcher of them all, will tackle the Red Sox in the opening game. Johnson seems to be in as great form as he ever was, and that means all but invincible. He and Collins are expected to renew their pitching duels of last season.

RESTLESS ROOTERS ARE EAGER TO SEE THE FIRST WALLOP AT THE BALL

Bill Carrigan's Red Sox will reach Boston at 8.35 o'clock tomorrow evening and on Tuesday afternoon will open the big league baseball season of 1914 with the Senators at Fenway Park.

The Braves will not come home this week. Some of them will go to Bridgeport from Washington for a game Monday, but the rest will remain in New York tomorrow, practicing at the Polo Grounds. They will all run over to Brooklyn Tuesday and open the National League season there.

[illegible]

The fact that Walter Johnson has been selected to pitch the opening game and that Ray Collins, with whom he had many great duels last year, will probably oppose him is counted upon to draw a huge crowd Tuesday.

At Brooklyn it is believed "Lefty" Tyler will pitch the first game for the Braves while Nap Rucker has been [illegible] Rucker has been reported as [illegible] change if he does [illegible]

CARRIGAN HAS COLLINS PRIMED FOR A BATTLE

By JACK CONWAY.

CINCINNATI, O., April 11.—Bill Carrigan's hustling band of Red Sox will start for Boston immediately after tomorrow's game with the Cincinnati Reds and will arrive in the Hub at 8.35 o'clock Monday night, ready for their first league game of the season with Clark Griffith's Senators on Tuesday. The Fenway Park team is in perfect condition and, of course, hopes to get a flying start in the pennant fight.

Carrigan has not yet announced whom he will use in the box Tuesday against the team from the Capital, but just now it looks as though Ray Collins would be Boston's selection. The big left-hander has done better work on the Spring trip than any of the other Red Sox hurlers and, as he is very effective against Washington, Carrigan will probably depend upon [illegible] the season on the mound for the red hosed athletes.

There is a possibility [illegible] Carrigan may send "Dutch" Leonard to the slab if Tuesday [illegible] cold and cloudy. Collins does his best pitching on bright, sunny days, while the dear old weather man is unable to feaze Leonard.

WALTER JOHNSON ON THE HILL.

[illegible] single run it is a good bet that he will not be beaten under ordinary [illegible] lead if the Vermont youth does the [illegible] work in the box Tuesday.

COLLINS HAS HURRIED ALONG.

[illegible] When [illegible] was operated upon for appendicitis Collins realized that he would have to do the bulk of the twirling for President Lannin's men until Smoky Joe returned to the line-up. Albert A. Rosenthal Wins the Braves' Prize and C. E. Inman Wrote the Winning Red Sox Song

The prize winners in the Boston AMERICAN [illegible] battle song were: Albert A. Rosenthal of No. [illegible] Commonwealth avenue, Allston, and C. E. Inman of No. 82 Exeter street, Boston.

Mr. Rosenthal wrote the prize winning Braves' song and Mr. Inman wrote the prize-winning Red Sox song. They will divide the prize of $25.

The winners were selected by the members of the Red Sox and Braves teams. In the [illegible] committee of ball players on song submitted [illegible] both teams so satisfactorily as these two songs fit the respective teams, and for that reason the [illegible] were chosen.

Here are the two prize-winning songs, the first for the Red Sox and the second for the Braves:

THE RED SOX.

Air—"Marching Through Georgia."

We come from dear old Bean town
The Red Sox that's our name
With bat and ball we conquer all
Who play the baseball game
Pennant that's our middle name
We'll win it once again
Root for the Red Sox of Boston

CHORUS.

Red Sox—Red Sox from Bean town by the sea
Red Sox, Red Sox, pride of Yankeeland
Cheer for the Red Sox, we with you carry on Rooting for the Red Sox of Boston

WITH ZIP AND ZEST AND ZEAL.

Air—"Wearing of the Green."

When Stallings' Braves start in a game
They fight it every bit;
They've earned the name and earned the fame
To never, never quit.
There's Evers, Shmidt and Maranville
[illegible] Connolly and Devil,
They have to kill that little pill
With zip and zest and zeal

CHORUS.

Every Boston Brave's a dandy—
That's a fact; yes, that's a cinch—
Every Boston Brave is handy
With his willow in a pinch.
They corral the drives, both far and near Run like a streak and steal
And they love to shout [illegible]
With zip and zest and zeal

SECOND VERSE.

[illegible] Braves are [illegible]
[illegible] for the Boost, [illegible] are out
[illegible] they are in right
[illegible] Gowdy, Griffith and Thalron
[illegible] and Gilbert, too,

Well Placed Shrubs Big Aid to Rentals

Trees and Plants Raise Property Values

Landscape Architect Tells How Judicious Planting of Shrubs and Trees Brings Dollars.

By LORING UNDERWOOD,
Landscape Architect.

A [illegible] landsca[illegible] the r[illegible] tects [illegible] grou[illegible] h[illegible] [illegible] tive than [illegible] a ha[illegible]

The [illegible] use of [illegible] plants therefore has [illegible] value, not only fr[illegible] point of view of the landscape architect, but also from the point of view of the present or prospective owner of real estate.

There are few things that a home-seeker will pay for more willingly than attractive surroundings. The house lot that is well designed, and has everything in harmony, will, other things being equal, always command a higher rent than will the bleak house and lot lacking a home-like air. Thus it follows that in developing a tract of land for a h[illegible] be the latter large or small, the [illegible] of developing that land [illegible] ing lines lies in making [illegible] and [illegible] tings, rather [illegible] nary real es[illegible] of [illegible] checker-board [illegible] whether [illegible] grades, and needlessly chop[ping] down handsome trees that might [be] left in order to make room for other trees and shrubs of exotic and striking appearance, which make the new development look as unhappy as a [fish] full of fish out of water.

PLANTS RAISE RENTALS.

A striking example of [illegible] economic value in dollars a[illegible] of the use of trees is shown [in] the two accompanying illustrations of residential streets in Somerville. The two-apartment houses on Highland road, although no better built and no more attractive within or without than the houses on Lexington avenue near by, show an investment that nets a return of 50 per [cent] more than the latter.

It is not difficult to see the reason for this. It was a wise man who planned the development of Highland road. The outlay for building a street with the planting spaces as shown in the illustration, is no more than the building of a street of the same size without the planting spaces, because trees and shrubs may be bought at an average of [illegible] hundred, which, together with the loam used to plant them in, does not cost more than surfacing the same area with a macadam road.

To be sure, Highland road is broader than Lexington avenue; but no more land has been wasted in the laying out of the property, because the back yards that go with the houses on Highland road are smaller than those on Lexington avenue. In other words, the planting space that might be used behind the houses is used in front on the road, where it speaks for itself to all who pass by.

The trees and shrubs not [only] please [the eye], they bring comfort in many ways. In addition to the shade they help to keep the [dust] from [blowing] into the house [and] also provide a screen for the ash barrels and similar eyesores left [on] the side of the street for the garbage man to call for.

GOOD INVESTMENT.

Why is it that so many cities and towns throughout the United States have various civic improvements under way, and why is it that the hard-headed business men in these towns are backing these improvements with their pocketbooks? Is it simply because they wish to make the city more beautiful regardless of expense? [By no] means: they realize that it is good business investment. Beautiful [cities and] towns attract desirable citizens, and real estate values as an inevitable consequence increase.

If you wish to attract desirable people you [must] [illegible] desirable surroundings. [illegible] may not make the [illegible] come pretty near mak[illegible] Many towns are awake [to the] fact that in order to keep [illegible] people they have got to make the town attractive to them. [illegible] the experience of many towns [illegible] is not much of a step from [illegible] people to look out [illegible] cleanliness to [illegible] the value of beaut[illegible] The two go hand in ha[nd].

When you once get pe[ople] [talk]ing about public cleanli[ness] [there] can be no limit to the [illegible] that they will grow for attr[active] surroundings on their own [illegible] and by doing so they [illegible] courage the habit of [illegible] homes right to live in, right to w[ork] in, right to look at, right for [the] children as well as for the grow[n-]ups, but they place real estate in the right way to increase its v[alue] [ma]terially.

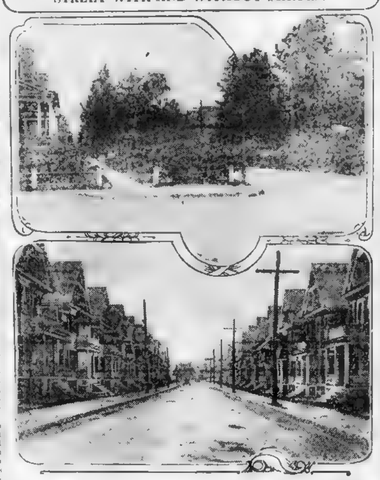
BELMONT GOOD EXAMPLE.

It is interesting to note [how] the town of Belmont in Massachusetts has increased its popularity as a residential district by improving [its] centre. At the start, when ag[itation] began for the abolition of the gr[ade] crossing of the Boston & Maine [rail]road in the centre of the town, [the] citizens had only in mind the saf[ety] and convenience of the public.

The old grade crossing was so dangerous that the Railroad Commissioners decided it must be abolished. However, the citizens did realize that the chief entrance of its town should be as attractive as the front entrance to a dwelling. When one gets off at the railway station of a town he ought to feel that he is approaching the front yard of a place. The surroundings ought to be attractive and neat, so that they give an air of hospitality, rather than like the average front yard of most American towns that presents the appearance of an ugly back yard instead of a hospitable entrance.

What has been the direct result in dollars and cents? The town has been surprised at the public words of commendation that it has received on all hands. Individuals are [com]ing to Belmont to establish their homes, and the town is profiting thereby. The home-seeker has been attracted to this town because of its charming ap[pearance]. [illegible] shows that [illegible] [illegible] so much [illegible] attractive surroundings [illegible] must be the sort of people with whom [he] would like to associate.

STREET WITH AND WITHOUT SHRUBS.



A striking illustration of how judicious planting of shrubbery improves a section is so shown by the above pictures of two Somerville streets.

ADOPT TENEMENT LAW.

Belmont was the first town to adopt [the] [illegible] house law, and it is already reaping its reward in the various developments of private property [illegible] [dollar]s and cents in the way of increased [val]ue of land and attracting a class [of] people whose taxes will materially [help] the town treasury.

[This] is only one instance of what [many] towns are doing in Massachusetts [illegible] because they wish [illegible], but [illegible] to the town treasury by setting the pace for a [illegible] of real estate development.

[illegible] a town or city attractive is that there[illegible] well as earned. The landscape architect who is worthy of the name ought to be able to save his fee for his client by efficient planning and by guarding against wasteful methods of construction. [illegible] difference whether [illegible] of a city [or] the laying out of a park or a home, the work that is well done, [acc]ording to a definite plan, is al[ways] the cheapest in the end. [Con]versely, real estate that is laid [out] [hap]hazard way always brings the most meagre returns to its owner.

KNOWLEDGE OF REALTY BONDS IS ESSENTIAL

Investing Public Should Be Familiar with Differennt Kinds of Real Estate Securities.

W[ith] the [inc]reased output of real estate [bonds of al]l kinds and classes, [esp]ecially from New York, a knowl[edge] [of the] kinds of bonds [illegible] [illegible] New York [illegible] selling real estate bonds, followed [by] revelations that these bonds had behind them nothing tangible for the protection of their holders.

Real estate bonds may roughly be separated into two classes—mortgage bonds and debenture bonds. In the case of the mortgage bonds each issue of bonds is protected by some piece of separate and distinct property.

In Boston, such bonds are issued on down-town mercantile structures and are safe investments, as the earning power of such structures is [almo]st automatic. No great business acumen is required for the successful management of such buildings.

SECOND MORTGAGE BONDS.

[In] contrast with this class of real [estate] bonds, there are so-called [illegible] bonds which are in reality [secon]d not first-mortgage bonds. [Th]e company issuing these bonds is [usu]ally a concern dealing in equities—[th]at is properties which are already [enc]umbered with a first mortgage.

In such ca[ses] the personal equation figures to so large an extent that it is not a good risk. The integrity of the investment depends upon the [sk]ill of the management of the com[pan]y in handling the business. Un[fo]rtunate purchases, poor investments [by] the company, may result in such [lo]sses that the company may become [un]able to meet its obligations.

[Suc]h has been the case with a number of realty investment companies which have gone into bankruptcy within the past few months in New York. In such cases, where the company goes to the wall, the first mortgagees, of course, have the first [cla]im on the property, and anything left, after foreclosure proceedings, is divided up among the bondholders. Frequently the loss to the public from such investments is very heavy.

NOT REALLY BONDS.

Bonds of this class are not really bonds, where the amount of the investment is well secured, but partake rather of the character of stocks, where the investment turns out good or bad, depending on the business [sag]acity and shrewdness of the management.

The same weakness holds good in the case of debenture bonds. In this [ca]se the property is simply a written promise on the part of the company issuing the security to pay the sum of the bond, with interest. Bonds of this character are issued by the United States government, where the [sim]ple promise to pay stamped on the face of the bond makes it as good as currency.

In the case of real estate investment companies, however, the promise [illegible] lent on the [illegible] concern, [illegible] [illegible] the investor in realty [illegible] first ascertain whether [illegible] first mortgage bond, second[illegible] or debenture bond—and should act accordingly.

EXPECT CHANGES IN CHARACTER OF BOYLSTON ST.

Removal of Tech and Sale of Exeter Street Yards Should Alter Appearance of Street.

With the removal of the Institute of Technology to Cambridge, the probable sale of the Boylston street fr[ontage] of the Exeter street yards of th[e] [Bos]ton & Albany Railroad and the [gener]al change in the character of the [illegible] Boylston street from [illegible] to the Fenway—seems likely to come in for some im[por]tant changes within the next few [ye]ars.

A number of real estate men predict that this thoroughfare will, in another decade, become the "Fifth avenue" of Boston.

While Boylston street, because of its accessibility to the Back Bay, Brookline and the Newtons is logically situated to become such a centre, and, in fact, already contains many "specialty stores," the number of "breaks" in the street places it under a severe handicap.

BREAKS IN STREET.

The Public Garden, the present Tech site, the Exeter street yard, a[ll] serve to break up the continuity of the street, a necessity in order for a thoroughfare to develop to its fullest extent.

The possibility of all the "open places" on Boylston street, excepting the Public Garden, being filled in with mercantile structures is very bright. Whether Boylston street becomes a Fifth avenue or not will, in a large measure, depend on this factor.

Whether the Tech site may be utilized for commercial places or not, when the Institute moves to Cambridge, is a question now being debated before the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

The ability of Tech to sell the property hinges upon the legality of restriction now in effect on it. Judge Davis, in the Land Court, has already ruled that the property may be sold only on condition that all the parties concerned join in a deed. Tech contends that the sale should be allowed because of the change, since the establishment of the Institute, in the character of the locality.

MAY SELL STRIP.

In the case of the Exeter street yards the sale of the strip of land along Boylston street seems more probable. The railroad has indicated a willingness to sell such a strip. Negotiations have been conducted during the past month and are still pending for the sale of the property.

Its sale would mean the removal of one "break" in Boylston street, and at the same time remove an eyesore that has held up the development of that section of Boylston street for a number of years.

The upper end of Boylston street, lying in the Fens, is another p[a]rt of Boylston street that seems destined to see some important changes. This end of the thoroughfare has been restricted to residential use. But the restrictions expire the first of next January.

The erection of public and semi public institutions of various kinds in the immediate locality has made it evident that the character of future development on this street will be commercial, rather than residential.

Developments in Medford and Watertown Under Way by Mr. Palmer.

Two developments—one in Medford, the other in Watertown—have been commenced by M. W. Palmer, a well-known Somerville builder.

In Medford, Mr. Palmer is constructing twelve dwellings. T[hey] will be located on Gove and Emery streets, and will be two-family dwellings. The dwellings on Emery street will be of stucco construction. They will contain suites of five and seven, and six and seven rooms, finished in quartered oak and birch. They will range in price from $5,600 to $6,500.

The construction in Watertown comprises eleven two-family and three single-family dwellings. They will be located on Upland road, Appleton street and Appleton terrace. Features of the dwellings will be built-in china closets and book cases.

The dwellings under construction were designed by Grant R. Joslyn and Melbourn R. Clarey.

ARCHITECTURE ADVANCED FAST IN PAST DECADE

Artist-Crafts Developing More Rapidly in Boston Than Anywhere Else in America.

GOOD CRAFTSMEN NEEDED

By RALPH ADAMS CRAM,
President Boston Society of Architects.

During the first fourteen years of the twentieth century the architectural advance in America has been greater than during all the hundred years of the nineteenth century. In the latter case, the first quarter showed a swift degeneration of that architectural sense which is, or should be, the birthright of all people, and, for the first time, what practically amounted to its total extinction. After fifty years of comprehensive barbarism the recovery began, and this recovery has been increasing in momentum ever since the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

Not only has this remarkable development shown itself among architects, but equally on those on whom the architectural profession must rely, not only for its [illegible] but for its acceptance—in other words the general public. Perhaps the most remarkable note of progress, so far as architects themselves are concerned, is the increasing realization of the fact that [illegible] and theoretical designs are secondary matters and that the [illegible] quality in the design, together with honest, lucid and genuine construction are prime factors in architectural success.

In one respect architects are held back from the full working out of their principles by the fact that thus far there has been no correspon[ding] advance in the standards and methods of the building trades. On the contrary, there is a [decided] falling off in this direction, even from the position maintained half a century ago. Apart from that portion of structural engineering which is [done] with iron and steel, there appears to be a constant retrogression in stone cutting and masonry, in carpentry and cabinet work, in plastering, ornamental metal, etc. This is due not so much to the degenerative principle among general contractors as [to] the [illegible] of the workmen themselves.

DECLINE IN CRAFTSMANSHIP.

The methods of the [illegible] seem to have [illegible] of conventions [illegible] good work[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] take off [illegible] to the work[illegible]

In a recent instance I myself had to give a [illegible] of the way stone should be laid up and pointed [illegible] and iron work finished. As soon as the workmen grasped the several ideas they became interested and went ahead to do work which, in the end, proved entirely acceptable. This fact indicates that the present co[ndi]tion of things is not due either to inherent inefficiency or to a total collapse of the element of personal interest. It does indicate, however, that somewhere an influence is being brought to bear on the men to [de]stroy in them all those personal elements that make them self respecting and honorable craftsmen and that differentiate them from soulless machines.

Several of these influences are easily to be discovered. One is the abandonment to so great an extent of the old apprentice system, which is the only sound basis for decent workmanship. Another is an official discouragement of rivalry and emulation, both of which work toward a raising rather than a lowering of the standards. A third is the point which we hear so much of, restricting the number of workmen in order to increase the daily wage, and a fourth is an equally conspicuous tendency toward holding back good workmen so that their product shall be no better than that of the least efficient amongst them.

GOOD CRAFTSMEN IMPORTANT.

So long as these ill-advised practices continues, so long will good workmanship suffer and architecture be deprived of one of its most important elements of success. The fact cannot be too strongly emphasized that when in an architect's office a design has been completed and specifications written, a beginning only has been made toward the production of a great building. The artisan and the craftsman have quite as much to do with good architecture as the designer himself and it does little good for designs to progress in excellence if the workmanship remains stationary or is retrograding.

There are many evidences of an imminent recovery from the present [un]wholesome state of things. Here [in] Boston the artist-crafts are developing more rapidly than almost anywhere in America, and there are now genuine craftsmen whose cabinet work and carving, metal work both in gold and silver and in iron, brass and copper, has now touched a point of excellence unknown for several centuries. In all these cases the retarding influences named above do not operate.

Instead, there is unlimited rivalry and emulation, while the bad division between the designer and the workman has largely been done away with. Something of the kind must take place amongst artisans as well, and when this imperative reform has been accomplished there is nothing to prevent an architectural development that will be notable in the extreme and that cannot fail to have a wholesome influence on the whole problem of industry, and of economics as well.

SPRING REAL ESTATE OUTLOOK IS FAVORABLE

Land Market Active, Mortgage Money Abundant and Spring Prospects Bright.

By FREDERIC H. VIAUX.
Secretary-Treasurer, Boston Real Estate Exchange.

Ten years ago there was much pessimism as to Boston's future, which, whether warranted or not, affected the real estate market unfavorably, and diminished the absorption of land for improvement. Today, despite sporadic instances of low cash sales, the land market as a whole is active, mortgage money is abundant and fairly cheap, and the outlook is good. How much the distrust naturally excited by the local railroad troubles in movable securities has tended to attract investors' attention to immovable securities, is difficult of approximation, but doubtless such influence is a factor of some weight.

Above all the remarkable series of structures of the first class, erected in Boston during the past five years, is the best evidence of the confidence of business now in Boston's present and future progress. For many of these enterprises are not what may be found in every American city of size, but are typical of a great metropolis, such as Boston and its sister communities together make, and are notable as the best of their kind not only in the United States, but in the world.

FINE DOWN-TOWN STRUCTURES.

Consider a few of them: the great cold storage houses on the extension of Summer street, unique buildings for such purposes, the new fish warehouses, a truly metropolitan improvement without its equal anywhere, the great Y. M. C. A. building, the finest in the country, or elsewhere; the new Paint Furniture building, the most elaborate furniture warehouse in the world; the Opera House, with its fine auditorium unsurpassed for convenience and attractiveness; the Copley-Plaza, as [illegible] and attractive a hotel as may be found anywhere, although it does not tower to the skies; the Filene building, model of the modern department store; the Elizabeth Peabody House, the finest social settlement [illegible] the new Merchants Bank building, latest of urban office buildings, with its beautiful facade, which would be considered a palace abroad and worthy of following its late predecessors, the fine buildings of the Shawmut, First and Second National Banks. Then we have the new Custom House, permitted by the United States government to tower to the skies, and this structure will certainly be unique among similar world structures.

We have the largest dry dock on the coast promised us and a great public dock improvement in East Boston. We have the Park square improvement in progress, and we are talking about the railroad yards on Boylston street. We have a gem of a new theatre on Tremont street, the Wilbur, with the Cort, lately opened. There are others, but these are enough to show the metropolitan development in progress and doubtless to continue.

TOO MUCH LEGAL TINKERING.

What is much needed for the best interests of Boston real estate, and orderly and progressive development, is a true and abiding appreciation by those who govern us of the fundamentals underlying real estate prosperity, chief of which is permanence of real estate conditions. Constant tinkering with the laws affecting land and buildings, the [illegible] of petty and unnecessary restrictions and servitudes, of new burdens on realty which pay over 60 per cent. of our receipts from taxes—these are the deterrents of land buying and improvement.

The annual attacks on land in the Legislature are many and varied and many of them are humorously senseless and needless. Ignorance of real estate conditions is clear in much of the projected legislation. A large part of the time of the directors, and of the legislative committee and the executive work of the Boston Estate Exchange, is consumed in the defence of our real estate interests from inexpedient and unwarranted legislation.

Another cardinal fact about Boston that should be thoroughly understood and kept in mind is that considerably more than one-half of our taxable lands is still unoccupied, and that about us on every side for a ten-mile radius, there are a score or more of attractive communities, every one of which is an eager competitor with us in the land business. We cannot afford to hand our land market especially for the small house, to our competitors, so long as they refuse alliance, by burdens which are not common to all.

Plan Lynn Buildings to Cost $1,000,000

[illegible] shoe factories, to cost nearly [illegible], will be built in Lynn on reclaimed land on the Sea street boulevard, according to an announcement by James H. Quinn of No. 66 Central avenue. The buildings will house companies to employ over 1,000 shoe workers.

The announcement of the plans marks the commencement of the biggest building boom Lynn has had in a number of years.

Complete Allston Apartment House

The six-story apartment house at 1149 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, under construction by Spector Siegel, has just been completed. It was built of brick with limestone trimmings. The structure contains forty suites of from two to five rooms each, and is equipped with A. [illegible] elevators. Chamberlain & Wheeler are sole agents.

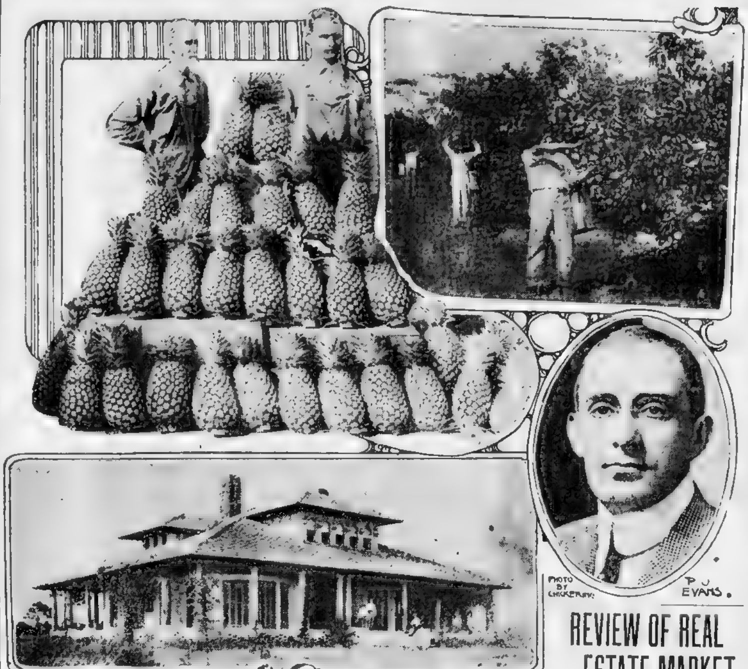
Purchase Land for New Catholic Church

Frederick L. McGowan has sold for [illegible] R. Weston to the Catholic Archbishop of Boston, about 30,000 square feet of land, corner of Samoset avenue and Lewis streets, directly opposite Waverley Station. Plans are being prepared for the erection of a church which is to be built of brick.

New Englanders "Fruit Barons" on Isle of Pines

Yankee Brains Play Big Role in Developing the Isle

TYPICAL SCENE ON ISLE, ITS LUSCIOUS FRUIT, AND BOSTONIAN WHO HELPED DEVELOP IT.



4,500 Americans Raise Big Fruit Harvests on the Isle of Pines.

Stevenson's "Treasure Island" is supposed to have been founded on the Isle of Pines. Certainly on this beautiful garden island Nature stored her treasure in abundance.

No man, however, had shown evidence of a just appreciation of the bountiful resources of the island until the spirit of American enterprise took possession only a few years ago.

The Isle of Pines is situated just south of Cuba, eighty-eight miles from the city of Havana. It gained its name because it was originally a forest of pine trees with here and there palm trees—royal palms, buttle palms, date palms and other kinds of tropical foliage.

It is known that Columbus landed here in 1492. A mountain on the island and the beach at the same point are named for the discoverer. But through uncounted centuries before he came, and through generation after generation of Spanish control, the resources of the Isle of Pines lay untouched.

Shortly after the Spanish-American war a number of American capitalists bought up large tracts of land on the island; and since then American enterprise has brought about a great transformation.

A few years ago there were no roads or bridges, only trails leading from the old Spanish settlements to various parts of the island. Today there are hundreds of miles of good automobile roads, and scores of motor cars and trucks traverse them daily.

AMERICANS DEVELOP ISLE.

One hundred years ago Don Castro was called the "king" of the Isle of Pines and traded in slaves, of which it is said he owned about 2,000. The brick walls of some of his slave quarters now form parts of larger modern brick houses built by Americans. Today there are a number of good-sized hotels, eleven churches, eight schools, nine sawmills, all kinds of stores and shops, garages, postoffices, wireless telegraph, several banks and two newspapers. American energy, brains and capital have accomplished in the past seven years what the native Cuban would not have managed to do in seven centuries.

There are now 4,500 Americans living on the Isle of Pines. Two steamship lines make regular stops, and this coming Fall will see direct lines from Boston and New York. This past Winter more than 1[illegible]0,000 crates of fruits and vegetables were exported. Next year something like half a million boxes of fruit will be shipped.

Today the Isle of Pines is a gem of American civilization in a tropical setting. It is established socially and commercially and is fast gaining the reputation to which it is entitled.

It is of interest to note the part played by New Englanders in the civilizing process which the island has undergone. Between 8,000 and 9,000 acres on the island have been bought by people of New England within the past seven years, and within the same period hundreds of New Englanders have taken up their permanent residence on the island.

BOSTON MAN ENTHUSIAST.

The man who more than anyone else is responsible for the interest aroused among the people of this section is P. J. Evans of Boston. He has also had much to do with the development of the island, and knows it from end to end.

Mr. Evans is an enthusiast on the subject and presents facts and figures that justify his enthusiasm.

"The people wonder at what has been done on the Isle of Pines," said Mr. Evans, "and it is surprising to people unfamiliar with conditions there. The hardest pioneer work is already done and though a great deal has been taken out of the island its marvellous resources are even yet scarcely known.

"The Yankee is in possession. The great estates that once belonged to the Spaniards and [illegible] Cubans are today his property. He has bought up the resources of this wonderfully fertile place and only waits the opportune moment to export his marble and mahogany. He also means to revive the tobacco and cattle industries. Meanwhile he has turned his energy, and, with shrewd wisdom, much of his cash to citrus fruit culture. He is raising grapefruit, pineapples, oranges and lemons, as well as Irish potatoes, [illegible] plants, peppers and other Winter vegetables.

"Ships taking the short route through the Panama Canal will pass the very front door of the Isle of Pines. Already the Hamburg-American line and other steamship companies have issued maps showing this.

"The Isle of Pines is only a short sea trip from Galveston, New Orleans, Mobile and Key West. It is about the same distance from Boston to the Isle of Pines as from Boston to Kansas City or St. Paul.

SIZE OF RHODE ISLAND.

"The possibility of better health, the opportunity to make money and the desire to grow with a new country have [illegible] thousands of Americans to become property owners on this tropical [illegible]. The Isle of Pines is about the size of Rhode Island. It contains three-quarters of a million acres, and is thirty-three miles wide and thirty-four miles long. The temperature averages about 75 degrees, it is never too hot nor too cold. There can never be a freezing temperature because [illegible] one hundred miles south of the [illegible] of the Tropic Zone, and is protected from frost at all times by the Gulf stream. The rainfall averages fifty-six inches for the year and most of it comes during the Summer months when the fruit trees need the rain, while in California irrigation is necessary because the rainfall occurs in the Winter months.

"There is always a good breeze on the Isle of Pines and the nights are cool. There are eighteen fresh water rivers which empty into the Carribean Sea. Good fishing, boating and bathing are there every day in the year. The residents need neither coal nor winter overcoats. Living is cheap because something can be raised every day in the year.

"The [illegible] Spanish style architecture, the buildings which are used [illegible] stores and dwellings, here and [illegible] Cuban driving his oxen and [illegible] able mountains along the [illegible] ever make the island a picturesque resort for tourists.

BIG FRUIT CROPS.

"Tarpon, Spanish mackerel, red-snapper and barracouta fishing make things lively for the sportsman. The fellowship of the plantation and grove owners is congenial. A delightful climate and assured market at excellent prices and the knowledge that property values are always on the increase make for optimism.

"Hundreds of New England men and women have visited the island on tours of inspection. Nearly all have bought land there and many have sold their Northern homes and moved to the more favorable location, having found that they can market their products here in Boston at a far greater profit than that to be made from suburban farms with a great deal more effort.

"Such American names as McKinley, Westport, and Central City, borne by the leading towns indicate to what extent the island has been Americanized. These names are familiar to the local dealers in pineapples and grapefruit.

"These fruits are not produced anywhere in higher quality than at the Isle of Pines. They bring top notch prices in Northern markets."

Mr. Evans has been an enthusiastic and untiring developer, a leader for the island and a capable sales booster for its products. He is treasurer and general manager of the Isle of Pines Co-operative [illegible] Co., which raises pineapples weighing from six to fifteen pounds that retail in the Boston market at from forty cents to one dollar each. His company has about 100,000 pineapple plants in the ground.

Brookline Broker Takes New Quarters

Frank A. Russell, who deals exclusively in Brookline real estate and formerly occupied a building jointly with the Boulevard Trust Company, Coolidge Corner, has removed to new office at No. 1315 Beacon street, which the trust company has erected for him in order to incorporate the space he formerly occupied into their own quarters. Mr. Russell's [illegible] Coolidge Corner office will be open on Patriots' Day, where automobile service will be maintained for the benefit of his customers.

Gain in Building Figures for 1914

[illegible] of New [illegible] land building operations from the first of the year to Wednesday [illegible] contracts of about two [illegible] dollars, over the corresponding period last year. [illegible] year the building operations amounted to $[illegible] 715,000 [illegible] 1913 [illegible] aggregated [illegible] year, in the history of New England building [illegible] the present year [illegible] 1912 when $[illegible] building operations were recorded [illegible] were [illegible] by the F. W. Dodge Company.

$36,000 Brookline Estate Transferred

The estate at No. 219 Gardner Road, corner of Tappan street, Brookline, has been sold by Mrs. Ella [illegible] Burdett to Paul E. Fitzpatrick, who buys for occupancy. The estate consists of a large dwelling house and stable and 43,203 square feet of land and is assessed as follows: House $14,000; stable, $2,500; land, $19,500, making a total of $36,000. The sale was negotiated through the office of William Lincoln and Son.

BIG DOWN-TOWN BUILDINGS TO BE COMMENCED

Beauty, as Well as Utility, Key-Note of Structures to Be Constructed This Spring.

A number of important additions to Boston's big down-town office-buildings are now under way, or will be commenced shortly. These new structures will add several millions to Boston's taxable property, and will furnish several hundred new offices for Fall occupancy.

Plans for the new structures have further emphasized the general tendency of architects to combine beauty with utility and indicate that the new structures when completed will offer a pleasing contrast to down-town buildings finished ten years ago.

Buildings completed during the past two years make apparent the fact that owners, as well as architects are considering the down-town office from an angle in which the aesthetic as well as the utilitarian aspect plays a part.

On Washington street, two important structures are now under construction. [illegible] on the site of the old [illegible] building at the corner of Winter and Washington streets—the costliest [illegible] in the city. Work on this building has progressed rapidly and the exterior is fast nearing completion. The building will be twelve stories high and, with the lot, will represent an investment of more than $2,000,000. The owner is George A. Carpenter.

$500,000 DEXTER BUILDING.

The other structure, which will be known as the Dexter Building, is located near Winter street. It will cost, above the land about $500,000. Plans were drawn by Andrews, Jacques and Rantoul. The building is being constructed by heirs of Franklin Dexter, and has been leased to A. W. Perry for twenty years.

At the corner of Court street and Court square, work of razing the present buildings to make way for a new twelve-story bank building has already commenced. The new structure will be built of granite on the two lower stories, and of light brick with stone trimmings above. John L. Bates and Richard DeB. Boardman are the trustees of the proposed structure.

A six-story building will be constructed at No. 128-134 Federal street, corner of Matthews street, by the President and Fellows of Harvard University. It has been leased for a long term of years to A. W. Perry. Plans for the structure have been prepared by C. H. Blackall.

BUILDING FOR JAYNES.

Another building planned for construction this Spring, will be located at Nos. 29 to 23 Edinboro street, in the wholesale woolen and clothing district. The proposed structure will be six stories high and will be built by Daniel P. Collins.

In the South End, work will commence soon on a ten-story structure to cost about $750,000 for the Jaynes Drug Company. The new structure will be located on Washington street, corner of Asylum, on what formerly was known as the "Female Asylum" property, which is now being razed.

Another important building in the South End will be the nine-story addition to the Franklin Square House, at the corner of East Newton and Washington street, which will cost $250,000. Work of demolishing the structures on the site at present has already commenced. It is expected to be completed about October 15.

NEW SUBWAYS TO AID GROWTH OF HUB SUBURBS

Accelerated Demand for Property Will Result Upon Completion of Tubes Now Under Way.

Much impetus is expected to be given suburban development by Boston's new subways—the Boylston street subway, the Dorchester tunnel to Andrew square and the Cambridge and East Boston tunnel lines—now under construction.

These new transit facilities—when completed—are expected to result in the development of outlying sections, now sparsely settled, and to relieve congestion [illegible] the more [illegible] settled sections of the city.

Evidence of [illegible] development which follows a [illegible] transit facilities has already been apparent during the past two years in Allston and Brighton, where unusual building activity has been manifested since the Boylston street tube was commenced.

INCREASED REALTY DEMAND.

A large part of the development was in anticipation of an increased demand for property resulting from the construction of the tunnel. This development is expected to be even more rapid with the completion of the tunnel.

In the more outlying sections—Auburndale, Brookline and the Newtons—the effect of the Boylston street tunnel is already being felt though not to so marked an extent as in Brighton and Allston. A still larger demand for property in these sections, however, is expected to result upon the completion of the tunnel.

The effect of the Dorchester tunnel on the demand for property is not expected to be as [illegible] as that of the Boylston street subway. Dorchester, South Boston and the other sections which this tunnel will feed are already largely built over, and there is little possibility left for improvement in these sections.

CAMBRIDGE WILL BENEFIT.

Neponset, Ashmont and Milton, however, will in a considerable measure, be benefited by this tunnel in the way of accelerated development.

The Cambridge-East Boston tunnel will have the least effect on property values. While they will be an added convenience to the public, it is not expected that very material realty improvements will result from its construction.

It is expected that whatever development does come from this improvement will be derived by the towns adjacent to Cambridge. East Boston is becoming more and more of an industrial centre and it is likely that persons employed in that section will as a result of the new direct line to Cambridge, live there or in some of the sections to it.

Transfer Estate at No. 204 Milk St

The estate at Nos. 204 and 206 Milk street has been transferred by [illegible] H. Johnson, trustee for the Edward Wheelwright estate to [illegible] W. Fuller. The property comprises [illegible] square feet of land and is [illegible] assessment of $[illegible]5,500.

The grantor was represented by C. W. Whittier & Bro., and the [illegible] by Frederick L. McGowan.

Grow Pineapples

IN THE ISLE OF PINES

You Can Make $2,000 to $5,000 a year from ten acres of our fertile frostless land planted to orange, grapefruit or lemon trees, with pineapples, vegetables or other crops growing between the rows.

Isle of Pines Grapefruit has been sold this season at excellent prices. One grower who got 1,000 boxes into the early September markets made a net profit of $3,500 over and above the cost of picking, packing, shipping and other expenses. Another grower shipped 900 boxes from a four-year old grove and realized over $1.50 a box net profit, or about $1,500 from his very first crop. The market price at present for Isle of Pines Grapefruit is from $4 to $5 a box.

Healthful, Delightful Climate The climate of the Isle of Pines is far-famed for its healthfulness. The drinking water is as fine as can be found anywhere. Its mineral springs rival the most famous in the world. The temperature is very even and frost has never been known. It is seldom that the mercury goes above 90, and it has never gone below 47, according to the records covering a period of years. Cases of rheumatism, asthma, stomach trouble and many other maladies are cured by residence on the island. NO MALARIA OR FEVERS—NO SUNSTROKE OR HEAT PROSTRATIONS.

Own a Plantation There where you can enjoy the mild, delightful climate 12 months a year, realize a comfortable income from the cultivation of 10 acres, and associate with other PROGRESSIVE Americans now living there and who are fast making the Island a second California.

Isle of Pines

Is 90 miles south of Havana, Cuba—only four days from New York by steamer. It is an island of eternal June, fanned by ocean breezes and protected by the warm waters of the Gulf Stream from the blighting frosts which devastate Florida's groves. Frost is unknown there. Irrigation for fruit trees is unnecessary. Our climate is the finest in the world, Winter or Summer.

Every month is harvest time. You can grow three crops a year. NO COLD, BARREN WINTER TO ENDURE WHILE THE GROUND LIES IDLE, BRINGING IN NO INCOME. The Isle of Pines is in every sense an American colony. You will feel at home there. Over 6,000 Americans are interested here, and over 99 per cent. of the land is owned by them. A large number of American settlers is there to bid you welcome.

Investors Attention

REAL ESTATE

IS THE FOUNDATION OF ALL WEALTH

THE SAFEST INVESTMENT
known is FIRST mortgages on well located real estate.

THE SOUNDEST INVESTMENT
known is desirable real estate in a growing City or Town, and a greater opportunity for profit than any other safe investment.

The President of one of the largest Savings Banks in Boston told me the other day that they have never lost a single dollar in their mortgage department.

Small investors should deposit their money in banks that loan their money on first mortgages on real estate instead of buying worthless land, mining or other well-advertised stocks.

PROOF OF SUCCESS

This window display of our big Pineapples—the Crushed Pineapple in sanitary glass jars for family use, and the Pineapple Syrup for the Soda Fountain—at the Cobb Hersey Co. store in Dewey Sq., near the South Station, is proof that we have "MADE GOOD."
Coupled with this statement we invite you to send for a free copy of the

"ISLE OF PINES BULLETIN"

This illustrated literature will show you how Pineapples and Grapefruit are being raised on our plantations and will also tell you how you may secure an interest in the profits of this CO-OPERATIVE enterprise by paying a number of small monthly payments to suit your convenience and means.

COBB, HERSEY CO.

If You Would Like to Make Money Here Is Your Opportunity

You can make money with your small monthly savings. You can secure an increasing income without interfering with your present occupation.

We OWN AND OPERATE THE LARGEST PINEAPPLE PLANTATION ON THE ISLE OF PINES in addition to thousands of Grapefruit trees (the trees, however, are not yet in bearing). We are unable to supply the demand for Pineapples and have orders for fruit on file waiting to be filled from our next and succeeding shipments. These orders are placed by the best fruit dealers throughout New England and also in Canada

THIS CO-OPERATIVE PROFIT-SHARING PLAN IS BASED UPON GOOD, SOUND BUSINESS PRINCIPLES. We are increasing the size of our plantation for permanency for the purpose of MAKING MONEY for everybody connected with the enterprise. You have in this advertisement proof that it is thoroughly and firmly established. FOR THE PLAN AND FULL PARTICULARS WRITE YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS PLAINLY ON THE COUPON CONTAINED IN THIS ANNOUNCEMENT. THE LITERATURE WILL BE MAILED TO YOU AT ONCE. ADDRESS ALL CORRESPONDENCE TO

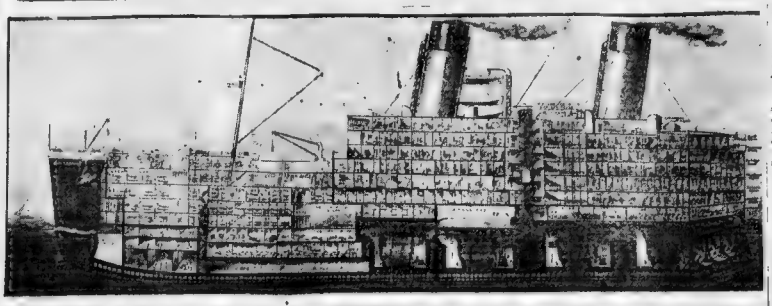
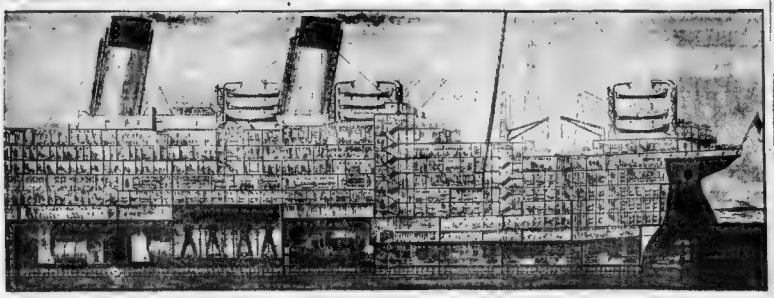
Launch Giant White Star Liner Britannic at Belfast

HUGE STEAMSHIP WHICH SUPERSEDES OLYMPIC AS LARGEST BRITISH STEAMSHIP IN WORLD





The New White Star Line triple-screw steamer Britannic, which was launched at Belfast, has displaced that of the Olympic as the largest vessel afloat in the world. It is 900 feet long and will have a speed of 21 knots. It will be used in the White Star Line's new departure in ship building for the Liverpool-New York service. In addition the steamer will carry all the latest safety appliances, including a full complement of boats for all those on board and three will be commanded by passengers, and with much greater ease and safety than ever before. She will be fitted with the latest improvements in wireless telegraphy and submarine signaling apparatus. Among the other features of her equipment are five private bathrooms and two Turkish baths.

Resume Steamship Service to Bangor

Commencing next Monday, the Eastern Steamship Corporation will resume its summer business between Boston and Bangor, after a period of four months' layup. During the winter months boat has been kept free of ice by the steamer [illegible] for that purpose.

Close Shop During Fernald Funeral

The funeral of Thomas L. Fernald, one of the best known merchants in the country, who died at his home in Somerville on Wednesday, was held yesterday afternoon. The offices of Seth W. Fuller Company, with which Mr. Fernald was connected, the Boston & Maine Railroad and the Eastern Steamship Lines were closed during the hour as a mark of respect.

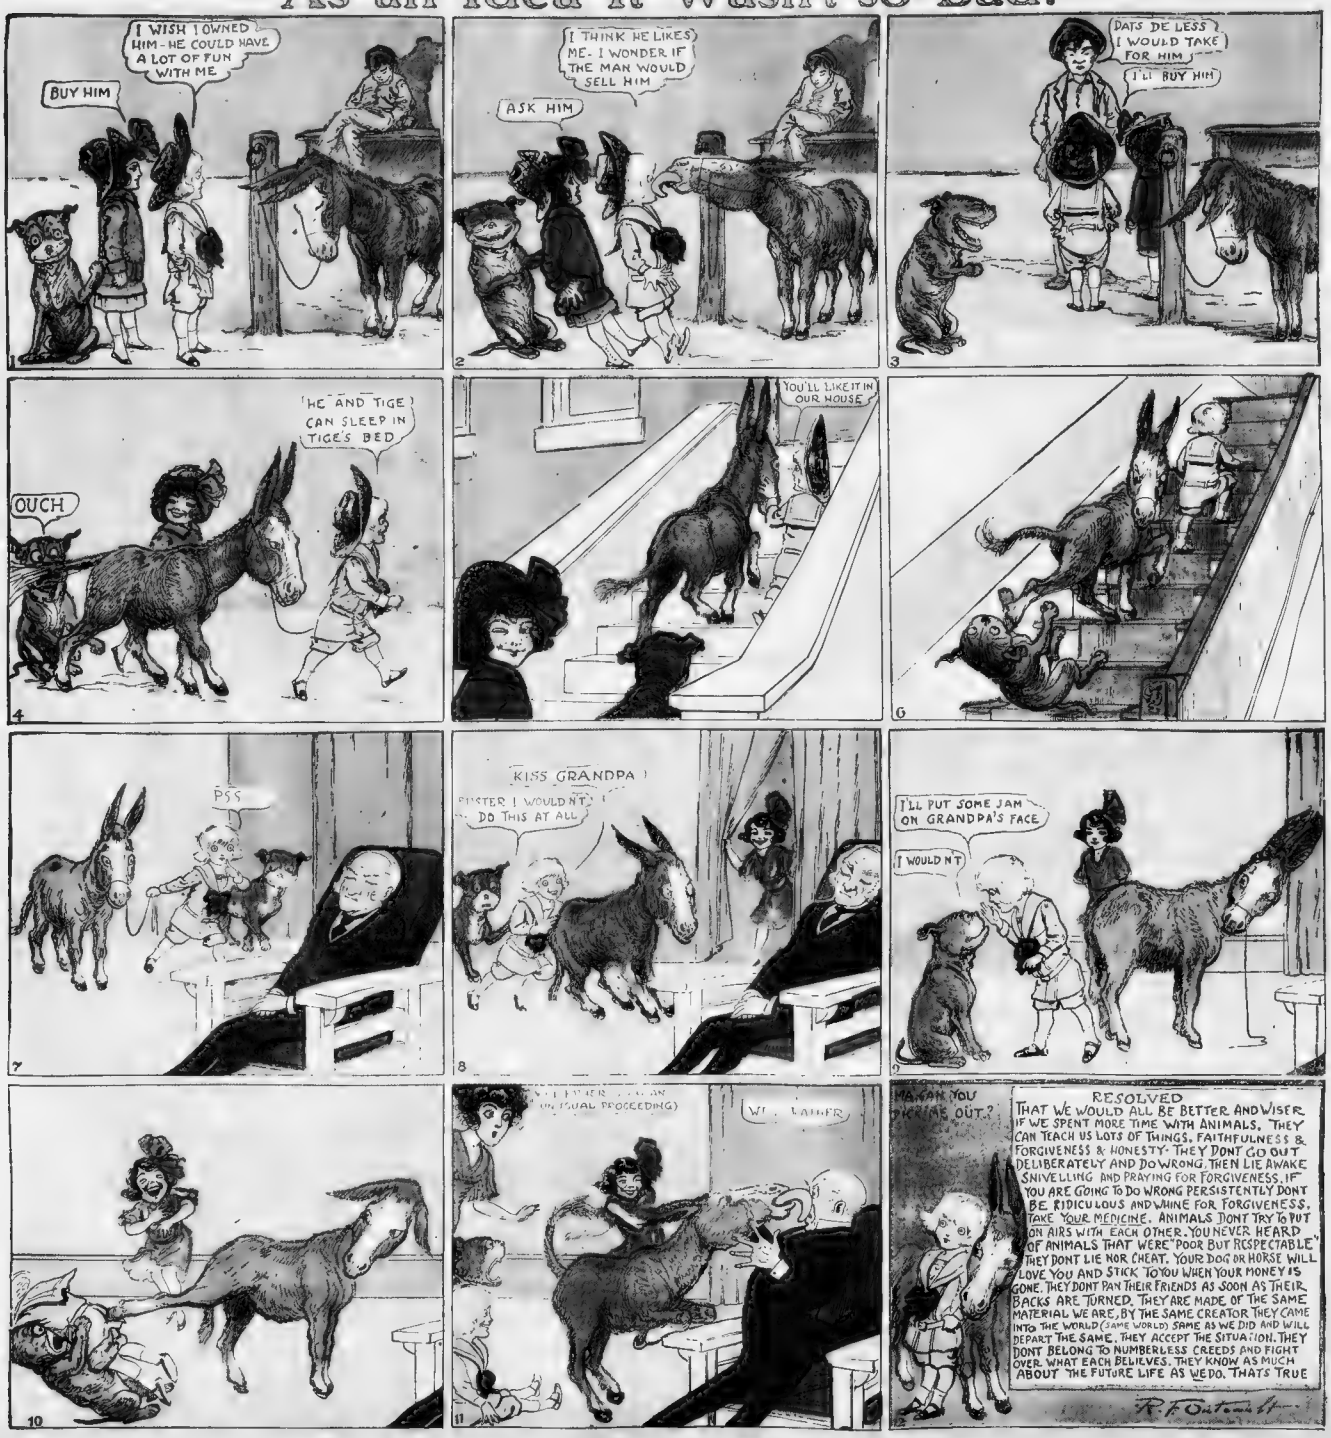
As an Idea It Wasn't so Bad!



Humanity up a Tree

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

YOU see here a picture of life as it was once.

The man in the tree fighting back the savage beast, trying to protect the woman and the child and keep his own life, was the first "family man." The beast that attacked him, the tiger with the sabre tooth, is an enemy with whose strength the man cannot cope.

In this you see the beginning of the development of THOUGHT. The man using his brain and manufacturing a weapon roughly may by great good fortune overcome the animal infinitely more powerful than himself.

If he can plant his sharp stone in the tiger's eye, or strike exactly the right spot in the backbone and break the creature's back, he is safe. If not, his life and the lives of the woman and the child for whom he is fighting must pay the penalty.

This savage beast looks to us very little more savage than the man in the tree. But in reality that man represents comparatively a high degree of civilization.

It has taken thousands and hundreds of thousands of years to produce this creature willing to risk his own life IN ORDER TO SAVE THE LIVES OF OTHERS. In an earlier stage of his development he would have thrown the woman or the child to the tiger and thus saved himself. But now he fights, stands nearest the animal, risks his life, and that is the beginning of real civilization.

We publish this picture, reproduced from a scientific and carefully made drawing, to give you an idea of what life was once on this planet, and of the tremendous progress that the human race has made.

As you look at the picture ask yourself this question:

WHAT IS IT THAT HAS CAUSED PROGRESS? How has man developed from this savage creature with his primitive spear to the man of to-day? How has he come up through the hundreds of thousands of years into an organized society, complex, intelligent, infinitely above this primitive stage?

Two answers are given by human beings. The best answer is this:

You must make men better by putting before them that which IS BETTER. You must make children better than their fathers by preaching kindness, gentleness, and this women have done throughout the centuries.

The human race becomes more civilized, more nearly human, by contemplating that which is good and noble and by putting aside that which is hideous and depraved.

So much for the first answer.

Another answer often heard in these days in which indecency is exploited and immorality defended runs as follows:

To make men better you must show them that which is vile and bad. To bring up the race you must constantly put before it the most horrible side of human nature, and thus incline the crowd to go the other way.

This false answer you see in the indecent picture, the immoral novel, the degraded play, the emphasis in art and literature of that which is horrible in life.

The teachers of the world have been divided. One division believes in making men better through the contemplation of horrors.

There has recently been discussed a suppression of certain plays which illustrate well—giving the producers the benefit of the doubt—the desire to teach and benefit humanity through contemplation of that which is repulsive.

In one of these plays there is told the story of a dissipated, drunken old man, who, in company with a miserable woman, enters a disreputable resort.

With the idea of blackmailing this man a young girl, living a criminal life, is put into the room with him. The place catches fire, the old man, sobered by the flames, is left standing on the stage holding the hand of the young girl, whom he has recognized as his own daughter. They are both condemned to die in the fire. That is considered a moral lesson.

Another of the same set of plays is supposed to illustrate degradation in married life. A woman newly married whose husband is to go on a journey invites three different men to call upon her on three different days. They all call at the same time. And the husband unexpectedly returns also at the same time. The wife, who has locked the three men up in separate closets, calmly denounces them as burglars. They go to jail, and she claims as her property the jewelry that they brought her as presents. Their mouths are supposed to be sealed as they go to prison by a "sense of honor," and that is called a useful moral teaching.

Another story told in one of these plays is that of a young white girl infatuated with a Japanese. Her father orders the Japanese to leave. He intends to do so. But the girl will not have him go and stabs him to death. She and the father pretend that the Japanese has committed "hari-kari." And they say that has a moral lesson.

Still another of these plays tells of a worker in a mine horribly mutilated, his face made hideous by an accident so that he wears a black mask manufactured by his wife.

This man with the mask comes back to his house to find his wife with another man. The other man strikes down the husband in the black mask and is supposed to have killed him. Then the man and the wife, beside the body of the husband, decide that the guilty man shall wear the black mask and represent himself as the husband.

While the wife is absent from the room the husband comes to life, kills the other man, puts on the black mask and pretends to his wife when she comes back that he is the other man who has just killed the woman's husband.

He goes with the wife into a room, closes the door. The audience hear dreadful screams and are left to suppose that the husband thought to be dead tears off his mask and murders the wife.

AND THAT IS SUPPOSED TO BE A USEFUL MORAL LESSON.

The public is asked in the name of art to accept these horrible pictures of the vilest sore spots in our half-degraded humanity, and find in them useful lessons and foundation for better living.

Some of those who preach vileness, who write it, paint it and put it in plays are perhaps sincere.

Pictures of vileness have had nothing to do with the human progress, nothing to do with the upward, long, slow climb that has brought humanity from this picture to its present condition.

And good men and women in the future as in the past will fight against everything that emphasizes vileness, hideousness, dishonor and disease, and work to make people better by showing them that which is better.

You cannot turn a boy away from vice by showing him in the newspapers the horrible victims of vicious living, but you can make him better and nobler by showing him that which is beautiful, encouraging him to live a healthy, noble, normal life.

You cannot find any inspiration in the sewer, but you find inspiration in the fields, the woods and the beauties of nature.

Men have improved because constantly women have represented and preached goodness to the children.

Each boy has been a little better than his father as the thousands of years went by—thousands of centuries of human life on this planet.

In the future we shall have a real civilization as far above to-day's civilization as we to-day are above this man in the tree. And we shall owe that civilization to the same power, the force of goodness, simple honesty, the teaching of the mothers in the case of individual children and the wider teaching of the sons influenced by their mothers.

No good comes from wickedness.

And that is the lesson that the public should teach—by its condemnation of vileness in literature, in plays, in public and private life.

Queen Mary Influenced King to Act in Home Rule Fight

Secret Is Out That She Had Much to Do With His Ill-Advised Interference in Army Revolt

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

The latest on the Irish question is that young King George V. was not altogether a free agent in the bungling part he played recently in the army revolt. Mr. Asquith came loyally and chivalrously to the King's defence in the discussion which followed the ugly disclosures of the military scandal.

But it is now openly charged in London that good Queen Mary is not wholly blameless. In fact, the secret is out that her influence had more to do with King George's ill-advised interference than was at first supposed.

Her Grace, the Marchioness of Londonderry, wife of the Tory peer who is one of Sir Edward Carson's chief backers, has already been mentioned as another feminine inspirer of the army officers' revolt.

The complete self-restraint, superb discipline, remarkable level-headedness which the Catholic people of Ulster, Munster, Leinster and Connaught are displaying before the world in these crucial days of Ireland's struggle make a feature of the fight which is by no means the least brilliant or impressive. And it is a feature that will long endure in history.

This great attitude of Ireland's Nationalist millions shows that at last the bitter lessons of the past are bearing fruit. For centuries the game was shrewdly and successfully worked, of goading the people of Ireland into angry feeling and bitter strife, so that the Castle gang of Tory officeholders and the Shylock crew of absentee lords of the land might step in between the two and enjoy the country's wealth while their ignorant dupes were fighting.

Until now the game, transparent as crystal to all the world outside Ireland, has worked well from the Tory-Orange point of view, while it wrought havoc to the best interests of the country at large.

The doings of our own day show hopefully that the lessons of history are not always wasted. However slow a people may be in reducing, for their own good, those lessons to practice.

Night after night, week in and week out, for many weary months, the Nationalist representatives of the Irish people have sat in their places in the House of Commons, silent, self-controlled, as becomes a body of well-trained men, while, by the hour, the Carsons and the Bonar Laws, the Smiths and the Cecils vilified their nation and its people and poured forth charges, every one of which those men knew was foulest, meanest slander.

And so in like manner have the people of Ireland acted under the sage advice of their chosen leaders. The old Orange and Tory game of setting people at each other's throats in the name of "Jehovah and the open Bible" is rapidly nearing its finish. It has been a long time coming. But it is here, despite all the kettle-drum bluster and noise of the Carson brigade. Seventy years ago and more, Thomas Davis, a Protestant Irish Nationalist, wrote a poem which was set to the air of "The Protestant Boys." Its second stanza is:

Rusty the swords our father unsheathed—
William and James are turned to clay—
Long did we till the wrath they bequeathed.
Red was the crop and bitter the pay!
Freedom fled us.
Knaves misled us,
Under the feet of the foemen we lay
Riches and strength
We'll win them at length,
For Orange and Green will carry the day
Landlords fooled us,
England ruled us,
Hounding our passions to make us their prey;
But in their spite
The Irish UNITE
And Orange and Green will carry the day.

Three score years and more have rolled their course since Thomas Davis wrote those lines in the Spirit of the Nation. He wrote them amid scenes so tragic that "in a climate soft as a mother's smile, on a soil fruitful as God's love, the Irish peasant mourned."

Davis was one of the brilliant line of Protestant Irishmen who liked to know and serve and love his Catholic neighbor. But the Orange-Tory of those days, like the Carsonite, Orange-Tory of our day, had no place in his heart or mind for such noble sentiment as the lines of Davis breathe.

The Irish Tory-Orangeman is the most denationalized being on earth. He finds his personal debasement in the dishonor and degradation of his country. Old prejudices, barbarous laws, a clinging to possessions which he knows were obtained by plunder, combine to sink him into the ridiculous and unholy belief that it is his interest as well as his duty to degrade and wrong and besmear the Catholic people of his own land. He calls himself the representative of the property of the country. Indeed, he claims to be the almost exclusive representative of the property of the country. He is unaware that in the opinion of all fair-minded Americans, Englishmen, Europeans, who have studied this Belfast-Portadown claim of Orange superiority that he is in very truth an obstacle in the way of Ireland's progress, a black shadow across her path.

This Belfast egotist says to the world: "I am the business of Ireland; all the commerce of Ireland is north of the Boyne."

Wonderful, if only it were true. Is it true? By no manner of means.

If those Belfast Tory-Orange leaders have all the business of Ireland bottled up in one corner of their county of Antrim, as they boastfully claim, why are they so humbly establishing branches of the Ulster Bank all over Munster, Leinster and Connaught and trying to come in for a share of the vast banking business which for generations has been controlled by such solid and prosperous banking institutions as the Bank of Ireland, the National, the Provincial, the Munster & Leinster and the Hibernian?

It is no exaggeration to say that if the rest of Ireland were to institute a boycott against the Ulster Bank, there would be something very like a financial Black Friday visiting itself on Carsontown before a month had ended.

No thinking, patriotic citizen of Ireland wants to see such a feeling engendered in the commercial and political life of the country. But if it does come, it will take deep root. Belfast will feel the pinch of the shoe first and longest. And, amid the "Ruin and Bahamas" where will the clever attorney, Sir Edward Car on be? Standing by his guns and taking his share of the ruin? Not he.

Patriots of his stripe have been plentiful in Irish history. But they have always been patriots for profit. Let hard times come to Belfast through not only a national but a world-wide boycott by the Irish people and their descendants, and Carson would be among the first to set sail for a sunnier clime.

Queen Mary, who is sharing the blame for the recent upheaval in England.

Don't Be Afraid of Leaving Your Friends Behind in Life's Journey. That Isn't Disloyalty, but Loyalty to One's Self.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company

IF you set forth on a journey with a company of friends and the goal is distant and difficult of attainment, you must not set your pace to accommodate that of every other traveler beside you.

You must press on according to your own strength, and you must not allow every passing distraction to delay you.

If one of your comrades is ill, or meets with an accident, stop and render such services as lies in your power. That will not delay you.

But if your comrades want you to lag back and amuse yourself with them in senseless diversions, do not heed them.

And if one is interested in making notes of every kind of poison plant and vine that grows by the wayside, and urges you to study this phase of botany with him, flee away and let him alone. There is no disloyalty in your departure from such companionship.

Many men and women encounter these experiences in life's journey. Many endeavor to cling to the old friends and to regulate their pace to that of others, fearing to be thought fickle or disloyal if they pass onward and leave others behind.

But there is a loyalty to one's best self, to one's own highest purpose, which is paramount to all other duties.

Two women who had been close companions in early youth met after a decade of separation. The one had grown and developed from immature girlhood into womanhood. The other, a woman in years, had remained crude and frivolous in mind. She talked of the trivial things which had interested both ten years previous. The woman listened distrait and without interest.

"How you have changed!" cried the other. "Once you found these topics so fascinating; now you are bored. I never believed you would so forget your old friends."

But she had not forgotten her old friends; she had simply grown with years, and, ceasing to be a child, she had given up playing with toys.

Another pair of friends set forth in life's journey, both enjoying the intellectual things of the world and admiring the beautiful. But gradually one of them placed all her emphasis upon the painful and sorrowful and disagreeable events of life, upon the flaws in people, and the spots of blight upon the rose leaves.

The other refused to talk of these things, refused to think about them, and she turned more and more each year to look at what was beautiful, what was lovable, what was admirable and noble in human nature.

She dwelt long upon her own blessings, and touched lightly upon her troubles, and she found life growing more and more interesting as the years passed. But she found her friend less and less companionable. By and by, at a fork in the road, the two separated, one seeking shade, the other sunlight.

They had ceased to have things in common. It would have been folly for the one who saw the road leading out into sunshine to have remained with the other, who desired only shadow.

And she felt only relief as she passed out of the depressing atmosphere which the other had created for herself and for all who came into her presence. Then she paused and asked herself: "How is it that I can let one I have known so long and loved well in the past go out of my life with no regret?" And her Best Self answered her:

"Because there is no vestige of the friend you once loved remaining in this one you have left behind you.

"She has daubed the canvas of her soul with ugly blotches of mixed colors and spoiled the work of God. Now that you have put her out of your life you can think of her as she was. And you can help her to restore the original picture by your thoughts.

"But keep out of her presence, because to remain in it you must retard your own growth. She will waste your energies in useless arguments, endeavoring to make you see shadow where you see sun, and faults where you see virtues.

"Pass on and leave her. She must read life's riddle in her own way. Eventually all souls come into the light.

"Give good, wholesome, kindly thoughts to all your fellow-travelers.

"Ask the Invisible Helpers to guide them.

"But do not forget your own soul's right of way, to tread the path you have carved out.

"Pass onward, even if the passing means being alone.

"There is no loneliness so painful as companionship with the uncongenial."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

ELBERT HUBBARD WRITES OF A "MODIFIED MONTESSORI" SCHOOL FOR FARMERS

By ELBERT HUBBARD

FIFTEEN miles west of the city of Knoxville is the Farragut School. This is a country school. No place of business is in sight.

It is a school surrounded by woods and fields and great, green, towering hills. Nearby a stream goes dancing over the rocks, searching its way to the sea.

Six teachers are employed.

The Department of Education at Washington has thought so much of the Farragut School that a special bulletin has been prepared concerning it.

To build a school in memory of a great warrior symbols the new time in which we live.

But then Farragut was a school teacher as well as a soldier. So why not a Farragut School?

It is a grade and a vocational school, combined. It is a school for farmers, evolved out of the minds and needs of the mountaineers.

Superintendent Phillips, the man in charge, is from Chautauqua County, a product of the Fredonia Normal School.

The methods at the Farragut school might be termed "Modified Montessori," or a kindergarten for the higher grades.

Discipline is kept out of sight. Any one is eligible to enter who wants to learn. Right intent is the only requirement. Some of the pupils have white hair; in fact, the students here range all the way from six years old to eighty.

Occasionally a mountaineer and his wife will come down from the hills, twenty, thirty, forty miles away, and spend a week or a month at this school, boarding with some farmer in the neighborhood.

There are lectures on farming, housekeeping, cooking, dairying, dressmaking. The three R's are taught, also the pupils are taught to live. They are taught to be polite, active, thrifty, energetic, cheerful, healthy.

In this country school there is a system of modern plumbing. Shower baths form an important part in the curriculum, and when one realizes how much in need a country district is of bath facilities, you can guess the wisdom of the mind who installed this modern plumbing system.

This was something the farmers really hadn't thought of. Applicants are merely expected to bring their own soap and towels.

Certain evenings a week the school is open. Volunteer teachers are provided. There are night classes for those who cannot come in the daytime.

Days are set apart for social purposes. There are spelling bees, debates, cooking classes and much good cheer with the help of hickory nuts, apples and popcorn.

There is a complete cooking outfit here, with a kitchen that is much more complete than is found probably in the homes hereabouts.

And just please remember that this is a plain, everyday school, supported by the people who live in the vicinity.

It is not an endowed school. Every part of the equipment is in use, and to some people who know the lavish outfits that are provided in certain schools of the North, the Farragut School seems almost pitiful in its sparsity of equipment.

But you remember the words of David Starr Jordan, who said: "The value of a college is in inverse ratio to the cost of its equipment." That is to say, the people should provide things for themselves, and that is the big lesson in life.

Students here are not pauperized, nor do they suffer from paternalism. They are lifting themselves, under the kindly guidance of the most able, generous, simple and effective teacher.

In talking with the State Superintendent of Education of Tennessee, he told me that the endeavor all over the State was now to do away with the little red schoolhouse and its lonely teacher, and to combine several schools in one.

In Tennessee there are quite a number of schools conducted along the plan of the Farragut School, and, as the years go by, there will be a great many all over America.

Several teachers working together can get up an atmosphere which will permeate and dispel the fog of ignorance in a community. They acquire an impetus, as it were, a momentum which makes for progress. Co-operation must prevail in school-teaching as in other things.

When one thinks of the indecency and disorder that are often found around the district school, one is both surprised and delighted to find in a so-called illiterate district, in the mountains of Tennessee, a school where good order prevails and the rights of property are respected.

This is "Our School," and the farmers and their families so regard it.

It is a centre of light, a candle throwing its beams to a distance.

In pedagogy, as in all else, we work from the complex to the simple.

Admiral Farragut, it is well to repeat, was born on a farm near Knoxville. Here his parents sleep. He was a mountain boy of Scotch parentage, who had a hungry mind. He entered the navy as a lad of nine years. He was an errand boy, a servant, a midshipman, a lieutenant, a captain, a commander, an admiral.

Well have the people of Tennessee plans honor to Farragut by naming after him a school, and a school which is so simple, so natural, so effective that it has attracted, in a degree, the attention of the teaching world.

Anything is good enough until you know of something better. To see the Farragut School is to feel a pity, not a pride, in the old-time "Little Red Schoolhouse."

THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR

By Anna Katherine Green

THE start he gave was nothing to the frightful expression which crossed his face at this encounter, but I thought both due to his surprise, though now I am convinced they had their origin in the deepest and worst emotions of which a man is capable.

"John! John!" I cried, and could say no more, for the agitations of the solitary, despairing years were choking me; but he was entirely voiceless, stricken, I have no doubt, beyond any power of mine to realize. How could I dream that in consideration, power and prestige he had advanced even more rapidly than myself, and that at this very moment he was not only the idol of society, but on the verge of uniting himself to a woman—I will not say of marrying her, for marry her he could not while I lived—who would make him the envied possessor of millions of such fortune, and such power, use and such depravity, were beyond the reach of my imagination, and while I thought his pleasures less than mine, I did not dream that my existence was a menace to all his hopes and that during this moment of speechlessness he was sounding his nature for means to rid himself of me even at the cost of my life.

His first movement was to push me away, but I clung to him all the harder; at which his whole manner changed and he began to make futile efforts to calm me and lead me away from the spot. Seeing that these attempts were unavailing, he turned pale and raised his arm up passionately, but speedily dropped it again, and casting glances this way and that, broke suddenly into a loud laugh and became, as by the touch of a magician's wand, my old lover again.

"Why, Olive!" he cried; "why Olive! is it you? (Did I say my name was Olive?) Happily met, my dear! I did not know what I had been missing all these years, but I know it now. Will you come with me, or shall I go home with you?"

"I have no home," said I, "I have just come into town."

"Then I see but one alternative." He smiled, and what a power there was in his smile when he chose to exert it! "You must come to my apartments, are you willing?"

"I am your wife," I answered.

"He had taken me on his arm by this time and the recoil he made at these words was quite perceptible; but his face still smiled, and I was too mad with joy to be critical.

"And a very pretty and charming wife you have become," said he, drawing me on for a few steps. Suddenly he paused, and I felt the old shadow fall between us again. "But your dress is very shabby," he remarked.

"It was not; it was not near as shabby as the linen duster he himself wore.

"Why that rain?" he inquired, looking up as a drop or two fell.

"Yes, it is raining."

"Very well, let us go into this store we are coming to and buy a gossamer. That will cover up your gown. I cannot take you to my house dressed as you are now."

Surprised, for I had thought my dress very neat and ladylike, but never dreaming of questioning his taste any more than in the old days in Michigan, I went with him into the shop he had pointed out and bought me a gossamer, for which he paid. When he had helped me to put it on and had tied my veil well over my face, he seemed more at his ease and gave me his arm quite cheerfully.

"Now," he said, 'you look well, but how about the time when you will have to take the gossamer off? I tell you what it is, my dear, you will have to refit yourself entirely before I shall be satisfied.' And again I saw him cast about him that furtive and inquiring look which would have awakened more surprise in me than it did had I known that we were in a part of the city where he ran but little chance of meeting any one he knew.

"This old duster I have on," he suddenly laughed, 'is a very appropriate companion to your gossamer,' and though I did not agree with him, for my clothes were new, and his old and shabby, I laughed also and never dreamed of evil.

"The gentleman called Howard Van Burnam was not the only person who visited the Van Burnam offices on the morning preceding the murder. Randolph Stone was there also, but he did not see the brothers, for finding them closeted together, he decided not to interrupt them. As he was a frequent visitor there, his presence created no remark nor was his departure noted. Descending the stairs separating the offices from the street, he saw a knot of leave the building when he noticed that the clouds looked ominous. Being dressed for a luncheon with Miss Althorpe, he felt averse to getting wet, so he stepped back into the adjoining hall and began groping for an umbrella in a little closet under the stairs where he had once before found such an article. While doing this he heard the younger Van Burnam descend and go out, and realizing that he could now see Franklin without difficulty, he was about to return to upstairs when he heard Randolph also come down and follow his brother into the street.

His first impulse was to join him, but finding nothing but an old duster in the closet, he gave up this intention, and putting on this shabby but protecting garment, started for his apartments, little realizing into what a course of duplicity and crime it was destined to lead him. For to the wearing of this old duster on this special morning, innocent as the occasion was, I attribute John Randolph's temptation to murder. Had he gone out without it, he would have taken his usual course up Broadway and never met me; or even if he had taken the same roundabout way to his apartments as that which led to our encounter, he would never have noticed, in his ordinary fine dress, conspicuous as it made him, to have entered upon those measures, which, as he was clever enough to know, lead to disgrace, if they do not end in a felon's cell. It was John Randolph, then, or Randolph Stone, as he is pleased to call himself in New York, and not Franklin Van Burnam (who had doubtless proceeded in another direction) who came up to where Howard had stood, saw the keys he had dropped, and put them in his own pocket. It was as innocent an action as the donning of the duster, and yet it was fraught with the worst consequences to himself and others.

"Being of the same height and complexion as Franklin Van Burnam, and both gentlemen wearing at that time a mustache (my husband shaved his off after the murder), the mistakes which arose out of this strange equipment were but natural. Seen from the rear or in the semi-darkness of a hotel office they might look alike, though to me or to any one studying them well, their faces are really very different.

"But to return. Leading me through streets of which I knew nothing, he presently stopped before the entrance of a large hotel. 'I tell you what, Olive,' said he, 'we had better go in here, take a room, and send for such things as you require to make you look like a lady.'

"As I had no objection to anything which kept me at his side, I told him that whatever suited him suited me, and followed him quite eagerly into the office. I did not know then that this hotel was a second-rate one, not having had experience with the best, but if I had, I should not have wondered at his choice, for there was nothing in his appearance, as I have already intimated, or in his manners up to this point, to lead me to think he was one of the city's great swells.

and that it was only in such an unfashionable house as this he would be likely to pass unrecognised. How with his markedly handsome features and distinguished bearing he managed so to carry himself as to look like a man of inferior breeding, I can no more explain than I can the singular change which took place in him when once he found himself in the midst of the crowd which lounged about this office.

"From a man to attract all eyes he became at once a man to attract none, and slouched and looked so ordinary that I stared at him in astonishment, little thinking that he had assumed this manner as a disguise. Seeing me at a loss, he spoke up quite peremptorily:

"'Let us keep our secret, Olive, till you can appear in the world full-fledged. And look here, dear, you won't you go to the desk and ask for a room? I am no hand at any such business.'

"Confounded at a proposition so unexpected, but too much under the spell of my feelings to dispute his wishes, I faltered out:

"'But supposing they ask me to register?'

"At which he gave me a look which recalled the old days in Michigan, and quietly sneered:

"'Give them a fictitious name. You have learned to write by this time, have you not?'

"Stung by his taunt, but more in love with him than ever, for his momentary display of passion had made me feel both masterful and handsome, I went up to the desk to do his bidding.

PRIME MINISTER OF KAISER PRAISES GERMAN-AMERICANS

Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg Greets Germans of America Through Editor of New York Deutsches Journal

Theodor Sutro, the editor of the New York Deutsches Journal, who has just returned to New York after having spent four months in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, in order to arouse the interest of Germans in the coming Panama-Pacific Exposition, is fully convinced that all these countries will be well represented at the San Francisco World's Fair.

"My reception by the large industrial bodies," Mr. Sutro said to a representative of the New York American, "and numerous private conferences with prominent manufacturers and leading officials in Germany, Austria and Switzerland have convinced me that, unless all promises and signs fail, there will be a very noteworthy participation in the fair on the part of all such branches of industry whose products are the most suitable and attractive for exhibition.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT WILL AID ART EXHIBIT.

"It is also likely that a large part of the Exposition of the German Art Industries, in Cologne this year, and of the International Exposition of Graphic Art and Bookmaking, in Leipsig, will be sent to San Francisco, and I believe, upon the assurance of the leading officials in Berlin, that it is likely that the Government will extend its aid at least to a large and worthy German art exhibition. [illegible] the leading directors of the museums, both in Germany and Austria, are in favor of such an exhibition, among them His Excellency Professor von Bode, director of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum, in Berlin, and, likewise, Geheimrat Julius Leisching, director of the Museum of Art and Industry in Vienna, with both of whom I had long conferences in regard to this matter."

A GERMAN-AMERICAN AMBASSADOR.

When Mr. Sutro sailed from New York last October for the purpose of [illegible] Germany for the Panama-Pacific Exposition he was armed with the unanimous resolution of the great German-American National Alliance, adopted at its last convention in St. Louis, Mo., empowering him to represent its enormous membership in this matter; he likewise bore with him the written mandates of over 120 German newspapers published in this country, of dozens of German-American federations and societies and of about two hundred thousand individual German-Americans, whose petitions had been gathered by the Deutsches Journal. Above all, he had the strong backing and endorsement of William Randolph Hearst, to whom in the first instance Mr. Sutro attributes the success of his mission in the German speaking countries of Europe.

LEADING GERMANS HAND HIS WAY.

Immediately after his arrival on the other side Mr Sutro succeeded in reaching and gaining the friendship, confidence and support of representatives of prominent commercial and cultural institutions and leading personages all over the German Empire. There were the two managers of the America Institut, founded by Dr. Muensterberg, Dr. Dreschaier and Dr. Herrling, of whom the last named is now on a visit to this country, and there was also Dr. Stapff, the head of the bureau of information for the San Francisco Fair, organised by the Baltin committee, who all three offered him their services from the beginning.

Then, as his circle of acquaintances widened, he found an invaluable and most influential friend in the former Prime Minister of the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, His Excellency Dr. von Hentig, president of the Verein fuer das Deutschtum im Ausland (Society for the Germans Outside of the Empire); in Dr Gustav Stresemann, former member of the Reichstag and one of the most gifted speakers in Germany; in Hofrat Horst Weber, the owner of the Leipziger Illustrierte Zeitung, the leading illustrated paper in Germany, in Geheimrat Professor Rasche, first vice-president of the Reichstag, in Freiherr von Richthofen, member of the Reichstag; Admiral and ex-Governor von Truppel, in Legationsrat Dr. Irmer, member of the Prussian Parliament, in President of the Hansabund Dr. Riesser and in the leading editors and proprietors of the German press, who all extended to him not only their most cordial co-operation, but the most delightful hospitality in their families and social circles.

HIS RECEPTION IN OTHER CITIES.

These experiences in Berlin naturally paved the way for him equally in the other cities in which he was invited to make addresses; in Dresden, where he spoke before the Saxon Industrial Society (Saechsischer Bund der Industriellen), representing the various branches of industry of that kingdom, who tendered him a luncheon under the leadership of its president, Geheimrat Lehmann, in co-operation with Dr. Vogel, President of the Parliament of Saxony, Dr. Stresemann, manager, and Dr. Maerz, secretary of that society, and the representatives of the social, military, journalistic, artistic and official circles.

A similar function, although even on a grander scale, he enjoyed in Leipsig, where a collation and reception was given to him in the fashionable Harmonie Verein, under the auspices of Geheimrat Professor Lamprecht, the famous historian of the University of Leipsig, Hofrat Weber and Dr. Stoche, member of the Saxon Parliament, in Dunsig, one of the most northern cities of Prussia, on the invitation of the Colonial Society; in Weimar, in the Chamber of Commerce, before the Industrial Society of Thuringia; in Munich, before the Society of Authors and Journalists, and then in Vienna, before the Industrial Society of Lower Austria (Niederoesterreicher Gewerbe Verein), where he was honored not only by the presence of several of the leading Government Ministers and prominent men from similar circles as in other cities, but by the attendance of the American Ambassador, Mr. Penfield, who not only encouraged and assisted him in his labors there, but, with Mrs. Penfield, extended to him the delightful hospitality of their home; and equally successful was his last address abroad, namely in Zurich, Switzerland, on the invitation of the Press Club there.

HOW SUTRO AROUSED GERMAN INTEREST.

On all these occasions Mr. Sutro as a rule, divided his speeches into three parts. In the first place, he gave his audience a brief account of the aims and objects and the ambitions of the German element in this country in order to arouse their sympathy, referring especially to the labors and struggles of the German-American National Alliance, and appealing to them what great discouragement and, how much of a setback it would be to the efforts of that great organization if the fatherland should wholly absent itself from San Francisco in 1915. In the second part of his addresses he would let his hearers understand that, while the Germans here were proud of all the great achievements of the Germans abroad, they are still prouder of what our own country, the United States of America, has accomplished, and that of all these achievements they considered the completion of the Panama Canal the greatest, and on that account the exposition in celebration of this event one in which we had the right to expect that all nations, especially Germany and the Germans of Austria and Switzerland should participate. Thirdly, he refuted the objections which had been trumped up against participation in a fair on account of alleged objectionable features in the tariff bill; that patents and copyrights were sufficiently secured in this country and that the legal remedies [illegible] address for the infringement of patents and trade rights were too expensive and a story; that the cost of transportation to San Francisco was too heavy; that no benefit would arise to exhibitors from participating in the exposition, and, finally, that we ourselves here in America were not sufficiently enthusiastic in regard to this exposition.

WHY THE GOVERNMENT IS NOT OFFICIALLY REPRESENTED.

The real reason why the governments of Germany and Austria decided not to take official part in the exposition, Mr. Sutro says, is based entirely on economical and not political considerations.

In the first place, both Germany and Austria are groaning under tremendous financial burdens at present—Germany in raising the immense sum necessary to increase the army in accordance with the act of Parliament (the Wehrvorlage) and Austria as the result of the great expense resulting from the Balkan War. These governments therefore did not feel inclined to incur even the expense required to participate in our exposition, fearing to increase the already heavy burden of taxation in the slightest degree. In this, however, they are, in Mr. Sutro's opinion, mistaken, as the people at large would gladly have made sacrifices for the purpose of seeing honor paid to the great achievement in San Francisco. In the second place and more important than all, his own theory, based upon close observation and facts which were communicated to him, is that the chief cause why the German Empire, at least, decided not to participate was the opposition of the so-called "schwere Industrien," that is to say, the heavy industries, such as the manufacturers of machinery, locomotives, rolling stock, steel and the like, who see no advantage in exhibiting, as they could hardly expect to compete with our manufacturers in these lines and the expense of transportation would necessarily be enormous. They feared also that they would have to contribute largely to an official participation, even though they themselves did not exhibit. As these industries are in the hands of the largest capitalists in Germany, the same as in all other countries, they feared that [illegible] might be called upon, as is usual, to contribute to any deficit which the Government might incur in consequence of the expense of an official participation in the fair, and in Germany, as in all other countries, these large capitalists have naturally great influence upon the Government.

BRINGING ABOUT A BETTER UNDERSTANDING.

"If, notwithstanding all my efforts," the editor of the Deutsches Journal closed his remarks, "I found it impossible to bring about the official participation of the German, Austrian or Swiss government, on the other hand, I may truthfully say that I have been able to bring about a strong sympathy on the part of those countries not only in its greatest achievement in the history of our country, the completion of the Panama Canal, and in the celebration of this great event, through the San Francisco Exposition, but believe that I have succeeded in what is more important than all, namely, in bringing about a better understanding on the part of the German speaking peoples of those countries of the cultural aims and objects of our German-American population and in strengthening and drawing closer the intellectual and sympathetic bonds between them and us and through that between those countries as a whole and our own."

(TRANSLATION.)

The Imperial Chancellor:

A. 2367

J. No. 1699 Berlin, February 6, 1914.

You have expressed the wish, my dear sir, to be informed whether the non-participation of Germany officially in the World's Fair in San Francisco was determined upon through other than economic reasons. In compliance with your request I take pleasure in stating that the National Government has not been led in its decision by political considerations.

You have given expression to some anxiety lest the many cultural ties between Germany and the United States might in future not receive the same attention and careful treatment as has heretofore been the case to the advantage of both countries. You may rest assured that this anxiety is groundless.

The sympathetic interest which we have always manifested, especially in the efforts of those American citizens who either themselves or whose ancestors have emigrated to the United States to foster the German language and German culture will continue.

This is assured because of the many welcome proofs on the part of your fellow countrymen of German descent, that while loyal citizens of the United States they have not forgotten their old home and their German origin.

The Perils of Pauline

Written by Charles Goddard, the Distinguished Playwright, (Co-author with Paul Dickey, of "The Misleading Lady," "The Ghost Breaker," "The Man from the Sea," Etc.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

SANFORD MARVIN, a wealth manufacturer of automobiles, has worn himself out by overwork. His son Harry and his adopted daughter, Pauline, love each other, but she wants two years of thrilling experiences seeing life before marrying. Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer. Old Mr. Marvin asks to see a play she has written. While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine willing to buy her story, Mr. Marvin opens a package of a mummy which has just arrived from Egypt. Raymond Owen, his fiscally private secretary, helps him roll the front of the case up, leaving the old man to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Mr. Marvin, during a taunting speech, sees the mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and [illegible] into his breast, grasp, while her lips release a strange message from the remote past.

Restored to consciousness by Owen and Pauline, the old man believes it to be a dream until later he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription pad a very brief will. The will dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's estate if something should happen to her before marriage. Hicks, a racetrack man, whispers a suggestion to Owen, but the secretary refuses to have anything to do with him for the time at least. Owen arranges for Pauline to go as a passenger on an aeroplane in a race as the first of her year's adventures.

A SORT of false quiet, like the calm that broods between storms, kept all serene at the Marvin mansion for a week after the aeroplane catastrophe. Little had been seen of Harry, who was busy with directors' meetings and visits to the factories. Owen the secretary had read an alarm of rumors that some one had tampered with a wire of the wrecked biplane. But if the authorities were investigating he saw no signs of it, and suspicion pointed no finger at him.

What perplexed and worried Owen more than anything else was his own mind and behavior. Having no belief in the supernatural, he could not account for the dream which had shown him Mary Marvin, pale from loss of blood, Hicks had black-mailed him in the past, and there was no love lost between him and Hicks. But this vague and disreputable racetracker had appeared to him in a dream, and Owen had promptly done his bidding, involving himself in what would be a false turn out to be murder. The newspapers reported the French aviator as dead, living from day to day.

The secretary concluded that the dreams and even Hicks's knowledge of them were the result of his own morphine habit. He cut down his doses of the drug to a minimum, and accordingly his nerves, deprived of their narcotic, revenged themselves on him. Every feeling became abnormally alert. His sense of touch perpetually tortured him by calling attention to his clothes wherever they touched him.

No amount of scratching or shifting of position made him comfortable. The crickets at night and the distant tooting of automobiles annoyed him. It was even necessary to stop his bedroom clock and put his watch away to keep from counting the ticks. The patterns in the rug and the wall paper, and even the lines of the furniture and of the trees and fences, teased his tired eyes into eternal meaningless countings and comparisons.

Owen suffered the torment of a lost soul, but at least he had no more dreams. Illusions of spiritual visitations, Hicks called him on the telephone once or twice, but the secretary refused to talk with him.

Pauline too, and even Mrs. Marvin, began to notice that she received and finished her new story. It seemed to her even better than the one accepted and printed in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

"This will spell success," Pauline thought with a little sigh of regret, "but that means the end of my year of adventures." She had determined on the course of events after the accident. It was after midnight, and Pauline, in bed but wide awake, was trying to marshal the exciting recollections of the day into the orderly mental procession that leads to sleep. Very faintly she heard what sounded like the music of a distant mandolin. Pauline knew it was Harry, went to the open window and looked down on the dark lawn. There he was playing with a bit of straw instead of a pick that Pauline might not disturb the sleepers in the house. His entire audience consisted of Moses, the adorable queer dog that lives on the premises and [illegible] brings more [illegible] Irish [illegible] to hear that Moses," asked Harry, when he replied [illegible] Protesting replied with a cavernous yawn [illegible] in a squeak, after which he [illegible]

All right, Mose, I accept your apology. I know you're a broken-hearted old dog. You can't run under the coach any more because there isn't any coach. And you can't run under the automobile because it goes too fast. It must be very humiliating to a self-respecting old dog like you, old boy."

But Mose, I've got my worries, too," Harry went on. "Polly is going away from us and I'm afraid something may happen to her. If she only knew how it worries me—well, come on, old man, let's go to bed."

Pauline wanted to throw her arms around him and promise not to cause any more worry. But she didn't, because she couldn't reach him from the window, because in her nightgown, as she was, it could not have been proper, but chiefly because she wasn't quite sure she could keep such a promise. Long after Harry and Moses had gone Pauline decided to finish her story, send it to a publisher and let his decision be hers.

If they accept it, you stay home and marry Harry," she told the pretty face under the slimy nightcap which smiled at her from the mirror. "But if they dare reject it, Harry will have to worry, dear boy though he is."

So Pauline lost no time in mailing and submitting her manuscript, enclosing a special delivery stamp and a request to please let her know at once. She wanted to relieve her lover's mind as soon as possible.

On Saturday everything went wrong at once. Pauline received a bulky letter in the morning's mail. It was her neatly typed manuscript and a short letter declining the story. The editor thought it charming, showed wonderful imagination, gave great promise of future success, but there was a lack of experience evident throughout—a little unreal, he added. He ventured to suggest that the author would do well to travel around and see the world from different angles. During the afternoon Harvey Schieffelin dropped in for a call. He had found her story in the Cosmopolitan and complimented her. Then he began to laugh.

"Polly, that's a bully story of yours, but you ought to have gone down and watched some stokers at work before you described that scene."

"What was wrong in my description?" demanded the young authoress.

"Well, you told of a stoker laying his grimy hand on the fire door and pulling it open to rake the fire."

"Well, couldn't he do that?"

"Oh, yes," laughed Harvey, "he could, but he wouldn't do it more than once. Those doors are almost red hot and would burn the flesh off the stoker's hand, clothes or not. I'll show you on my yacht some time. What you need is—"

Harvey, don't you dare tell me I need experience," interrupted Pauline with unexpected heat. Young Schieffelin saw that tears were almost in her eyes.

"Well," thought Schieffelin, "this team leads too close to water," and he hurried to shift the course of the conversation.

But the damage was done. Pauline took her story to the little open fireplace in her room and destroyed it. At the same time she destroyed her resolution to give up the year of adventure. There could be no question, she needed experience. Her adopted father had admitted it, the editor had said it, and even an empty-headed young man like Schieffelin could see it. She was sorry for Harry, but it couldn't be helped. She picked up a copy of "Treasure Island" and soon wished fervently that the days of pirates were back again. What an advantage Stevenson had. In his time there were pirates—bless their black hearts—and doubtless he talked with these fascinating cutthroats.

Owen gave up his fight against morphine late Friday night. Saturday he was at peace with the world. Gone were all the nerve clamorings and with them went his scruples. All day he kept a furtive watch upon Pauline, and even heard her envious remarks about pirates to Harry when he returned for a week end at home. Owen sympathized with Pauline in her regret that pirates were extinct. A pirate would have been very useful to the secretary just then.

However, there were other cutthroats, plenty of them, and perhaps some other kind would do. There were gunmen, for instance, but an honest District Attorney had lately made these murderous gentlemen of the underworld almost as quiet as pirates. He was still pondering when Hicks called again on the telephone. This time the secretary responded and made an immediate appointment in a cafe near Forty-second street.

"We are losing time," was the business like comment of Hicks. "Now you tell me what the situation is at the house and I'll undertake to furnish the plan of action, and on the profits we will share fifty-fifty, as all partners should."

Owen related the events of the week ending with Pauline's hankering for pirates. The two men got their heads together and rapidly evolved a plan. Hicks, as always, claimed credit for it but Owen made a mental note that it was his own brains and not those of the racetrack man which yielded the ideas. What Hicks really supplied was the final blow to the secretary's better self whenever it struggled to rouse his rapidly numbing conscience.

From the cafe they took a taxi and rode along the water front, first on one side of the island of Manhattan and then on the other. The cab stopped near the worst-looking saloons, while the two schemers entered and looked over the sailors and longshoremen refreshing themselves at the bars. After covering several miles of water front they had collected as many as a dozen abominable barroom cigars and a few equally dubious drinks but had not yet found what they were looking for.

On Front street they both saw a man, and both cried out:

"Look, there he is."

The man was a wild-looking specimen. He had the rolling gait of the deep sea. A squinting eye gave him a villainous leer, while a bristly beard and long gray hair made him a ferocious spectacle. His age was doubtful, as the lines in his ruddy skin might have been cut by dissipation as much as age. The most prominent feature of his unlovely countenance was a nose, fiery red from prolonged exposure to sunburn or rumburn.

"If he isn't a pirate he ought to be one," said Owen.

"He's stolen that brass thing," commented Hicks.

The man carried the top of a ship's binnacle, as the round brass case which holds a ship's compass is called. He entered the dismal portal of a marine junk shop. The taxi was stopped discreetly a block away. As Owen and Hicks approached the shop they heard a loud argument going on inside.

"How much do you want for it?"

"Ten dollars. It's a brand-new Negus."

"Ten nothing. You stole it, you son of a sea cook. I'll give you a dime for it."

"I did not steal it, so help me——!"

The captain of that 'lime juicer' over in the North River gave it to me for saving his little gal's life. He begged me to take anything I wanted, but I fancied this. I'll tell you about it."

Then Owen and Hicks, listening just outside, heard a fearful and wonderful tale. To relate it in the sailor's own words, stripped of the long deep-sea oaths, would be as impossible as to pick the green specks out of a sage cheese.

In brief, the gentleman with the binnacle, sauntering innocently along the docks Friday night, had heard a commotion on the British tramp which he referred to as a "lime juicer." Some fifteen or more longshoremen had invaded the ship, overcome the captain, tied him down and were about to kidnap his daughter. The teller of the story had walked in and thrashed them all single-handed, driven them off into the darkness, rescued the little girl and released the captain. In gratitude the commander had made him a present of the binnacle head.

At the conclusion of the story there was a pause, then the other voice answered:

"You're a wonder. As I said before I'll give you 10 cents for the binnacle and 90 cents for the story. Now you can take it or I'll have you pinched for swiping it."

"Gimme the dollar," said the hero of the tale, and a moment later he passed down the street with the two eavesdroppers at his heels.

The sailor man, proceeding at a rapid pace, suddenly turned a corner like a yacht jibing around a buoy and plunged into a dingy saloon. Owen and Hicks went in after him.

The proprietor, who was engaged in filling empty whiskey bottles of half a dozen different brands from the same demijohn, didn't seem particularly anxious for the sailor's patronage.

"Keep away from them beans," he ordered, "until you buy something."

The sailor drew himself up proudly and answered:

"Just for those proud and haughty remarks I've a good mind never to darken the doors of this dump again."

"I wish you'd keep that promise," said the proprietor, turning to the other two men. "What'll you have, gents?"

Owen ordered and invited the sailor to join them. The mariner accepted with alacrity and entertained them with a vivid description of the character, descent and habits of the bartender, who listened with indifference as long as money was in sight.

The sailor and his new-found friends grew quite sociable. They learned that his name was Nelson Cromwell Boyd, that he had deserted from the British navy at a tender age, and since then had been through a series of incredible adventures and injustices which disproved the old adage that you can't keep a good man down. Among other things he had been a printer for a while, thus accounting for such of his vocabulary as was respectable. He took a particular fancy to Hicks.

At last Owen intimated that he had a business proposition to discuss, and they adjourned to the sidewalk.

"Do you want to earn some money?" asked Hicks.

"Well, that depends," said Boyd, doubtfully.

"Easy money," suggested Owen.

"That's the only kind worth going after," commented the sailor.

"That's where we agree with you, my friend," said Hicks. "We are after easy money and plenty of it. Plenty for us and plenty for you, too, if you can keep quiet about it."

"That's the kind of talk I like to hear. 'But as honest man to honest man, I want to warn you that there mustn't be too much work to it. I don't believe in the nobility of labor. I believe that work is the crowning shame and humiliation of the human race. It's all right for a horse or a dog or an ox to work, but a man ought to be above it. It's degrading, interferes with his pleasures and wastes his time."

"I feel the same way," agreed Owen, "but somebody has got to work to make shoes and food for us."

"Yes," admitted the sailor, regretfully, "there will always have to be some work done and I'm sorry for the poor guys that must do it. But there's been too much work done. Why, the stores are full of food and clothes and everything a man needs. We ought to break into the stores, take all there is and everybody go on a vacation until they are used up. The city owes us a living, and as long as it can pay the debt what's the use of working? I'm against the capitalist; I'm for the poor laboring man, if he'll only stop laboring. Work is just a habit. All he's got to do is quit working and make the capitalist divide up with him."

"Those sentiments are very noble," said Owen. "It's all very fine to worry about your fellow man. But you would like to have plenty of money even if the rest of the world is fool enough to keep on working."

"I suppose so," said the sailor, "but I'm a reformer and my business is to talk, not work."

"That's just what we want you to do," said Owen and Hicks in answer.

Then they found a table in the rear of a saloon where they could talk in peace and unfold their plan.

Boyd was to be introduced to a foolish young girl who had a barrel of money. He was to tell her a deep-sea yarn along certain lines and Owen and Hicks would take care of the rest.

"The question is," said Owen, "whether you can talk and act like a sort of reformed pirate."

"What do you mean, 'deformed pirate?'" shouted the sailor. "D'ye see anything the matter with my personal appearance?"

"No, no," said Hicks, "he likes your looks fine. He didn't say 'deformed,' he said 'reformed.' He means retired pirate. How about it?"

"Leave that to me," he assured them, and led the way out of the saloon and into still another grimy and disreputable place. It was Axel Olofsen's pawnshop and second-hand general supply and clothing store.

"Hi, Ole!" he shouted to the solemn-faced Swede who emerged from a gloomy recess of the shop. "We want a pirate outfit; have you got one?"

"Ay dunno; Ay do my best; Ay do what Ay can. A man can't do no more," said Mr. Olofson, gloomingly.

"Well, get out the oldest pistols and cutlasses you have, and some big knives. Let's see what you've got, you old square head," ordered Boyd.

"Ay dunno; Ay do my best; Ay do what Ay can. A man can't do no more," repeated the Swede, lighting a gas jet and delving into his dusty stock.

"Say, Ole, cut out that 'Ay dunno' business or we'll go across the street and see Ikey. He sells cheaper than you any way."

"Ya," groaned the morose Swede, "go see Ikey. He bane a crook and a robber. It bane got so now a honest man can't make no living some more."

"What does an old petrified sou-wegean grouch like you know about an honest man anyway?" asked the sailor. "Gimme that old percussion pistol."

After much pawing over ancient, worm and rusty weapons Boyd was at last fitted out. Ole was paid about 60 pe cent of what he asked and left to the enjoyment of his Scandinavian melancholy.

"You look like a pirate now, sure enough," said Owen, observing Boyd's effect on the driver of the taxicab.

"I look it but I don't quite feel it yet, said Boyd, with deep meaning. "There is something lacking."

"What can it be?" asked Hicks

"About three fingers of red-eye," the sailor explained, pointing to a saloon "That will make my disguise just perfect."

In the saloon Hicks and Owen made a little map, wrinkled it and soiled it on the floor, then gave it to the pirate.

"Tell her," said Owen, "that it is only a copy of your original, which is all worn out."

It was well for the conspirators that they had a taxicab wherein to hide from public view as they journeyed to the Marvin house. The "pirate's" appearance would have stopped traffic anywhere in New York, and he was a glaring violation of the anti-firearms law, to say nothing of other laws, human and divine Nothing would induce him to relearse his tale in the cab, but he was persuaded to reduce his profanity as much as possible, even at the risk, as he feared, of not making himself clear. Happy and care free till the way up in the cab, he suddenly became moody and ugly at sight of the splendid Marvin mansion. It suggested wealth and industry, and again he leveighed against the capitalists and the shame and degradation of a human being compelled to work for a living.

The nearer the taxicab approached to the house the more talkative became the "pirate." He demanded to know more details of what was to be done, and finally assumed an air of authority

"You say that pich girl is crazy to see something worth while about. Now I know something better than pirates and buried treasure," shouted the "pirate" confidently.

"Yes, no doubt," Owen replied soothingly and with some alarm at the man's bravado. "But it's pirates she is interested in just now."

"Never mind—I say I know something better," insisted the "pirate." "If she will go and do what I'm goin' ter tell yer she'll sure see something like she never dreamed of. Now listen to me sharp!"

It was an extraordinary proposition the "pirate" made.

Owen laughed a gentle discouragement and shook his head, but Hicks fixed his eyes keenly on the man and was evidently turning the suggestion over in his mind.

"Very interesting," said Owen. "And I see you've been quite a traveller in your day. But a man like you mustn't believe everything he hears—still there may be something in it."

The cab was now approaching the Marvin residence, and with difficulty Hicks and Owen bent the "pirate's" mind back to the business of the moment. It was evident to both of them that this seemingly harmless old liar had a serious and dangerous and imaginative side which must be reckoned with.

Owen's key admitted the three to the front hall without ringing, but a maid happened to cross the hall and caught sight of Boyd. With a scream and a flutter she retreated. Owen seated his two confederates in the hall and went in search of Pauline. Compared with the picturesque villainy of the "pirate," Hicks's tawdry clash of colors now looked quite respectable. The maid having reported the presence of a "terrible looking man" in the hall, it behooved the butler to investigate. He stood in front of Boyd and frowned cold disapproval at him Boyd met it closed his squint eyes and leered back.

"I beg pardon, sir," said the butler, with no response

"I say I beg pardon, sir." Still no answer.

"I beg pardon, sir, but who do you wish to see?"

By way of answer the "pirate" drew a long, shining knife and whetted it on his boot, looking viciously the while at the butler. That dignitary promptly decided his services were needed in the kitchen.

Owen found Pauline alone in the library. Never did a villain propose a scheme to a beautiful girl at a more favorable moment. Half the afternoon and a little while after dinner she had been absorbing "Treasure Island," and now came Owen asking if she would like to meet a reformed pirate and go on a thrilling and adventurous expedition

"Owen, you are a perfect angel. Bring in your pirate. I'm sorry, though, that he has reformed."

Pauline shook hands with Hicks, but hardly noticed him She had eyes only for the "pirate," who impressed her mightily. With awe and admiration she saw his scowling and squinting eye run over her form and then travel about the room. Pauline approved of the "pirate," but the "pirate" did not approve of Pauline, and he almost told her so. Her dress her jewels, the richness and elegance of her surroundings, the soft-voiced and soft treading servants, all suggested the things he hated—accumulation, good things stored up behind lock and key, unspent resources, capital. Her sweet poise, health and beauty counted for nothing with him. How he'd like to smash this rich man's daughter and all her household.

The"Pirate Insists That He Has a Scheme for Pauline—"she'll sure see something like she never dreamed of."

But he met the warning eyes of his confederates and restrained himself. He had his story to tell and he would do it After all that was the best way to attack this girl and her fortune

"Tell us about the treasure," said Pauline eagerly.

Hush!" he shouted in a voice that made the girl jump. His hand flew to his belt and whipped out a villainous-looking brass pistol. Holding the pistol on high as if for instant use, the "pirate" hastily locked the door, peered out the windows. looked behind the hangings and then, apparently satisfied, addressed her:

"I'll tell you, but by the blood of Morgan if one of you tells a living soul I'll cut his liver out," said the "pirate," betraying his ignorance of human anatomy by making a lunge with his knife at Owen's heart. Pauline gasped, and the secretary told him that it wasn't considered good manners to point with a sharp knife But they all swore to secrecy and the pirate" proceeded:

"I was but a slip of a lad when I ran away and sailed from Liverpool in the good brig Nancy Lee, with as villainous a crew as I ever seen. Where we was bound for and why is none of your business Them that planned that voyage has cashed in their souls to their Maker and—ah, well, as I was saying, they was a villainous crew, low and vile and bloody-minded I was the cabin boy and slept on the transoms in the captain's cabin. The weather was awful and the grub was worse

"But all went well till we reached the 'roarin' forties.' The skipper knew how to handle sailors—you bet he did. When they came aft to ask about the grub he knocked 'em down before they said two words."

Pauline gave a little exclamation of dismay at this point and the "pirate" turned to her in explanation.

"You see, knockin' 'em down quick like that avoids a lot of cross words and unpleasant arguments such as makes hard feelin's on long voyages.

"Yes, as I was sayin', all went well until the second mate got to knockin' 'em out with his left hand, which the same was all right, too, but he was heard to pass a remark one day that he only bit landlubbers with his left hand.

'The crew they was insulted, and that very night the second mate went over board Who done it nobody knows, leastways the captain couldn't find out. It made the old man peeshy like and he got to arguin' with them sailors instead of wallopin' 'em the way he oughter done, and one day they turned on him

"It was all over in a minute. They had the old man thrown and tied. The first mate came runnin' in, firin' his pistols, but they downed him, too. I took the wheel while they decided what to do. 'Bloody Mike,' their leader, had about persuaded the men to send the captain and mate to Davy Jones's locker and the carpenter was riggin' the plank for 'em to walk when I up and puts in a word.

"I pleaded for their lives and, though Mike voted me out again' the idea, they voted to let them live. The last we saw of 'em they was driftin' off in the jolly boat with a jug of water and a loaf of bread."

The mariner paused and Pauline suggested delightedly.

"And as soon as they had cooled down they were grateful to you and made you their leader!"

"They did not," answered the "pirate." "They broached a cask of rum in the forward hold, and I overheard 'em plotting to throw me to the sharks."

"How awful," said Pauline.

"Yes, miss," agreed the "pirate." "It was awkward and embarrassing like for a mere slip of a lad. So I up and goes into the captain's cabin and gets all the pistols and knives and cutlasses there was and brings 'em out on deck.

"Pretty soon them drunken devils come a-tumblin' out of the fore hatch, picks up half a dozen capstan bars and some be-jayin' pins and a marlin spike or two and runs aft a-hollerin' and yellin'. I gives 'em one warnin' and then fires."

The "pirate" stopped, coughed and looked around.

"Oh, please go on," begged Pauline.

"Yes, miss," replied the sailor, "but this talking affects my throat. Could you possibly"——

"Why certainly," interrupted Owen. I'll get you a drink.

After the sailor had swallowed the biggest drink ever poured out in that house he continued:

"Yes, that was as neat a fight as I ever was in. There was some twenty of 'em all told. They still sing a song about that fight. Let's see if I can remember it."

Then with a briny voice, with the rasp of barnacles and the grog of a dozen lands, the sailor proceeded to sing.

"There was the devil to pay
'Twas bang and smack and batter and crack,
Over and under and up and back,
And 'git him another way.'
Cryin' and dyin' and blood a-flyin'
On a deck that ran with gore.
I shot the six that had capstan sticks,
But the rest came back for more."

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Don't Miss the Moving Pictures of "The Perils of Pauline."

Previous instalments of "The Perils of Pauline" have been and still are on exhibition at various motion picture theatres in wonderful reels by the famous Pathe players.

To-day's instalment and next Sunday's instalment will be exhibited at the motion pictures next week.

Every two weeks new motion picture reels portraying the events of the two previous instalments of the story will be exhibited at the motion picture theatres.

Special Notice to Exhibitors.

Any exhibitor can book "The Perils of Pauline" reels from the Eclectic Film Company, No. 110 West Fortieth street, New York City; No. 3 Tremont Row, Boston; No. 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago; Rhodes Building, Atlanta. The addresses of the other offices of the Eclectic Film Company in other parts of the country can be obtained by writing or telegraphing to the main office, No. 110 West Fortieth street, New York City.

PRIZE WINNERS OF THE "WHAT DID OWEN WRITE?" PRIZES

IN the previous instalment of "The Perils of Pauline" Owen Raymond Owen crept into the study of the dead millionaire, Mr. Marvin, and hastily scribbled a note, in imitation of the old man's handwriting, and left among his papers—WHAT DID OWEN WRITE"

That was the problem and $1,000.00 in cash prizes were offered for the best answers

As in previous weeks many of the contributors in response to this prize offer displayed the widest range of ingenuity and imagination More than half the letters were devoted to the services and family secrets of Pauline. In the forced letter Owen had made Mr Marvin confess the terrible truth that Pauline was his own unacknowledged child; that Pauline was a twin and that she had a brother living who was a criminal; that Pauline was his daughter by a secret marriage and Marvin had poisoned his wife that Owen was her father; that Owen was her half-brother; that Pauline's mother was still living and the scarab bracelet revealed it all, that Pauline a mother was a leper

A curious variation of these contributions were some that said Harry Marvin already had a wife and could not marry Pauline; that Mr. Marvin had stolen his fortune from Owen's father when Owen was a child, etc

A great number of competitors took the view that Owen had used the forged letter to induce Pauline to believe that her departed foster father wanted her to go on some venture or expedition which would endanger her life Many suggested the search of a certain ancient Egyptian tomb, or a hunt for buried treasure, a trip to the North Pole, to Alaska, to the Center of the Earth, to explore the ruins of an old city which contained the wealth of Cleopatra—an almost endless variety of adventures.

The judges have awarded this week's $1,000.00 in ten $10 prizes and 180 $5 prizes to the names printed below.

Today's PRIZE OFFER

As you read this instalment of "The Perils of Pauline." printed above on this page today, you noticed that the old Pirate has a scheme for an adventure for Pauline—WHAT DID THE PIRATE PROPOSE?

The words the Pirate uttered have not yet been written. That will be YOUR task. Read the instalment, study the situations, and write the "message" that you think best fits those situations.

One thousand dollars in money prizes will be given for the best explanation of what the Pirate said. Answers must reach this office not later than next Wednesday noon. Announcement of winners will be made two weeks from today.

Awards will be made according to the merits of the replies received, and those showing the greatest excellence in ingenuity, imagination, inventiveness and literary skill will be ranked in the order of merit.

This contest is open to every one without restriction, and those who in our opinion send in the best answers in not more than 200 words will be awarded the prizes. No manuscript will be returned.

Write your explanation in not over 200 words, write your name and address plainly, and send it to

THE PERILS OF PAULINE,
P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass.

Every week $1,000 in cash prizes will be given for the best explanation of some mystery which each week you will find in the story.

This Sunday—$1,000 for the best answers to "What Did the Pirate Propose?"

Next Sunday—another $1,000 for another mystery.

Every Sunday—another mystery and another $1,000.

And, in addition to the $1,000 given away every week, there will be given $5,000 in special prizes, to be announced later as the story progresses.

News and Gossip of the Plays and Players Now in Town

GOOD PLAYS BILLED FOR FINAL DASH IN THE WANING SEASON

Nicholas Young Says Mrs Fiske Is Most Distinguished New Visitor

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The stage is all set for the final dash of the theatrical season toward hot weather and empty seats. With the departure of Lent and its attendant shrinking patronage, the theatres are facing the closing weeks of the theatrical year with hope and confidence. The Easter bells are today ringing glad tidings of great promise to the managers. The last and expiring weeks of the season may be few, but the attractions are many—and good.

The most distinguished of the new visitors will be, of course, Mrs Fiske, who brings "Mrs. Bumpstead Leigh" to the Hollis. This is not a new comedy, but in its early days of production a few years ago, Mrs Fiske, by some chance, missed Boston when she took to the road. The play has been proclaimed the brightest and best comedy that has ever been drawn to the service of Mrs. Fiske. It is a cheerful play and, naturally, will have the benefit of superior presentation.

The coming of Mrs. Fiske is always good news to those who prefer dramatic entertainment of the better and more substantial kind. Mrs. Fiske, possibly more than any other player now on the American stage, stands for a drama that is both intelligent and artistic. You are always sure of something worth your attention when she calls you to the theatre.

ASTRONOMICAL NEWS—What appeared to be an unusual display of aurora borealis in the northern skies last week turned out, upon investigation, to be only a reflection from Charles McClintock and his freshly imported wardrobe. Mr. McClintock is hovering around Boston in the interest of the Bill Ranch show.

It always may be said that Blanche Ring stands in a class by herself in the art of making bad music popular, although May Irwin sometimes shares this distinction. At any rate, there is no musical comedy star of the present generation who has Miss Ring's astonishing gift of popularizing doubtful melodies. It is the superiority of art and personality over music. Miss Ring promises to put all her audience at the Shubert this week in good humor with "Why Is the Ocean so Near the Shore?" That sounds like a regular Blanche Ring song, and if you have any imagination you can already hear her audiences from the pit to the gallery joining in the chorus.

This season Miss Ring comes to us in a musical farce called "When Claudia Smiles"—a vehicle that is as good-natured as its star. There is one point about Miss Ring and her entertainment that may be settled in advance—there will be no drooping spirits in the vicinity of the Shubert Theatre for the next few weeks.

OLD HOME NOTE—Marie Bates, who comes to the Tremont tomorrow with David Warfield in "The Auctioneer," was the leading woman of the company at the Howard Athenaeum when that house was a stock theatre.

When you train your sympathies upon the poor, overworked actress, you may, with a clear conscience, dismiss Virginia Milliman from your mind. She is very much of an actress at that, in fact, she doubtless holds the world's record at this particular moment by being a full fledged member of two active theatrical companies playing in different theatres. But she is not overworked. Although she draws a salary from both the "Under Cover" and "Within the Law" companies her labor consists chiefly in just staying around and waiting for something to go wrong. She is an understudy who has mastered her profession, but who seldom has a chance to work at it.

Miss Milliman is understudy to both Jane Cowl of "Within the Law" and Lucille Watson of "Under Cover," but as these excellent ladies are physically fit and always on the job at curtain time, it is easy to see why Miss Milliman is not borne down by hard labor. Her engagement with the "Within the Law" company began a year ago when she was unexpectedly called upon to play Miss Cowl's role on a notice so short that it was barely visible. She had been reading the part for two days, with no idea of playing it, when a combination of accidents forced her into a performance at a minute's notice. With so little preparation it was not expected that she would give a very brilliant performance—but she did. That gave her a regular berth as understudy to Miss Cowl.

It was the big Frohman production of this year that furnished Miss Milliman with the opportunity to play in "Under Cover"—this time with not more than two hours' preparation. And again she made good. Theatregoers seldom see Miss Milliman, for her professional duty is to be within hailing distance when accidents happen—and accidents do happen. She is the emergency crew of the two Selwyn companies now playing in Boston.

WITH THE ATHLETES—T. B. Lothian, manager of the Colonial Theatre, is spending two hours daily in a gymnasium in a frantic effort to get his waist down to the measurements of last year's Spring suit.

David Warfield once said that the one thing that encouraged him in his early ambition to be an actor was the bad acting he saw while an usher in a San Francisco theatre. Whatever the encouragement, Warfield has managed to do very well with his profession. His Simon Levi in "The Auctioneer," so the story runs, is but an evolution of a character he told stories about in his boyhood days as an usher in the old Bush Theatre.

Warfield was then a boy minus who could always get an audience. He had a clever knack of imitating the actors he saw, and in this way he gradually acquired a fund of anecdotes that made him in demand at clubs and lodges. His most popular skit was entitled "A Quarrel in a Jewish Lodge," and it was the inception of his Jewish characterization which is so amusing in "The Auctioneer."

Mr. Warfield asserts that his Simon Levi is not a caricature, but a creation true to life—or, at least, as true to life as he can make it. A discouraged playwright once remarked that plays are not written, but rewritten. And in the same breath he might have said that characters like Simon Levi are seldom the conception of any playwright. They are built—they grow. Charles Klein, Lee Arthur and David Belasco, the authors of "The Auctioneer," will doubtless be frank enough to admit that they did not conceive Warfield's Simon Levi. It is a character built and developed by Warfield himself. It is a character made by an actor who knows his own art.

FROM DRAMA TO TRADE—Vincent P. Fetherston, treasurer of the Hollis Street Theatre, will sell his services during the Summer to a local bank and will devote himself to promoting the safety deposit box as a household necessity.

The drama of fun, [illegible] and light music, as represented by the attraction at the Globe Theatre, has to move from one cartoon to another, and the Boston AMERICAN'S page of comics will continue to supply the material. After another week of "Mutt and Jeff at Panama," Gus Hill will bring his newest cartoon to the Globe—"Bringing Up Father." Not even the wholly appealing Mutt and Jeff stories have revealed more genuine human nature than George McManus' amusing picture characterizations of the old fashioned father and his society-seeking wife and daughters.

The trend of the drama during the last few years has more than emphasized the fact that one real function of the theatre is to entertain and not educate. And as time moves forward it is made clear that the playgoer prefers the very lightest form of theatrical entertainment above all others. During the present season comedy and comedy-melodrama have shared honors in popularity with light musical plays. The newest style of musical play as discovered in "Pretty Mrs. Smith" at the Cort Theatre, appears to have struck a responsive chord with those who follow the theatre for diversion. "Pretty Mrs. Smith" is a good, lively comedy set to music, and meets every requirement of these later day demands for amusement that is exhilarating and good natured.

BILLS AT THE PLAYHOUSES

Hollis Street Theatre.

For the two weeks commencing tomorrow night with the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees, a special matinee on Friday, April 17, for the benefit of the Actors' Fund, and a holiday matinee on Monday, April 20, Patriots' Day, the Hollis Street will entertain a very clever, audacious, witty and resourceful lady in the person of Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh, as visualized by Mrs. Fiske. "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," the play, is a comedy of American characters by a native as George Ade's, but placed in a broader, more difficult habitat. There is enough [illegible] in the comedy [illegible] the actor [illegible] long at a [illegible]

Shubert Theatre.

Blanche Ring, whose breezy comedy and rare gift of singing songs and making others sing with her has gained her a distinctive following in all sections of the country, will present her new song play, "When Claudia Smiles," by Anne Caldwell, author of "The Lady of the Slipper," at the Shubert Theatre tomorrow night. "When Claudia Smiles" is not a musical comedy, but a real play, with a consistent and amusing plot, during the action of which numerous songs, duets and choruses are introduced. Of the musical numbers, "Why Is the Ocean So Near the Shore?" is the most pronounced success. Another, "If They'd Only Move Old Ireland Over Here," is said to be worthy addition to the long list of typical Blanche Ring successes.

Tremont Theatre.

One of the notable events of the dramatic calendar, as far as Boston is concerned, will be celebrated at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow night, when Mr. Belasco will present David Warfield in a revival of "The Auctioneer." The character of Simon Levi, the pageant and source of Hester [illegible] auctioneer, which Mr. Warfield has endeared to thousands of theatregoers, has been epochal in American [illegible] Nothing could be more characteristic of Mr. Warfield and Mr. Belasco in arranging for this revival than to bring together all the members of the original cast who are still living. Thomas W. Ryley's "The Queen of the Movies" will open a three weeks' engagement at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow night.

"The Queen of the Movies" is from the German "Die Kino-Koenigen," with the Americanized book by Glen MacDonough, lyrics by Edward E. Paulton and the music by Jean Gilbert. It comes here with the reputation of being a great dancing show, with a [illegible] chorus. In the company are Vaudi-Valli, Stella Holman, Janet Horton, Frank Moulan, Felix Ahr, Nael Lorrie, James Heenan, Dan Collier and others. The orchestra will be augmented to twenty-five pieces.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

One of the most important offerings of the Boston theatrical season will be seen at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of April 13. Dazie, a charming American actress, will present for the first time in Boston Mr. James M. Barrie's play for [illegible] entitled "Pantaloon." This charming fantasy [illegible] is one of the most beautiful [illegible] famous [illegible] Miss Dazie will be supported by a splendid company, including William Sorelle, Hal Johnson, Mr. [illegible] Kearney as Pantaloon, Burt Gordon as Harlequin, and W. Fogarty, the Dublin minstrel and prince of Irish story tellers, brings an inexhaustible fund of new stories, and others will be the Werner-Amoros Troupe, Carl Henry and Nellie Francis, Ben Lann, O'Brien, Havel and Co., Alexander Brothers, Bells and Chidlow, and Gere and Delancy.

BLANCHE RING IN "WHEN CLAUDIA SMILES" AT THE SHUBERT

Boston Theatre.

"In Old Kentucky" continues its record breaking business at the Boston Theatre. Although this play is twenty-one years old, it is apparently as fresh as ever—and just as entertaining. It is a play of thrills, which culminate in a sensational horse race. The characters are well drawn and the story is gripping.

Cort Theatre.

Kitty Gordon, in "Pretty Mrs. Smith" at the Cort Theatre, is giving just the kind of entertainment that the public enjoys. It is entertaining and amusing, and it is made up of those things that the vast majority of persons like best at the theatre. There is something to keep the audience alert all through the performance.

Castle Square Theatre.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," one of the merriest of Shakespeare's comedies, will be given at the Castle Square Theatre tomorrow under Jessa Crain's personal direction. It will be a brand new scenic production, the stage settings, costumes and lighting effects being designed by Homer Platt, and it will offer the comedy as it has seldom been given in Boston or elsewhere since the days of Augustin Daly. The cast of Mr. Crain's production will be in every way distinctive and notable. It will include Mr. Craig himself in the role of Lysander, with Mr. Carleton as Demetrius, Mr. Walker as Bottom, Miss Olesson as Helena, Miss Augusta Gill as Hermia, Miss Florence Shirley as Titania and Miss Mary Young as Puck.

Gaiety Theatre.

An attraction that is new to the patrons of the Gaiety Theatre will be "Pat" White and "The Big Jubilee," which arrives here tomorrow. "Pat" is one of the most original Irish comedians on the stage and has the favors of getting laughs without resorting to ridicule. Pat again brings his famous character of "Casey" to the front in the opening and closing burlettas. Mr. White has surrounded himself with a long list of capable performers.

Majestic Theatre.

"Within the Law" enters into the third month of its run at the Majestic tomorrow evening. Mr. Veiller's play is scheduled to remain many more weeks with the entire original cast, and will not be seen in New England outside of Boston this season. A special matinee will be given on Friday, April 17, for the Actors' Fund.

Globe Theatre.

One could not imagine a more amusing Easter attraction than "Mutt and Jeff in Panama," which will begin the last week of its engagement at the Globe tomorrow afternoon. This musical farce has fulfilled its promise of being a laughing show in every particular. It is funny, and the fun is clean and wholesome. The two famous Bud Fisher characters are in most capable hands, with Earl Redding as "Mutt" and little Jerry Gullivan as "Jeff."

Park Theatre.

"Fanny's First Play," one of George Bernard Shaw's best comedies and one of the most conspicuous successes of the year, will begin a new week at the Park Theatre tomorrow evening. Granville Barker's company of English players presenting "Fanny's First Play" is one of the most perfectly cast organizations that has visited Boston this season.

Plymouth Theatre.

"Under Cover" will begin another week at the Plymouth Theatre tomorrow. This play has already fixed a new record for long runs for the season and if indications amount to anything all records in the history of the local theatres will be smashed. "Under Cover" is a play of compelling force, and is brilliantly acted by the Selwyn & Co. players, headed by William Courtenay.

Orpheum Theatre.

The Five Musical Nosses will head the all star program at the Orpheum Theatre the first half of the coming week, presenting their musical novelty "In Old Seville." Heading the big show for the last half of the week will be Billy "Swede" Hall and company in a comedy sketch "Made Good."

St. James Theatre.

Billy "Swede" Hall and his company of players, who were advertised to play here several weeks ago, will positively appear at the St. James Theatre tomorrow in a comedy sketch, "Made Good." The Five Musical Nosses will be the headline feature for the last half of the week.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Trained animals will be found at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. Blanch Walsh will be seen in a moving picture version of "Resurrection."

PARK SQ. PHONE OXFORD 1904 THE MOST ACCESSIBLE THEATRE IN BOSTON

DO YOU like a play that has the cleverest sort of wit and the merriest of situations and the most amusing of complications, all of the kind that keep you laughing every minute? And do you like catchy music, melodies that set you vibrating to the swing of them, and that you find yourself humming and whistling? And do you admire handsome and accomplished women and gorgeous gowns and magnificent scenery? And dancing, do you like to see that?

If you do, and, of course, you do, everybody does, go to the Cort Theatre and see Kittie Gordon in "Pretty Mrs. Smith."

Here you will find everything you like best in a play, and more of it than you ever found in any other. Laughter, merriment, fun, music, dancing, beauty, and with all this a capital comedy, a real play, one that is filled to overflowing with farcical, therefore amusing, incidents. "Pretty Mrs. Smith" is the cleverest, the brightest, the very best play of its kind ever seen in Boston. Everybody says so, for everybody is talking about this tremendously popular comedy. It is better than musical comedy. It is a comedy with music.

It is presented by Oliver Morosco, who has surrounded Kitty Gordon, its accomplished star, with a company of as clever players as has ever been brought together in one organization. What fun Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant provide with their unique drollery. And what an amusingly jealous third husband is Harrison Hunter. And what eager and repentant husbands are Roy Atwell and Edward Martindel! And so on through the big cast which has pretty girls and fine singers, and also the California Double Quartet that makes music the audience insists on having repeated. Go to the Cort some night or some Wednesday or Saturday afternoon and enjoy yourselves as you seldom have a chance to do at the theatre.

The Actual Portraits of The Saviour and the Virgin?

Ancient Enamels Collected by the Late J. P. Morgan which are Believed to be Real Likenesses as Handed Down by the Earliest Traditions.

The Virgin Mary as the Early Byzantines Drew Her.

IT is the rapidly growing belief among experts in religious art and antiquarians that in the Byzantine enamels which form a part of the remarkable Morgan collection at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York, we have perhaps the best likenesses of the Saviour, the Virgin and some of the Holy Apostles extant.

These enamels are among the greatest treasures of all those the late financier gathered. They were found at Constantinople, the ancient Byzantium, the earliest capital of Christianity. The faces are worked upon solid gold backgrounds by means of strips of gold, other metals and the glass with all the wonderful skill of a now lost art.

Certain resemblances in the features of the Saviour with the crude pictures found in the Catacombs at Rome first set the experts thinking. It is known that of all the ancient arts that of the enameller was the most conservative. The men who made the little plaques now at the Metropolitan Museum had, if they followed custom, older models to work from. Whence, ask the experts, did these models and the conception of the faces come?

Not only was the art of the enameller itself conservative, but there enters another great factor for accuracy in the essential conservatism of religious art. It has been proved by Sir Wyke Bayliss in his remarkable volume on "The Likeness of Christ" that a certain type of face has persisted, and that it was inexplicable on any other grounds than those of truth. In other words, the enamellers must have had before them accepted portraits of Jesus and Mary, of John the Evangelist and John the Baptist and of Paul when they set to work to perpetuate these features on the precious gold plate which was the base of the picture. Neither the smallness of the surface nor the difficulty of the process prevented the artist from real portraiture.

Investigation has shown that the picture of the Saviour in the enamels is closely akin to those which look down from the mosaics of ancient cathedral domes built under Byzantine inspiration. One writer is emphatic in his statement that the face of the Saviour in the enamels is clearly the same as that in the great mosaic portrait in the dome of the Cathedral of St. Luke of Stiris in Phocis, and of many other very ancient churches, with perhaps an especial affinity to the Christ of the Martorana at Palermo.

The Christ Pantokrator (Almighty), regarded as the Heavenly Judge, was always represented in that part of the building (the dome) which was symbolic of the Celestial Church, while the Virgin, mediatrix between God and man, was placed in the apse of the bema, which symbolized the Church upon earth. As Pantokrator Jesus is always bearded, the hair, as here, usually black, and the expression usually severe.

The comparison of the great mosaics with the small enamels reveals such an identity of treatment that it would not be impossible to fancy that one might be magnified or the other reduced, and the enameller's picture might be substituted for the mosaic.

St. Paul is depicted with that forlornness of expression which seems to tell of fastings, vigils and the tribulation of the thorn in the flesh.

The portrait of the Virgin is considered by experts one of the most perfect examples of ancient art. There is the grace and tenderness, with that Oriental charm which makes for beauty and convincingness. It is the type of intercession, and all the more appealing on that account.

The St. John the Baptist is depicted as the ascetic, hardened by privation and living for an idea in the contempt of material life. It is a strong, almost a wild, figure, well worthy of the tradition which conceived it, and boldly carried out.

The St. John the Evangelist is a beautiful and striking contrast to this, and all the more beautiful and inspiring in its way. Those who can see the originals may well study them, for it is likely indeed that they come very close to the original ideas of the Saviour, of Mary and of the Apostles.

The fact that these enamels date from the eighth or ninth century does not make at all improbable the suggestion that they are real portraits and not mere ideal pictures.

It must not be forgotten that the age of Constantine, when these pictures were produced, is one of the great landmarks in early Christian history. Under his reign, which ended in 337 A. D., many very great changes took place which left their marks upon religion and art, and especially upon religious art. Even at Rome the pagan temples were in this period either destroyed or turned into basilicas for Christian worship. Churches were built and adorned with all the splendors that art could lavish upon them because the state had then become Christian.

Constantine had destroyed the heathen at Byzantium and called the city Constantinople, after himself. That capital then rivalled Rome, and gave the fullest opportunities to Byzantine artists.

Sir Wyke Bayliss, the great authority, claims that there was a real likeness of the Saviour, followed implicitly at Byzantium, known and recognized to be authentic, and that it was so much like the type preserved and followed at Rome as to be distinguished only by a lock of hair. The question of the likeness of Christ arose during the early centuries, and Constantine certainly had some ideas on the subject. Helena, his mother, who had been to Jerusalem and found the "True Cross," built the Church of St. Prassede to enshrine a portrait of Jesus which she believed to have been actually drawn by an apostle.

When the workers in mosaic from Byzantium decorated the basilicas with the likeness of Christ they had to satisfy a people who believed devoutly in a likeness which they possessed and with which they were familiar—a people who would have been no more content with a new invention to represent their Saviour than Caesar would have been content with an imaginary portrait of his grandfather or near ancestors.

There was then a well defined traditional likeness both in Rome and Byzantium, and it is the same which crowns the triumphal arches of the basilicas and is preserved in these precious enamels.

As this high authority states: "The small mosaics and metal ornaments of Byzantine workmanship all give evidence of following this early type. Byzantium—at first the ally of Rome, then laid in ruins by Rome and then rebuilt by Rome—had its traditions of art and of faith. As the art school of the world it yielded to Rome these examples of its art craft. And looking at them now we perceive that Roman and Greek were absolutely at one in their rendering of the likeness of Christ.

"The frescoes and glass portraits in the Catacombs at Rome are so like the mosaic and enamel portraits of Christ that they help to confirm the authenticity of the tradition.

"It is an astonishing unity of type and feature which cannot be accidental, for there is no accident in art any more than there is in science."

National Theatre.

"The Mayor of Tokio," a farcial opera in two acts, will be the attraction for Easter week at the National Theatre. The book of the "Mayor of Tokio" is by Richard Carle and the music by William Frederick Peters. It is a lively, tuneful, sparkling and scintillates with wit, humor, pretty girls and beautiful Japanese costumes. The story concerns one Marcus Orlando Robert and American road company who tour Japan. In some way Mr. Mayor of Tokio the sensational water sensation "The Lass of the Amazons" will be seen. Up-to-date souvenirs will be given away each evening, and a high-class holding orchestra will discourse

Wilbur Theatre.

The first appearance of Doris Keane at the Wilbur Theatre in Romance this week will be the special that effective transformation of a young actress, formerly with the Frohman stock company, into a brilliant star. Miss Keane will appear in "Romance" as a play of sentiment, character delineation and elaborate setting. Miss Keane's impersonation of an exotic being who ranges in a breath from tears to joyful laughter—La Cavallini of the opera—is said to strike a fresh and wonderful note in American acting.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Queens of Paris," with Harry Koler and Harry K. Morton, will make its annual visit to the Casino this week, presenting a new combination of fun and music, called "We, Us and Company at Home."

Howard Athenaeum.

"Girls from the Follies" burlesquers will hold forth this week at the Howard Athenaeum in a carnival of burlesque amusement that is said to be thoroughly up to the minute in every detail. The house management will offer an excellent vaudeville bill, headed by Major James D. Doyle, the lilliputian character comedian.

Grand Opera House.

Blanch Baird, the "tailor made" girl and "The Flirting Widows" will be at the Grand Opera House this week. This is the show that boasts of pretty girls and original comedians.

Scollay Square Olympia

The Easter week offering at Scollay Square will be headed by Cousin Jack, the trained chimpanzee. There will always a big drawing card and the second week starts with another offering in the form of a dramatic sketch presented by Cooper and Company. The motion pictures will include several of the latest productions.

Dartmouth Players.

At the Keith Temple this week The Town of Nazareth" will be the special picture of attraction. It is said to be remarkably interesting and is appropriate to the Easter season.

Scenic Temple.

At the Scenic Temple this week The Town of Nazareth" will be the special picture of attraction. It is said to be remarkably interesting and is appropriate to the Easter season.

Dartmouth Players.

The Dartmouth College dramatic organization will appear in special performances at the Plymouth Theatre tomorrow and Tuesday afternoons. The programme will consist of Alice Brown's "Fiedler's Level of Absence," in which Miss Frederick and Charles Rugg and Robert Dunbar take the parts, and John Galsworthy's "The Little Man from the Provinces," with Miss Grace Munroe Wellington as "The Intruder," "James and John" and "The Man from the Sea."

"David Copperfield."

The engagement of "David Copperfield," the latest play adaptation of Charles Dickens' famous novel, will enter upon its last week at the Tremont Temple tomorrow. The final performances of this remarkable photo-play will be given on next Saturday night.

"Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis," George Kleine's spectacular photo-play production, will begin a limited engagement at the Tremont Temple on Monday. The production is the same which scored such a tremendous hit in this city last summer. It is presented in three acts of eight parts and acted by a company of Italian artists. The story of the play, which is familiar to thousands who have read this well-known novel, is laid in Rome during the reign of Nero.

Postal Men at Boston.

Friday night, April 17, has been selected by the Boston letter carriers to attend in a body the performance of "In Old Kentucky" at the Boston Theatre as a testimonial to the popularity of Miss Maude Parker, who has the leading role of Madge in the play of "In Old Kentucky." Miss Parker is a daughter of William H. Parker, a carrier of the Boulevard station.

Baumgardt Lectures.

Not content with carefully supervising the musical programmes of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. H. Baumgardt, who is giving his course of novel and instructive lectures at Tremont Temple this month, has soared into the heavens to tell in his clear way of the star to be studied and learned to know first of all while at sea. He will show photographs of the other worlds now being taken with the telescope on Mount Wilson, California. These pictures he uses to reveal the unknown wonders of the sky in the lecture he calls "An Evening With the Stars," which he will give next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

Wendling Lectures.

George R. Wendling will give a series of lectures on "Modern Drama" at the Tremont Temple, beginning to-morrow night.

Mr. Wendling, who was formerly a brilliant attorney, and one of the most talented members of the Boston Bar, has passed the Cornell institution of Illinois, has devoted most of his recent years to literary labors. He has had remarkable success on the lecture platform and has also enjoyed considerable success in the metropolitan cities throughout the country. The lectures will also include a course of talks on historic subjects.

Actors' Fund Benefit.

Five special matinees will be given in five of the leading Boston theatres next Friday—Actors' Fund Day—and the total receipts will be donated to the Actors' Fund of America the big charity that looks out for sick destitute and aged actors all over the United States. At the Majestic and the Plymouth there be performances of those two reigning successes "Within the Law" with Miss Jane Cowl and "Under Cover" with Miss Lily Cahill respectively. In addition to these will be performances by three new successes. Mrs. Fiske in her latest play at the Hollis, Miss Elizabeth Irving in "Class a Smiles" at the Shubert and "The Queen of the Movies" at the Colonial. There is a new comedy, drama at Tremont comedy, something to suit every taste and purse, the tickets have been arranged last week at the various box of fices and theatre-goers are encouraged to expect crowded houses.

Coming Events.

Gus Hill, the owner of "Mutt and Jeff" will bring his latest musical comedy, "Step Lively Up," here to the Gaiety the week April 20 for a limited engagement.

* * *

The attraction at the Tremont Theatre next week will be "The Auctioneer," a comedy drama by Augustus Thomas. The play is a story of the auction room and the auctioneer's platform. Janet Dunbar will be seen in the leading role.

KEITH DANCER IS FAMOUS ABROAD

"Dazie" Is Youngest of American Girls to Succeed in the Classic Ballet.

Dazie, an American dancer, who is presenting "Pantaloon," an artistic pantomime by Sir James M. Barrie, author of Peter Pan, at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week, holds a unique position among the world's terpsichorean artists. She is perhaps the youngest dancer, and surely the only American one, to achieve a brilliant degree of success in the classic ballet.

America has not developed many dancers. Dazie has achieved real worthy or ambitious efforts. Her early training was in the rank and file of the most perfect and precise ballets of the world in Milan and St. Petersburg, and there she began earnestly and correctly, which no doubt accounts for her infinite technique and exquisite poise that distinguish her execution now.

It is a singular fact, however, that Dazie's initial success was made in London and that most of her important triumphs, until recently, were recorded abroad. After her operatic apprenticeship, where she began as a coryphee, she was placed in the position of secunda ballerina of the Royal opera in St. Petersburg after her first season, a notable reward for her earnest practice and alert skill.

Better Nantasket Service Promised

The service of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, Manager Lane promises, will be even better this year than last Summer, and the Spring schedule will begin earlier, the season officially opening on April 18. The large fleet of steamers have received their Winter overhauling and have been painted.

During the past years many patrons of the Nantasket line have been annoyed by the different rates and styles of tickets. This year new coupon books will be issued good to any point on the Nantasket line, either to or from Nantasket Beach, one, two or three of these tickets being taken according to the distance traveled.

COLORED WIGS FOR SHOW GIRLS

Hotel Scene in "When Claudia Smiles" Is Up-to-the-Minute Feature.

The third act of "When Claudia Smiles" represents the foyer of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, where a "tea-dansante" is in progress. The present-day society craze introduces so many and such startling novelties that it is said to be not only up to the minute but quite a distance in advance of anything seen at the Broadway tango trotteries.

In the first place the guests at the stage tea are played by the Blanche Ring picked beauty chorus, selected by Frederic McKay, who is fully as good a judge of feminine beauty as he is of musical comedy manuscripts. These lovely women, each one of whom frankly admits that her face is her fortune, appear in the now famous colored wigs introduced in London recently by Mrs. George Keppel. With these pink, green, flame color and purple "transformations" is combined the latest Paris fad of wearing a tiny lizard, frog or some other unusual object.

The Actual Portraits of The Saviour and the Virgin?

Ancient Enamels Collected by the Late J. P. Morgan which are Believed to be Real Likenesses as Handed Down by the Earliest Traditions.

The Virgin Mary as the Early Byzantines Drew Her.

IT is the rapidly growing belief among experts in religious art and antiquarians that in the Byzantine enamels which form a part of the remarkable Morgan collection at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York, we have perhaps the best likenesses of the Saviour, the Virgin and some of the Holy Apostles extant.

These enamels are among the greatest treasures of all those the late financier gathered. They were found at Constantinople, the ancient Byzantium, the earliest capital of Christianity. The faces are worked upon solid gold backgrounds by means of strips of gold, other metals and the glass with all the wonderful skill of a now lost art.

Certain resemblances in the features of the Saviour with the crude pictures found in the Catacombs at Rome first set the experts thinking. It is known that of all the ancient arts that of the enameller was the most conservative. The men who made the little plaques now at the Metropolitan Museum had, if they followed custom, older models to work from. Whence, ask the experts, did these models and the conception of the faces come?

Not only was the art of the enameller itself conservative, but there enters another great factor for accuracy in the essential conservatism of religious art. It has been proved by Sir Wyke Bayliss in his remarkable volume on "The Likeness of Christ" that a certain type of face has persisted, and that it was inexplicable on any other grounds than those of truth. In other words, the enamellers must have had before them accepted portraits of Jesus and Mary, of John the Evangelist and John the Baptist and of Paul when they set to work to perpetuate these features on the precious gold plate which was the base of the picture. Neither the smallness of the surface nor the difficulty of the process prevented the artist from real portraiture.

Investigation has shown that the picture of the Saviour in the enamels is closely akin to those which look down from the mosaics of ancient cathedral domes built under Byzantine inspiration. One writer is emphatic in his statement that the face of the Saviour in the enamels is clearly the same as that in the great mosaic portrait in the dome of the Cathedral of St. Luke of Stiris in Phocis, and of many other very ancient churches, with perhaps an especial affinity to the Christ of the Martorana at Palermo.

The Christ Pantokrator (Almighty), regarded as the Heavenly Judge, was always represented in that part of the building (the dome) which was symbolic of the Celestial Church, while the Virgin, mediatrix between God and man, was placed in the apse of the bema, which symbolized the Church upon earth. As Pantokrator Jesus is always bearded, the hair, as here, usually black, and the expression usually severe.

The comparison of the great mosaics with the small enamels reveals such an identity of treatment that it would not be impossible to fancy that one might be magnified or the other reduced, and the enameller's picture might be substituted for the mosaic.

St. Paul is depicted with that forlornness of expression which seems to tell of fastings, vigils and the tribulation of the thorn in the flesh.

The portrait of the Virgin is considered by experts one of the most perfect examples of ancient art. There is the grace and tenderness, with that Oriental charm which makes for beauty and convincingness. It is the type of intercession, and all the more appealing on that account.

The St. John the Baptist is depicted as the ascetic, hardened by privation and living for an idea in the contempt of material life. It is a strong, almost a wild, figure, well worthy of the tradition which conceived it, and boldly carried out.

The St. John the Evangelist is a beautiful and striking contrast to this, and all the more beautiful and inspiring in its way. Those who can see the originals may well study them, for it is likely indeed that they come very close to the original ideas of the Saviour, of Mary and of the Apostles.

The fact that these enamels date from the eighth or ninth century does not make at all improbable the suggestion that they are real portraits and not mere ideal pictures.

It must not be forgotten that the age of Constantine, when these pictures were produced, is one of the great landmarks in early Christian history. Under his reign, which ended in 337 A. D., many very great changes took place which left their marks upon religion and art, and especially upon religious art. Even at Rome the pagan temples were in this period either destroyed or turned into basilicas for Christian worship. Churches were built and adorned with all the splendors that art could lavish upon them because the state had then become Christian.

Constantine had destroyed the heathen at Byzantine and called the city Constantinople, after himself. That capital then rivalled Rome, and gave the fullest opportunities to Byzantine artists.

Sir Wyke Bayliss, the great authority, claims that there was a real likeness of the Saviour, followed implicitly at Byzantium, known and recognized to be authentic, and that it was so much like the type preserved and followed at Rome as to be distinguished only by a lock of hair. The question of the likeness of Christ arose during the early centuries, and Constantine certainly had some ideas on the subject. Helena, his mother, who had been to Jerusalem and found the "True Cross," built the Church of St. Prassede to enshrine a portrait of Jesus which she believed to have been actually drawn by an apostle.

When the workers in mosaic from Byzantium decorated the basilicas with the likeness of Christ they had to satisfy a people who believed devoutly in a likeness which they possessed and with which they were familiar—a people who would have been no more content with a new invention to represent their Saviour than Caesar would have been content with an imaginary portrait of his grandfather or near ancestors.

There was then a well defined traditional likeness both in Rome and Byzantium, and it is the same which crowns the triumphal arches of the basilicas and is preserved in these precious enamels.

As this high authority states: "The small mosaics and metal ornaments of Byzantine workmanship all give evidence of following this early type. Byzantium—at first the ally of Rome, then laid in ruins by Rome and then rebuilt by Rome—had its traditions of art and of faith. As the art school of the world it yielded to Rome these examples of its art craft. And looking at them now we perceive that Roman and Greek were absolutely at one in their rendering of the likeness of Christ.

"The frescoes and glass portraits in the Catacombs at Rome are so like the mosaic and enamel portraits of Christ that they help to confirm the authenticity of the tradition.

"It is an astonishing unity of type and feature which cannot be accidental, for there is no accident in art any more than there is in science."

NEW DISCOVERIES ALL OVER THE EARTH

Everybody Threatened by the GERMS That PLAGUED JOB

By L. K. HIRSHBERG.
A.B., M.A., M.D. (Johns Hopkins).

B[illegible] their name because it used to be be[illegible] they were due to the blood's becoming [illegible] over in different parts of the [illegible] very recently most persons who suffered [illegible] boils would go to a druggist or to a doctor and ask for a "blood tonic."

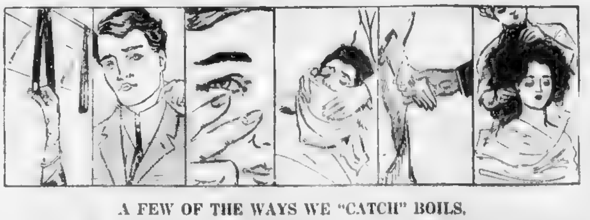
Every Spring boils seem to be more in evidence than at other periods of the year. It [illegible] to separate the [illegible] from fevers and boils and tired feelings. There is at this time of the year a never-ending rush for "blood [illegible]," "Spring tonics" and medicine to drive away "[illegible]" [illegible] describe them

"You must never cure a boil by outside applications," is a fallacy that lots of good people believe, because, they say, it will "drive the poison in" and lead to some more serious trouble.

This mistaken idea has been widely [illegible] by the entirely correct observation that scarlet fever, measles and other diseases are often more severe when they are accompanied by only a slight eruption. Indeed scarlatina is liable to be fatal when the rash is very faint or [illegible] present for an hour or so.

[illegible], however, positively does not apply to boils. They [illegible] often be cured from the outside and there is no [dan]ger of your "driving them in," although a legion of careful grandmothers believe so.

We Can "Catch" Boils Even from Freshly Laundered Linen, but Their Microbes Can Be Made Harmless by an Injection of Dead Ones



A FEW OF THE WAYS WE "CATCH" BOILS.

At the present time among a large number of otherwise healthy men, women and children there is the usual and hitherto unaccountable crop of Spring boils.

Although it has long been known that boils are caused [illegible] called "staphylococci" and "streptococci," which resemble bunches of grapes and strings of beads, it has never until now been really certain that [illegible] are contagious. The recent observation of an Austrian army surgeon who traced an epidemic of boils directly to one [illegible] whose collars had inoculated him with boils seems to prove that this is the case.

The boils, which began on his neck, infected the shirt bands and collars which he wore. When these were thrown into the wash with the linen of other men, 82 per cent of the men in that particular command fell ill with boils.

Some had boils on their gums, some had them on their ears, some on their backs, some on their legs, some on their arms, in short, these boils became epidemic and spread to scores of men. True enough, most of the men only had one boil. But this went all the more to prove the contention of the surgeon that a single boil may often serve as a vaccine which prevents others forming

When a frayed cuff or a bit of lace or a high collar or anything which has come from a laundry, where some one has sent wash which has been in contact with a boil, rubs against your skin the chances are that you will be inoculated with some of the "staphylococci" germs

At once a little boil, which may grow into a carbuncle, is produced. No matter in what good condition your blood may be, that "caught" boil will appear. But the person whose general health is good will soon throw off the "caught" boil, just as he might pneumonia, scarlet fever, or some other "caught" ailment

But not all boils are delivered to us by the laundry boy with our supposedly clean linen. Hair dressing establishments, Turkish baths, barber shops, public retiring rooms, street cars, and other public places, all help to spread them. You may be infected in any place where your own flesh comes in contact with things that have touched the flesh of others.

One of the most extensive crops of contagious boils which I ever knew to spread through a community began with a handshake.

A young man had a sty on his eye. A sty is one type of boil. [illegible] internal troubles do play a part. He had rubbed the sty with his finger He then shook hands with a girl.

The next day between the ring [illegible] middle finger of the girl's right hand a little boil appeared. She soon had [illegible] of these [illegible] spread from her like wildfire [illegible] her family and among the neighbors. Her brother had five large and painful ones before he was well.

It is true that some diseases of the kidneys, stomach and other organs are apt to make the tissues liable to boils.

But even so, boils could not manifest themselves if these skin germs were entirely absent. A profound medical thinker has put the infectious nature of boils into the epigram, "No bacteria, no boils!"

This is true beyond dispute. However weak and sickly anybody may be he will never suffer with boils even if he has diabetes, which predisposes to boils, provided there are no bacilli about.

No one who has to mingle with his fellow men can escape the danger of boils. Wherever you go you will encounter their contagious microbes. When you do become infected, don't buy a barrel of "Spring tonic" or "blood purifier." Instead go to a physician and take the anti-boil inoculation, such as is now given to prevent [illegible].

And to avoid spreading the trouble to your friends take extra care to disinfect yourself with borax or some other disinfectant in addition to the frequent and [illegible] use of soap and water

Once a boil has found its way into your system from your linen or some other source, lose no time in applying [illegible] antiseptic lotion, salve or ointment. Your doctor [illegible] recommend a good lotion as well as [illegible] the infectious bubble open at the proper time. Hot boric ointments and other hot dressings and bandages should be used. Often, too, boils should be anointed with carbolated oils and various soothing balms.

Radium and zirconium as well as the X rays have proved of much value in stopping these "germ hills" as they are fittingly called.

The fact that these little volcanos of microbes and matter are more epidemic in the Spring is due largely to the resurrection of last year's lingerie, linens and the like, as well as to the heating up of the skin by outdoor exercise, which gives the germs better opportunity for incubation.

To become immune to boils the new anti-boil [vaccina]tion has been devised. At intervals of ten days [illegible] doses of dead "staphylococci" and "streptococci" are injected into the arm in the same way that dead typhoid bacilli are driven in to prevent typhoid. Thousands of millions of these germs thus "vaccinated" into you three times within a month will save you from all danger of boils for from three to five years.

Why GOOD TOBACCO SMELLS WORST

ALMOST every one has noticed [that] the smell of tobacco smoke at the time the tobacco is being consumed is very different from the odor the room where the smoking is done has a couple of hours later. A smoking car on a railroad does not smell of tobacco at all, but of stale tobacco smoke. Many a confirmed smoker, who enjoys his pipe or his cigar, finds himself offended, if not actually nauseated, by the odor of the smoking car

Quite frequently the blame is laid on the character of the tobacco smoked by fellow passengers and [the] man who is smoking a "fifteen cent straight" relieves his feelings by semi-audible remarks about the "[illegible] for-five" of some fellow commuter a seat or two ahead.

As a matter of fact, the smoker of the good tobacco is entirely in the wrong, for it is a characteristic of tobacco smoke that the permanence of the stale odor is far greater from good tobacco than from a poor "weed." The reason for this is that the cheaper article possesses less of the true incombustible particles, and the smell of the smoke, though more pungent at the time of smoking, is the first to pass away.

The same is true with a pipe. Tobacco that "bites" is tobacco of a grade of leaf and of a sub-variety of plants where combustion is either more rapid or more thorough. The smoke usually is hotter, and a greater acridity of fumes follows. A "smooth" smoke is obviously one in which combustion is slow and steady, and where the smoke is not so volatile. Being less volatile, it lasts longer.

Even more conspicuously is this true of cigarettes. The natural Virginia cigarette leaves a disagreeable, stale odor. But it is harmless in this regard as compared with Turkish or Egyptian cigarettes—that is to say, to the blends which go by those names in the trade.

The pleasant flavor of Turkish tobacco and the enjoyable aroma it gives at the time of smoking change very rapidly. Many compounds exist in the smoke which are chemically unstable and which, after cooling and the lapse of an hour or more, disintegrate and form other compounds that are far from agreeable in odor.

At a recent meeting of the Psychiatric Society of [Vienna] Professor von Frankl Hoshwarth reported a series of experiments on the effect of both fresh and stale tobacco smoke of various kinds. The stale smoke of the Turkish cigarette was found to be far the worst in increasing mental and physical depression and producing a peculiar alteration of the sense of taste. Blood pressure and the pulse rate were affected in 60 per cent of the persons in a room filled with stale tobacco smoke, as compared with 38 per cent in a room filled with fresh smoke

It was shown that tobacco can be treated by certain processes which will eliminate the unstable products that produce the unpleasant stale odor without materially affecting the flavor of the tobacco. Some one has suggested that laws should be passed compelling men who smoke in smoking cars and other public places to use this specially treated tobacco. Many women would be glad to see such a regulation extended to the household. The elimination of the evil odor of tobacco smoke would be a boon to many thousands of smokers as well as to millions of non-smokers.

Why PULVERIZED COFFEE Is Most ECONOMICAL

THE difference between granulated coffee and pulverized coffee is simply a difference in the size of the grains. It costs no more to have it pulverized, and, as can easily be shown, that is by far the most economical way to buy it.

The extract from coffee as it dissolves in boiling water is taken by the water from the surface of the grain, consequently the larger the surface the more essence is obtained for a pound of coffee. To see how true this is consider a cube measuring one foot in height, one foot in breadth and one foot in thickness. It thus has six sides of one square foot each and a total area of only six square feet. Take this object and pulverize it and the enormous area of about 170,000 square feet is the result. If it be only granulated instead a total area of only about 70,000 square feet is the result.

So it is seen that if the strength of the resulting solution depends on area a teaspoonful of the pulverized will go as far as three of the granulated. The proportion is not exactly as the area, for the essence is obtained not alone from the surface but from a certain depth that the water soaks in. It is, however, great enough to make pulverized coffee much more economical than granulated.

The only trouble with the pulverized is that grounds are less easily shut out. This difficulty may be overcome, however, by the use of specially constructed pots or percolators

With sugar the problem is in most respects the same. Big lumped sugar will not dissolve readily, especially in any cold beverage. The finer the sugar, therefore, the less the quantity necessary to sweeten. Salt, of course, acts in the same way.

To enable one to see the increase in area as the number of particles is increased a very simple calculation may be given. Take the foot cube as before and break it into two equal parts. Now we have two parts, each of which has two whole square foot surfaces and four half square foot surfaces, making four square feet for each part. This gives a total of eight square feet for both parts—whereas before the division we had only six. As the number of parts is increased the greater the area becomes.

When the SKY RAINS BLOOD, INK, MILK, FROGS and WORMS

A NEWS cablegram the other day told of a heavy fall of black snow on the mountains of Switzerland. The snow looked as if it were covered with soot. An investigation, however, disclosed the fact that the supposed "soot" was composed of multitudes of microscopic insects.

In former times such occurrences were regarded as portents. No phenomena of nature, indeed have caused more widespread consternation than "showers" of unusual things—particularly so-called showers of blood, which have been recorded in many instances since early historic times.

For example, on the afternoon of March 14 151[illegible] the people of Ger[illegible] in Calabria, saw [illegible] cloud [illegible] gradually changed [illegible] red, and large drops of [illegible] blood began to fall, [illegible] we enveloped in almost total darkness. Everybody thought the end of the world had arrived, and the population flocked to the churches to pray.

The clouds dispersed a few hours later; the terror passed away, and an analysis of the strange fluid which had fallen from the sky showed that its coloring matter was nothing but [illegible] dust with a marked earthy taste. Presumably it had been ejected by a volcano somewhere—falling with the rain

In October of the following year a strange reddish powder resembling brick dust fell to a depth of several inches in a valley of Piedmont. Next day there was some rain, and, as a result, the powder accumulated in the hol[lows] [illegible], producing the startling ap[pearance of] [illegible] spots. There was great [illegible] peasantry. But again in this [illegible] the dust was attributed by [a] distant volcano.

[illegible] 1819, the city of Montreal was enveloped in sudden darkness, and showers fell of what looked like ink. Some of the "ink" was analyzed and was found to be a mixture of rainwater and soot—the latter attributed to great forest fires south of the Ohio River. Strong winds had brought the sooty particles northward to mingle with rain as it fell.

One morning in 1670 the citizens of the Hague got up to find "blood" in the streets The coloring matter was found to be due to swarms of minute red crustaceans. Nevertheless, the good burghers were convinced that the phenomenon was a dismal portent, and afterward they pointed to it as having been intended evidently for a warning of the desolation destined to be brought to the country by the armies of Louis XIV

In 1608, at Aix, in France, there was a shower of "blood" which owed its remarkable color to the droppings of swarms of the "great turtle" butterfly. Showers of "milk" have been shown to be due to white dust picked up from deserts by revolving storms. In other instances there have been showers of "sulphur," which, on being examined, proved to be nothing but the yellow pollen of cone bearing trees

On April 12, 1855, during a heavy storm, earth-worms fell in such numbers at Alliance, Ohio, that pedestrians could hardly walk on the pavements of the town. Where they came from is hard to imagine, but it seems at least possible that they may have emerged from the ground instead of falling from the sky, as many believed.

Unquestionably the "cyclone twisters," which we call tornadoes, do pick up fishes, frogs and other living animals from water on occasions, and after carrying them long distances drop them. A tornado is a body of air revolving at a rate of something like 500 miles an hour. Inside of it is a vacuum, and it will suck up anything it comes across, from a house to the contents of a pond.

To such a cause are attributed various [illegible] of fish [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] a few years ago the streets were flooded during a violent storm, and afterward great numbers of little sunfishes were found swimming in the gutters.

On Lord Eastnor's estate, Tytenhanger Park, in Kent, there was a shower of crabs There have been recorded a number of showers of herrings, and a while ago, in a small town in Scotland, there was a rain of salt water shrimps

The village of Kennaway, in Fifeshire, witnessed a shower of small frogs which fell in such numbers that, hopping into houses, they had to be swept out in heaps. And there have even been showers of seaweeds in one instance the bare tree limbs of a town in England being draped in Winter with these marine plants swinging weirdly in the breeze.

Will Huge FLYWHEELS Replace CANNON BALLS?

A BIG flywheel spinning rapidly involves a much greater danger than that of merely exploding. The explosion of a flywheel is due to centrifugal force and causes pieces of the wheel to fly off at a tangent in the plane of the [illegible] practically every direction in this plane. But [consi]der for a moment what would happen [if a] [fly]wheel were to become loose from its [illegible] and stay whole.

[illegible] great velocity of rotation would be [illegible] velocity of translation, and the [illegible] travel with lightning swiftness [illegible] in the direction of rotation. [illegible] like a locomotive wheel going at [illegible] speed. Of course, if it were to [illegible] of oil it would not go far [illegible] engine [illegible] with no oil to check [illegible] would be awful to [illegible]

[illegible] was forty feet [illegible] rotating at 1,800 rev[olutions] [illegible] on the wheel would then be traveling 12,000 feet a minute, or about 800 miles an hour. This is as fast as a cannon ball and, of course, the wheel would act in a similar manner to a cannon ball. It would be a mighty projectile that would go through almost anything. It is this danger which keeps the size and speed of flywheels down in practice, especially aboard ship.

It is possible that projectiles will yet be made on this principle for certain purposes. Think what an army could do at short range if it was equipped with hundreds of big flywheels that could be released. They would travel along the ground at great speed, and would simply mow down everything in their way. The only drawback to the use of flywheels in this way is the resistance of the ground, and [illegible] would not hold for a dis[tance] [illegible]

[illegible] would cover an area [illegible] and as long as the [illegible] readily [illegible] at any wheel would become spent without doing great damage. It could be pretty accurately aimed, and, on account of its gyroscopic effect, would travel in practically a straight line. Its gyroscopic effect would not, however, keep it from going up or down a hill, but would prevent it from deviating from its path otherwise

Defense against such a projectile would be hard to get. It might be thought that a big puddle of oil would be the thing but it would not stop the projectile at all; for when the wheel reached the oil it would already have its momentum, which would make it slide through the oil at about the same rate that it was rolling along the ground and keep spinning at the same time. Probably the only thing that would stop the wheel would be a vertical breastworks. The wheel could not climb that, but it would wear away the bottom and cut a narrow passageway into it.

Smoke Clouds to Prevent Frost

T[illegible] made [as] a preventive against frost.

This idea has been taken up and [illegible] the cold [illegible] regions of Europe, where people depend entirely upon certain crops and where sudden frosts are very likely to occur.

[Th]e clouds are not made of vaporized water, of course, but of smoke. However, it is such dense smoke and hangs so thickly over the territory where it is produced that it has every appearance of clouds.

The smoke clouds are produced by tar, [illegible] according to the abun[dance] [illegible] in the local [illegible] to be needed

The success of the system is said to depend entirely on the promptitude of its application, in which case results are immediate. Vats of tar, or whatever the substance to be used may be, must be at hand at the various points necessary, and immediately upon a significant fall in temperature the laborers must be instructed to produce the cloud by the application of slowly kindling fire to the substance at hand.

A system has been perfected for use over large areas by which one man can fire a line of vats. The explosion is produced by means of a wire.

YOU MIGHT TRY---

For Oily Hair.

IF you hair is very oily, try dipping your brush in water and passing it through your hair two or three times a week. This will prevent superfluous oil.

A Good Lotion.

MUTTON and lamb fats are too tallowy and hard to be used in cooking, but they make a first-class lotion for chapped hands, cracked heels and chilblains.

To Make a Fowl Tender.

WHEN preparing chicken or turkey for roasting, try rubbing the in[side] with a piece of lemon. It will whiten the flesh and make it more te[nder].

Keeping Ice in the Sick Room.

A SIMPLE method of keeping ice is to draw a piece of thick flannel ti[ght] over a bowl or other deep vessel, and fasten it securely. Place the [ice] on top of this and cover with another piece of flannel. The ice will keep a[nd] [illegible] even freeze to the flannel. To break the ice, force in a large needle or hat pin—this will divide it easily.

When Sheets Wear Out.

SHEETS that are wearing out should have their selvedge sides sewn together, then they should be cut down the middle and have the new sides hemmed.

A Cheap Cleansing Powder.

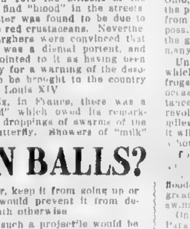
IF short of cleansing powder, use a cloth soaped and dipped in coal ashes. This will be found an excellent and economical way of removing stains from pots and pans

Testing Baby's Bath.

WHEN preparing the baby's bath, try the water by putting your elbow in it. If the water does not burn the elbow it will be the right temperature for baby

NEW MUSCLES and Arteries MADE OUT OF RUBBER

THAT [illegible] may be substituted for flesh in the human system is the startling discovery just made by Professor David Fieschi of the City Hospital of Bergamo, Italy. He has proved after careful experiment that India rubber may be successfully introduced into the system and perform the function of flesh or other tissue. He uses an especially prepared aseptic rubber, of course. The marvel is that after it has been associated with the tissue for some time it seems to lose its character of a foreign body and behaves almost as if it had been born in the body.



A Photograph of a Dog's Muscles in Which Rubber Has Been Inserted

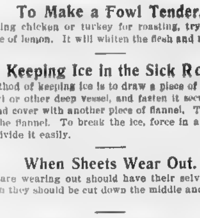
Dr. Fieschi is well known for his work upon the arteries and veins, and during the past ten years he has demonstrated how one may take the place of the [illegible] as they may be substituted when diseased. He has been successful, too, in the transplanting of various organs from animals to human beings, but he considers the finding of the rubber substitute for natural tissue his greatest triumph.

Much has been written about the use of paraffin for tissue, but it has not proved really practical, especially wh[ere there] [illegible] any activity, as in the muscles or arteries. The objections to paraffin do not hold against this specially prepared rubber. It becomes an integral part of the system and takes on an almost cellular formation

In fact, Professor Fieschi calls this rubber "New Flesh," and utilizes it freely in connection with operations, where a large amount of tissue has had to be cut away. It is being successfully used in cases of tuberculosis of muscles or joints, where the tissue has become so diseased that it must be removed.

That the "new flesh" really "takes" and holds is best proved by the actual use which has been made of it. Here is a picture of this rubber-tissue all mixed up with the tissue of a dog's muscles, showing how perfectly it takes its place with the rest of the tissue after being in place six months.

Here, too, is a radiograph of a rubber-graft in an artery of one of the joints, showing how the rubber has [illegible] filled out the [illegible] ing tissue of the artery, destroyed by disease. This is after eight months of use, proving that there is no inflammation, as a foreign body would be expected to create, but a real assimilation by the tissues.



The Arrow Indicates a Bit of Rubber in the Artery of a Joint Eight Months After Being Put in Place.

There can be no doubt that this discovery will be widely utilized by surgeons, for the need of "new flesh" is often felt, and no one has heretofore been able to supply this crying need

It is not real tissue, in the sense that it is supplied with blood vessels and nerves, but it can be utilized for patching veins and arteries and for filling out spaces in the body from which the flesh has been removed either by disease or operations

The 23 Cardinal Points of Beauty—and the 19 Causes of Ugliness

Professor Duprew, the Berlin Authority on Anatomy, Insists That Much Can Be Done in Childhood to Correct Deficiencies and Insure Many Physical Perfections

The Crouching Venus of the Vatican Gallery, a Classic Statue That Displays the Exquisite Curves of the Female Back, According to Greek Ideas.

Miss Ivy Close, Who Was Elected by 500,000 Votes as the Most Perfect Type of Present-day English Beauty.

... Ideal of Bakst, ... reat ... sian Colorist, Who Admires the Full-Blown Type.

PROFESSOR DUPREW, a distinguished Berlin Scientist has just finished an exhaustive series of experiments to determine what really is beauty. In the research thousands of statues, paintings and living models were used. Professor Duprew's conclusions follow. If in comparing yourself with the points he has set out you should find that you fall short here and there, do not despair. Various eminent American artists are eager to take issue with the learned German and from time to time their articles will appear in which they will tell their ideals and will illustrate them.

Professor Duprew finds that a woman has twenty-three cardinal points of beauty. On the other hand there are nineteen common physical defects, which are ... by training and ...

By Prof. Hermann V. Duprew
Professor of Anatom... in the University of Berlin

IN the course of my experience as a ... and a professor of ... my ... I have had occasion to ex... many thousands of girls and women.

I have never succumbed entirely to the surgical habit of looking upon the human body merely as something to be carved up, repaired or dissected. I have always looked for the lines of true beauty and have sought to maintain and restore them as far as lay in my power. Thus I have come to acquire a large amount of knowledge which may be serviceable to my fellow men and women.

Remember that true beauty of form may be cultivated. It is not merely an accidental gift of nature. By caring for the body and keeping the right ideals in view beauty may be developed in individuals and in the race.

The truth of this is proved by the ancient Greeks, who evidently cultivated beauty with great success. The more I have studied this subject the more I am convinced that the Greeks were the most beautiful race that ever lived. It is possible, although we cannot prove it, that there are more women with beautiful faces to-day, but we anatomists know that after all the most striking modern beauties are woefully defective in form. On the other hand, it is certain that the creators of the masterpieces of Greek sculpture had living models of perfect form before them.

I have condensed my observations into a form in which I believe they will be most serviceable in helping people to cultivate true beauty. In the first place I have classified the twenty-three points of beauty that are most essential and striking. These should be cultivated in every manner possible. There are plenty of others, but these are cardinal.

Then I have enumerated the nineteen defects which I have noticed most frequently and which are susceptible of remedy or modification to some degree.

Some of the suggestions for concealing defects may sound obvious to the thoughtless observer, but they are really not unnecessary. It is always astonishing to me how women and their dressmakers disregard the most obvious devices for concealing ungraceful features. How often we see the ugly hand loaded with rings; the scrawny neck lavishly exposed, and the stout figure tied in till it seems on the point of bursting.

Here are my twenty-three cardinal points of beauty:

1. Fine, slender bones. While normal-minded people do not admire women of great fragility a certain fineness of the bony structure is essential to well-balanced beauty.

2. Rounded limbs. These are essential to a graceful and pleasing effect. Flat, lanky limbs, even though sound and strong, are characteristic of barbarians and degraded races and types of people. An ape has the most noticeably flat limbs and ungraceful persons partake of this type to a greater or less degree. It is a mark of low grade development.

3. Well-rounded neck. This must be smooth, with a graceful tilt forward and without hollows at the line of junction with the bosom. A graceful woman's neck has been compared to an ivory col...

4. A well-developed bust. Here is perhaps the most alluring of woman's charms, and yet over-development is not to be...

5. Broad hips. They are the indication of a well-constructed physique and are essential to true feminine beauty.

6. Long, thick hair. It should grow low over the forehead and reveal a clean, graceful line where it is brushed back.

7. Smooth, soft lips. They should be free from cracks and lumps, full-blooded, but pink, the under lip slightly fuller than the ...

8. Fine skin. A woman's arm is beautiful because it is smooth and white. Manly beauty includes angles and rough muscles. A beautiful woman without a smooth skin is impossible.

9. A gracefully curved skull. A round or an oval skull may be equally beautiful, but a square, flat-sided or bumpy skull cannot be so.

10. Large, deep eye sockets. The beauty of the eye does not depend on the eyeball itself, but upon its size. Hence if the eye socket is large and deep the first condition for a fine eye is provided.

11. High, fine, arched eyebrows. The height adds to the beauty of the eye, while a narrow line is essential to ...

12. A ... lower jaw. A woman's face is completely spoiled by a heavy jaw which entails a disproportionate large mouth. The small jaw is an indication of refinement and civilization.

13. A small, delicately curved cupid bow. This is most necessary to ... expression, since a too full mouth ... its sensuality, while a th... coldness.

14. ...th, well-rounded contour between ... and cheek. This feature is ... well chosen in the best types of ... womanly beauty. A sharp ... marked projection at this point ... the beauty of the face.

15. ... rounded shoulders. The junction of ... oulders and neck should be imperceptible, producing delicate and graceful contours.

16. Slender wrists and hands with long index fingers. There may be plumpness in the hand but there must be slimness of ...

17. ... curved collarbone. This ... show externally, but the graceful fullness of the bosom depends upon it.

18. Slender ankle. Without this there can be no gracefulness of the legs. Their entire effect is marred by heavy ankles, however well proportioned they may be in other respects.

19. Slender foot with slender toes. A broad foot is as ungraceful as an excessively long one.

20. The upper and lower parts of the body must be symmetrically balanced. A body too heavy or legs disproportionately long are fatal to a general effect of grace.

21. The body must be of normal weight. Ten pounds above or below the normal is destructive of grace.

22. Even, regular teeth. They should, ... be in good condition. They ... ke a semi-transparent appear... and a faint pinkish glow.

'The Line of Beauty," According to the Latest Word of the Mode French School. A Charming Drawing by Iribe, a Leader of Parisian Fashionable Artists.

How to Change the Color of Your Eyes

CHANGING the color of one's eyes has hitherto been declared beyond power of man to do, but a series of interesting independent experiments carried on by scientists at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, have proved it not impossible after all.

The experiment began with the idea that perhaps the so-called color forming medicines such as iron internally to cause red blood might lengthen the reddish iris of some eyes, and such drugs as methylene blue, chlorophyl and the like might cause the blue, greenish or grayish eyes to become of a deeper hue.

All of these experiments proved the uselessness of drugs and medicines as aids to change the colors of the pupil.

Then a new method of attack was begun. It has been long known to painters, artists and others, as well as psychologists, that "complementary" colors exist. That is to say, colors occur in pairs or opposites, such as green can be seen with your eyes shut after you have stared a little while at red.

So a number of subjects were tested to discover the effect of red wall paper on green eyes, or the holding of different colored books in the hand.

The discovery thus made led ultimately to the finding of the real way to increase the color of your eyes, or even to change them in a fashion. Greenish yellow and blue are complementary colors. When greenish yellow papers or books were held in the hands of the subjects experimented upon, we were amazed to find that the blue eyes, instead of looking a deeper blue, changed into a light-pale, blue-green tint.

Then greenish-yellow lights and globes were used. The same thing held true. There occurred a pallor or fading of the azure iris to one of a cloudy, hazy sky tint. One of the subjects utilized this experiment later, when she was hostess at a tea, when a jealous rival was invited. The latter had beautiful, deep blue orbs, the envy of all her girl friends. The greenish yellow lights and decorations took all of this ultramarine glory from her eyes.

Then experiments were undertaken in a new tack. Subjects these were girls when who were experienced students of psychology—with brown eyes were given brown paper, brown books and brown clothes to wear.

The results were startling. All the brown were greatly intensified, and modern brown eyes became deep brown.

Then all of the blue-eyed ones draped with blue coats and blue cloth same magic-like result took place. The blues took on a new lease of life. They became deeper and prettier.

Similar experiments with black, hazel gray and other eye colors showed that the way to strengthen and deepen the colors of the ocular iris was to drape the body with the same tint.

Lights affected the same thing. The rival who had had her beautiful blue eyes dimmed by the greenish-yellow decorations of the envious hostess aforesaid was now mischievously told of the trick played upon her at the former's tea, and she was induced to plan her revenge in the light of these new discoveries.

At once she fell in with the plans and gleefully enhanced the depth of blue color in her own eyes by using blue china, blue decorations, blue candle shades, wore a blue dress, blue neckpiece, and a blue hair ribbon. She even had her florist send all blue flowers to her friends and rivals.

Thus, there has been made available a very simple method to intensify or change the color of your eyes. This holds good not only for women and for outdoor affairs, but also for men and outdoor apparel.

One gentleman with jet black eyes of the deep-dyed villain type has usually hitherto clothed himself with black silk hats, black vests, black cravats, black clothes, and carried a black cane. This arrangement, to be sure, augmented the blackness of his eyes.

When informed of these new psychological experiments he changed his tactics completely.

He sought a white bamboo cane, a light gray hat, a very light-colored suit of clothes, a white tie, white vest and light tan shoes. The effect on his eyes is striking. Instead of gloomy, jet, they have taken on a deep gray-brown, or brownish hazel color.

A young lady, whose eyes are hazel and who always complained about them, has been wearing alternate mixtures of deep brown and red with good effect.

Another, whose light brown eyes were not deeply toned enough to suit, wears black and brown garments to her own great delight at the intensified colors of her pupils.

Each person may now to a slight extent and within reasonable limits alter the hue of the iris. Even patches of color on the cheeks, eyebrows, and the hair itself affect that of the eyes.

Paris, March 16.

DEAR SIR EDITOR

PARIS: I believe, recovering its poise, having reached the limit of transparency in clothes, the pendulum has begun its backward swing, and I believe that by autumn the craze for the see-through bodice will have practically passed. The bustle as a wire contrivance—that horror of the eighties—will not be adopted. The bouffant effect in the back will be produced by the drapery, not by any artificial addition to the natural figure.

The coiffure has changed, and now entirely shows her ears and eyebrows, as well as her nose and mouth. And, as height is the thing in these latest coiffures, the crowns of the hat have grown up in a night! Sometimes the crown is omitted entirely and the hair fills the space. The brim is then a light swirling affair of taffeta or satin, preferably black. Of course, the trimmings, high and exotic of course on the very smartest, feathers will be a mixture of feathers and flowers.

Flowers of every description: roses, lilies, field flowers, and even the tiny chrysanthemum are to be in high favor; but as a rule, a feather or a bit of ribbon is combined in some fetching way with the floral effect. Much use is being made of the foliage, too. Sometimes the wreath of the hat will be covered with the glistening green leaves, and the flowers will be arranged in stiff posy clusters or ornaments, and "set" in a frame or against a background of the leaves. Usually a few quills or some sort of fantasies will rise gloriously from the crown or from the flower trimming.

Lovely roses or shy forget-me-nots will be found peeking forth from the shelter of an ostrich wreath or from under a flaunting fantasia of some contrasting color. This feather and flower combination is being extended to the corsage bouquet which every mondaine wears with her afternoon costume. At tea the other afternoon I saw the new little Duchess of Cosy, a sister-in-law of your fascinating Mr. James Hazen Hyde. She was wearing a corsage bouquet made of small yellow roses set in a sort of frame of coarse ostrich feather. Her hat and gown showed the same color combination.

What has been called the dinner-plate hat is proving very acceptable to many fashionists, undoubtedly. There is a seamless, a bewitching quality to these shapes, but only when the face beneath them is youthful and piquant. These hats, being flat crowned, must needs be built up on flower bandeaux, or tied on in some such affair, so as to give the head height on the crown.

The Watteau hat is one of the very loveliest, I think, especially when the space at the back is filled with flowers. Such hats, to be absolutely in keeping with the picture must have the velvet band drawn under the chin from one side to the other.

And this reminds me that some of the newest veils are being made in the most novel fashion. Just enough of the centre section of the tulle or net is bound with the velvet so that when the veil is in place the band looks as though it was on really up on the back.

While on the subject of veils I must urge you not to wear the two-section affair which I hear has been so eagerly accepted by New York. This veil is the one that has an almost invisible upper half and a heavily dotted lower half. The effect is therefore interesting—in a way—but it is not becoming. The face is decidedly unbecoming being interesting or not. If ugliness or emphasis can be given a fascination of its own, why, I advise their more generous use. The big dot is an ugly animal, but he is not always hideous. Sometimes he is quite fascinating. Alcohol and morphine are constantly adding new victims to the depressing list, and the drug habits are increasing, and each year the enormous local of ghosts is annually important organs of the body." Dr. Rittenhouse, "are wearing out sooner. The diseases of old age are reaching down into the younger means certain that man has progressed in mental and physical powers since the prehistoric period. Professor Ray Lankester, of England, has argued that man has degenerated from the prehistoric and early historic types. To some down to familiar historical times, most scientists agree that modern England has taken on dimensional since the great Elizabethan age, and modern Italians since the splendid Renaissance period.

Primitive man living in tropical climate required no more, clothing than was provided by nature. Civilized man has invented clothes and wears them not only to protect himself from extremes of temperature or other injury, but to meet the demands of fashion. Naturally feet of cold, agile and muscular, supple and enduring, man has become by sedentary habits, puny, rheumatic, gouty, short of wind, hobbled by fat feet and is beginning to lose his teeth. Lack of exercise has diminished his chest expansion until he has but one rib and is losing others and is becoming an easy prey to consumption, pneumonia and other lung diseases.

Through neglect of his teeth he has begun to lose them. His third molar or wisdom tooth is practically gone, and other teeth are often found lacking. All are subject to very early decay a strong evidence of race degeneracy.

In order to meet these conditions Dr. Kellogg and other scientists urge that we should give more hygienic living and that the nature of those who obey the laws of health and rules their children in accordance with them should be recorded at the Eugenics Registry Office.

"Obedit," says Dr. Kellogg, "must exhibit laws and sanctions that will check the operation of heredity in the multiplication of the unfit. We possess knowledge enough of eugenics and euthenics to create a new race within a century if the known principles of healthful living and scientific breeding were put into actual practice.

"Prizes should be offered for the finest families and the best boys and endurance records. Eugenic and euthenics should be explained to the people until their paramount importance is appreciated and legislators become willing to appropriate funds as liberally for this essential means of race betterment as they are now for the improvement of crops and farm animals through similar agencies will be actively engaged in the battle against diseases and degeneracy in all its forms, chronic as well as acute. The establishment of a national department of health will provide a natural bureau by which to unite the work and outrage its results."

The United States Government has inspired every farmer in the United States many times over with literature on how best how to raise the best crops, how to produce the fattest pigs and the finest horses and cattle. Is it not much more important that not only every farmer but every human being in the country should be instructed in the principles of right living and how to produce strong sane, healthful and efficient children?

It has been reasonably argued from the absence of certain animal families in the future will fail to develop to a human standard. For instance, there is a certain water animal of the class of Ascidians which grows an eye and a tail, becomes a tadpole for a short time and develops out of it. If it were on the way to develop in to a frog then loses the eye and tail and then turns to a entirely lower order of creature to the tadpole and frog. At some future time the human child may linger for a period on the eve of becoming a man and then relapse into an ape or even a sloth.

On the other hand biologists argue that human being, once the power through their reason which raises a dog not possess of guard, against such terrible degeneracy. With our reason we can see clearly the causes and dangers which lead to degeneracy. The scientists tell us that we must keep a record in the human polygene book of all symptoms of degeneracy and use our science and reason to guard against it.

A Government Bureau to Record Brides and Bridegrooms Like Horses and Dogs---A Distinguished Scientist's Plan for a Human Pedigree Book to Save the Nation from Degeneracy.

WE have splendid new strains of horses, cows and pigs. Why should we not have a new and improved race of men?

A century of breeding and training has added 50 per cent to the efficiency of the trotting horse. The same period has seen a grave deterioration of the human race in the most civilized countries.

A new species of dog has been developed which have 100 eyes a year. The civilized human mother shows a steady decrease of vitality which is painful to consider.

These are a few of the interesting facts and arguments used by Dr J H Kellogg in his address on eugenics before the [illegible] at Battle Creek, Mich. Dr Kellogg virtually pleaded for a record book, stating the qualities of human parents and the way in which these qualities are preserved improved or lost from generation to generation. The idea receives the strong support of the many scientists who wish to check the alarming decrease of American vitality and the degeneration of the human race observed in the populous centres of America and Western Europe.

The human pedigree book would be known as the Eugenics Registry Office. Every man or woman intending to marry would be able to turn to the records of the office and ascertain the pedigree of the life partner that he or she thinks of taking. This is just what everybody now [illegible] in getting an equestrian horse, dog or cow.

The suggestion of a human pedigree book may shock persons with petrified "taboo" notions concerning marriage, but why argue serious, shouldn't we have as good a guarantee with a husband or wife as with a horse or dog? In time, it is argued, every human being would be proud to have his or her pedigree entered in the book.

The idea that the human race is degenerating is variously unpopular with human beings but it is strongly supported by science. The arteriosis of improvement in material comfort and science knowledge are so enormous that we imagine we are progressing in every direction. As a matter of fact, proof is accumulative that the human race in the most civilized countries is degenerating.

Dr. Scott Degarmo, Professor of Economics, states that the native born population in the United States in the year 2000 was doubling itself every twenty-five years. The continuance of this ratio would have made the native born population 100,000,000 in 1900 and 800,000,000 by the year 2200. As a matter of fact the native born population in 1900 was only 61,000,000. It has been demonstrated that at the present rate of decrease, the birth rate will cease within a century, and the American nation will no longer exist.

Dr. Charles B. Ward at the session of the American Public Association, said that human stock were degenerating. The evolutionist's phrase "survival of the coming man as a broad-cheeked, bald-headed and adipitous individual of colossal proportions, but lacking head, appeared to him not impossible.

The Real John Rockefeller Revealed By His Bumps

The Mysterious Personality of America's Richest Man at Last Made Plain by the First Phrenological Study of the Head That Made His Millions

JOHN D ROCKEFELLER, besides being the richest man in America, is also the most mysterious. Some like him, more do not. How is it possible for one man to show the qualities of ruthlessness and cruelty displayed by the creator of Standard Oil in his conduct toward his contemporaries and be capable of such a benefaction as the Rockefeller Institute, with its noble work [illegible] the alleviation of human suffering? Who [illegible] late John W. Gates call him the "biggest little man and littest biggest man" in the world?

Mr. Rockefeller would not consent to having his own head examined. But a bust of the Oil King made from careful measurements has recently been placed in the library at Montclair, N. J. From it Rockefeller could be read as easily as though it were his living head. One of the foremost phrenologists of New York was commissioned to study it. His interesting conclusions follow:

By a Leading New York Phrenologist.

I WENT to Montclair in order to make a thorough phrenological study of Mr. Rockefeller's bust. I found it surrounded by busts of Washington, Napoleon, Emerson, Lincoln, Mark Twain and Charles Battell Loomis the humorist.

This bust shows with perfect fidelity all the peculiarities of Mr. Rockefeller's skull, all its ridges and depressions, all the external features and dimensions of his head that can, through the principles of phrenology, explain the individuality of its remarkable interior. To examine this bust is as instructive as examining Mr. Rockefeller's own head, and much [illegible]

In the first place, the bust proves that Mr. Rockefeller's head is considerably above the [illegible] size. The circumference of the head measures twenty-five inches with an ordinary tape measure, while the height and length are in proportion. Some of the other measurements are as follows: The length of the ear is two inches; the length of the nose is 2¾ inches; the height of the forehead from the root of the nose to where the hair joins the forehead, is 2½ inches; the broad front inner head, the base is 6½ inches; the width of the upper part of the forehead is 5½ inches, the width of the chest is eighteen inches.

Mr. Rockefeller's nose is a combination of the Roman and Grecian types. It reminds me strongly of the nose of Frederick the Great among other historical characters. Frederick showed a similar capacity to amass property that Mr. Rockefeller does, although he did not have the same gift for accumulating money. The Rockefeller nose bespeaks a disposition to accumulate property of all kinds, a disposition which is confirmed by his very large organ of acquisitiveness in the brain, and other features of his make up. When I studied these features I was able to understand why Mr. Rockefeller had been able to accumulate a fortune of $1,000,000,000, and also why he had so skilfully fought being taxed upon that fortune in Ohio.

The lower portion of the nose indicates a cogitative type of mind that can think and plan out many new fields of work. It explains why Mr. Rockefeller was able to see the possibilities of the oil business in his youth when other able men had not thought of it. It is not the thin intellectual nose which we see in the faces of those who are only philosophers and writers, but it has breadth and power, indicating capacity, accumulative power and longevity.

His mouth is large and the lips somewhat flattened and thin in appearance. The lips indicate capacity for organization, refinement, considerable reserve, great tenacity and strength of mind, rather than versatility or candor. We can see from them that the subject's words would be brief and very much to the point. These peculiarities would suggest that in his early career Mr. Rockefeller possibly crushed his competitors before he talked about doing it.

His jaw is noticeably long from the ear to the center line of the face. This characteristic denotes will power, determination and tenacity in a very high degree.

The chin is square and measures four and one-half inches across. In addition to the will power shown by this and other features the chin especially denotes capacity for endurance. It explains why Mr. Rockefeller at the age of seventy-five is able to play such a good game of golf. He has throughout life been able to perform feats of physical endurance.

The ears are an interesting study by themselves and reveal much concerning Mr. Rockefeller's mental and physical powers. The length of the ear is three and one-eighth inches while the width is one and three quarter inches. The helix and anti-helix, or the outer and inner rims, are thin and transparent. The high upper lobe is indicative of keen intellectual shrewdness, while the lower lobe suggests long life and enduring powers.

The breadth of the central portion is not as great as we usually find in persons who have perfect digestion. It suggests that Mr. Rockefeller is not naturally endowed with perfect health, but by his will power, determination and intelligence, has been able to maintain a fair degree of health and live to an advanced age. Some years ago, through overwork in his business, he suffered a severe nervous breakdown and as one consequence of it lost a little hair. Since then, by simplicity of life and taking great care of himself, he has regained good health.

The predominance of the mental and motive rather than the physical temperament is shown by the large brain, the long and square face and the lack of fullness in the center of the cheek. Here is a man who would never accumulate much flesh, which is usually an indication of an easeloving nature.

The bust shows that he has little of the emotional nature. There is an almost complete absence of the characteristics that go to make up this temperament, such as a fullness of face and roundness of feature.

The subject is one who could, if necessary, witness scenes of death and ruin without emotion although there is no wanton cruelty or brutality in his make-up.

The forehead tells us that he has an exceptional faculty for order. This is particularly shown by the form of the outer corners of the eyes. This faculty makes him a very systematic man, and it must have been an essential help to him in his business career.

He has a marked sense of form and locality. The former is shown in the width between the eyes. It aids his memory of outlines and proportions. Its sense of locality indicates that he has everything in its place, and knows where to find things when he wants them. It explains why he was able recently to remember a debt of twenty-five cents that was due to him since he was thirteen years old.

The central part of the forehead shows that he has a large sense of comparison and a capacity to understand human nature. With the former faculty he analyzes everything with which he comes in contact, while his understanding of human nature enables him to measure people up and place them where they belong. He is always able to tell at once whether a man is speaking the truth, whether he has the courage to resist him, or whether he will be useful to him in any way.

The lower part of the brow is much more strongly developed than the upper. From this characteristic we see that he is more a man of action than a theorist or a humorist. His jokes must be very few, and even when he utters them they do not excite much laughter.

The side head gives us another view of the predominant faculty of acquisitiveness. The shape of this region suggests economy and an appreciation of the most tangible forms of property. We understand why he kept on hand vast supplies of cash, which it is said he was able to loan out when the financial community was in great need of it at something like 40 per cent interest. With him acquisitiveness shows itself in the accumulation of plain money as contrasted with those other rich men who have collected rare objects of art and other articles of uncertain value.

It is most significant to note that the faculties of destructiveness and combativeness are very strongly developed in Mr. Rockefeller's head. These fill out the lower part of the head around the ears, and are very apparent to an observer who considers the bust with a trained eye. These faculties give him energy, force, executive ability and power to overcome obstacles that stand in his way. They are very interesting to study in connection with the rapid disappearance of all his serious competitors from the oil business which marked the most active part of his career.

Mr. Rockefeller, it is pleasant to note, has a considerable share of the social qualities which are located in the back portion of his head, but he has evidently used his fore-brain more than the posterior regions.

Among the higher mental qualities benevolence is well developed. Spirituality is also represented. These faculties explain why he is a regular attendant at church, why he has given largely to the church and to various philanthropic and public-spirited objects. At the same time acquisitiveness, with its allied qualities, is so well developed that benevolence and spirituality could never run away with him. Imagination is also represented among the higher mental qualities. Probably from this organ he has received much of his inspiration to work out his intricate and far-reaching business plans.

The head shows far-sighted qualities of mind and large cautiousness, both of which are located in the posterior lateral part of the head. The power to direct the work of others on a great scale and the desire for a vast field of business are shown by the very large bump of sublimity which is located immediately in front of the bump of cautiousness.

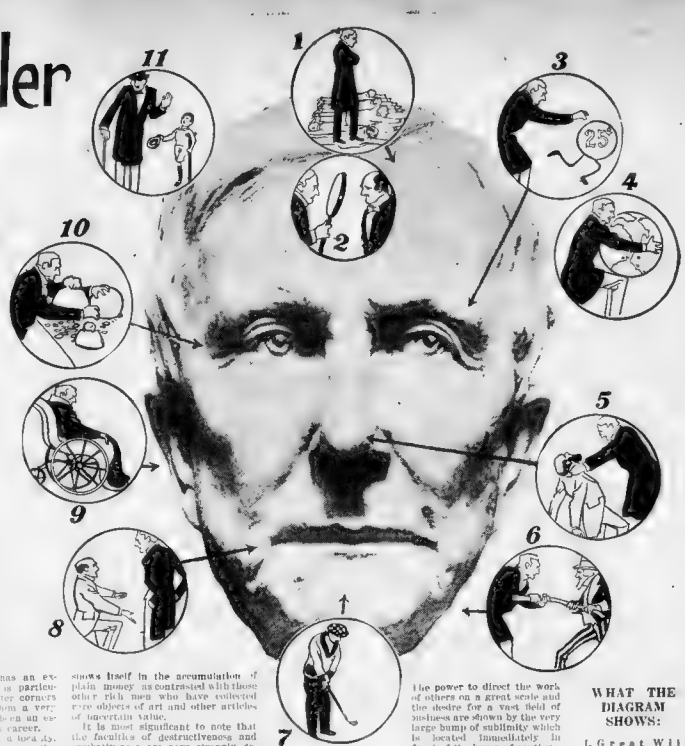
The head suggests a strong love for the beautiful in nature rather than for expensive works of art. This would explain why the largest personal expenditures made by Mr. Rockefeller in recent years have been on his remarkable gardens at Pocantico Hills.

His expenditures on human art have always been very modest. It is stated that he employed a gifted young sculptor at his country place, but caused great pain to the artistic temperament by requiring the artist to do a regular day's work of not less than eight hours.

The only form of art for which he shows a strong inclination is music. Mr. Rockefeller is in fact fond of the violin as well as other instruments.

Distinct lines of hospitality are found on each side of the face, running down from the side of the nose to the lips, but they would never lead him to excesses in this direction. They give him a consciousness of the needs of people. The prominent upper cheek bones, which he possesses, are conspicuous features of the Scotch and Welsh, both races distinguished for thrift.

His features are very sharply defined, which is an important indication of strength of character and ability. This characteristic in his case may be said to include inflexibility of will, and a wonderful power to remember details, which no other man whose head I have examined could carry in his mind.



WHAT THE DIAGRAM SHOWS:

1. Great Will Power.
2. Ability to Judge Men.
3. Memory for Small Details.
4. Capacity for Large Ideas.
5. Ruthless Fighting Ability.
6. Tenacity Enormously Developed.
7. Great Physical Activity.
8. Cruelty and Selfishness Large.
9. Destined to Long Life.
10. Acquisitiveness Amounting to Miserliness.
11. Human Sympathy Small.

Iceland Shows the American Girl How to Repel the "Masher"

By Caroline Josefson.

THE American girl need not fear the masher, rather will the masher have need to fear her, if she knows glima. I can promise that mashing, that unwelcome kind, will vanish from your country when your women have learned the art of self-defense practised by those women of Iceland. glima. In a second I fling my right foot about his ankle. A jerk, and he is sprawling at my feet. The heel hook has prostrated my enemy. Moreover, it has set him bawling, for he has fallen with all his weight upon his colossal cheek. He will be without several of his teeth, but he will have learned to avoid women to whom he has not been introduced. I continue my shopping.

I am going home. It is the short twilight of your country. I decide to return by way of the subway, that I may be home sooner. I descend into one of the splendid, cavernous caverns that are an invitation to crime. I hear footsteps behind me. A big, swaggering brute says: "Hello, sweetheart! Give us a kiss."

I hasten, but he is behind me. He has overtaken me. He flings his arms about my waist. Do I scream? Not at all! That would mean a policeman, an arrest, a visit to the police station to make a complaint, a late arrival home, an alarm of my dear husband, the wrestler, Johannis Josefson, from Barnum & Bailey's Circus, and my two babies. I think of those babies: Hecla, named for our splendid, dangerous volcano, and Skee, awful and fear not the brute. Swiftness, not strength, is what I need. I employ it. I move slightly in his grasp and wrap my foot about his ankle in the electric hook. In a second I have flung him from me.

"But suppose," a timid voice asks, "that you had not been able to use your foot?"

Very well, then, my arms remained. Swiftly as a sunfish darts through the water my arm would rise, and with whichever hand was free I would score him by the strangle hold, "cut off his wind," you would say. With my thumb on one side and three fingers on the other gripping his windpipe, I would have made him helpless. In an instant he would be gasping for breath at my feet.

Even that dreaded bogie that stalks through every woman's mind, the burglar, upon whom she comes unawares in her room, is robbed of his terror if she is trained in glima. He may crouch in the dim light of her bedroom pointing a revolver at her. Shall she despair? By no means. Remember her feet. Instantly her foot flashes out from its petticoat coverings, and her toe strikes the inner part of his wrist with such impact that the pistol flies into space. The pistol in her hand, she becomes mistress of the situation.

No matter how dense the crowd, whether in subway or before a baseball bulletin, you can always get your foe down. If the crowd be so great that you cannot swing your foot, press your hip against him with such force that he loses his balance and topples over.

When It's TIME for YOU TO MARRY

By Rev. E. J. HARDY.

Author of "How to Be Happy Though Married."

THERE are so many sides to the question at what age people should marry, and so much things to be considered, that whatever one writes on the subject must appear full of inconsistencies. A few words we shall attempt is to indicate a few [illegible]

People rush into matrimony as they rush [illegible] and in their hurry they sometimes catch the wrong train. The rush in reference to marriage [illegible] clear from the desperation of advancing years [illegible] the exuberance of youth.

When two very young people marry it is as if one sweet pea should be put as a prop to another. An Irish peasant who found that his marriage when only nineteen years of age was a mistake said:

"I'd never marry again so young if I were to live to the age of Methuselah!"

I asked a lady what was the spring time of love. She replied: "From seventeen years of age to twenty-five; after that time illusion goes." We should be sorry to think that the average duration of romance is only eight years.

A woman who marries a cub of a boy generally regrets doing so. Few men under thirty years of age are fit to have the care of a wife. There are hearts all the better for keeping, they become mellower and more worthy of a woman's acceptance than the crude, unripe things that are sometimes gathered.

Much depends upon the man. Some men are more capable of taking upon themselves the duties of marriage at twenty-five than others are at thirty-five. Between these two ages is the usual time, and if men put off matrimony after the last mentioned age they are likely to get into the habit of celibacy, which, like all other bad habits, is difficult to break away from. In this habit they will continue till they are about sixty years of age, when a terrible desire to know for themselves what matrimony is like will seize them, and they will propose right and left to everything in petticoats, until at last they are picked up, not for themselves, but for their mother's position, or because some one is tired of being a miss and wants the novel sensation of putting "Mrs." before her name.

A man about sixty years of age remarked to a friend of his that he really must get married. "You see," he said, "when I die there is no one to close my eyes." "Oh, but objected the friend," "you might get some one who will open them for you."

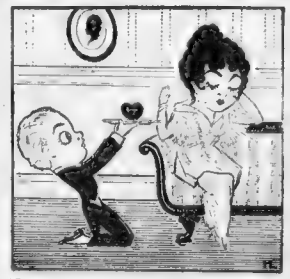
"When it is time for you to marry," said a father to his daughter, "I won't allow you to throw yourself away upon one of the frivolous young fellows I see about. I'll select for you a staid, sensible, middle-aged man. What do you say to one about fifty years of age?"

"Well, father," replied the girl, "if it is just the same to you, I would prefer two of twenty-five."

Gallantry is the unnatural state of many men who never intended it, but who, having too long postponed a chance of their condition, find at length that it is too late to think of doing so.

As to the age at which women should marry—I do not like to burn my fingers with that question. All I shall say is that, if there are some of them not worth making an offer before thirty years of age, there are quite as many not worth speaking to before that. We do not advise girls to put off matrimony until they are 350 years old, which was, it is said, the age of the daughter of Enoch when she entered holy matrimony; but we think that they do not consult their best interests when they allow thoughts of love and marriage to occupy their minds before they have come to years of discretion.

In ancient Rome men sixty years of age and women of fifty were prohibited from marrying. Aristotle, in his "Politics," says that eighteen is the best age for a woman to marry, and twenty-five for a man. An eminent British medical authority fixes the physiological age for the marriage of the male at from twenty-two to twenty-five, and from seventeen to twenty-one for that of the female. This may be true physiologically, but other considerations [illegible]



"Few men under thirty years of age are fit to have the care of a wife. There are hearts all the better for keeping; they become mellower and more worthy of a woman's acceptance than the crude, unripe things that are sometimes gathered."

[illegible] a good deal more advanced. How [illegible] remembered or twenty-two know its [illegible]

There is a different story [illegible] true love to some girls and women, but others like [illegible]

An important consideration in reference to the marriageable age is the children. Those born of parents [illegible] are not likely to be [illegible] well favored.

Children born [illegible] the child age to [illegible] and [illegible] be so much in [illegible] which should make [illegible] old-blood and before old [illegible] differs with the individual. [illegible] choice at twenty-one [illegible] pleased to call their minds [illegible] be wives and mothers before [illegible] twenty. [illegible] money and a house, can take care of a baby under [illegible] what marriage means, and has not a sufficient number of men to enable her to make a proper choice. At least surely it is better for both man and woman to wait until a sufficient enjoyment of fun disposes them for the equally happy but less exciting routine of married wisdom.

The Right Way to Cook Rhubarb

THOUSANDS of cooks and housewives are in the dark as to the proper method of preparing and cooking that much beloved vegetable rhubarb, which comes so near being a fruit.

Our mothers usually pulled the stalks, cut off the leaves and took a knife and stripped off the skin in long, narrow strips before the remaining portion of the stems was cut into short pieces for cooking.

The proper way is to remove the leaves, and an inch or more of the stalk next to the soil and then thoroughly wash and remove that slippery matter that is on the end next to the root.

If there are any rusty spots, or worm holes, they should be cut out, but all the rest of the skin should be left on the stalk, and the whole cut into short sections and cooked with the skin remaining.

The highly colored skin gives the cooked fruit a much nicer appearance, and better still there is a flavor derived from the skin that cannot be secured in any other way.

Physicians say that rhubarb cooked or baked in pies or puddings is much more healthful if the skin is left on and cooked with the centre of the stalks.

Another important fact not generally known about rhubarb is that it is not spoiled when it wilts or withers a bit in lying about the market or the kitchen.

The fact is when rhubarb is somewhat wilted and looks as if it were rather stale, it is nearer [illegible] for making pies than when it is just [illegible]. Some experienced cooks will [illegible] for two or three days before they use it.

The reason for this is the plant is to a great part water. When prepared for food it is very juicy, and when baked in pies the most of the pies burst and allow the surplus juice to run out in the pan in which they are baked, making an unpleasant muss, and causing the pie to be ruined, so far as appearance is concerned.

A NEW GAS That Will Make AIRSHIP TRAVEL SAFER

THE last total eclipse of the sun brought to light some facts which are expected to make travel through the air in balloons much easier and safer than it is at present.

The observations of various astronomers who studied the eclipse proved beyond shadow of doubt the existence on the earth of a light gas that had long been supposed to exist. This gas is called coronium, because it is known to exist in the corona of the sun. The reason why it will prove of so much service in aerial travel is that it is a great deal lighter than hydrogen, which is at present the only successful medium for inflating balloons and other aircraft.

The astronomers' observations not only proved that there is such a gas as coronium around the earth, but they established pretty thoroughly that it exists in vast quantities.

How to get this gas in order to use it for filling our balloons is, of course, another matter. Yet the fact that such a gas does exist is the first step, and no scientist would deny the hope that eventually it may be obtained in quantities if desired.

It is easy to see how a gas much lighter than hydrogen would make airship flight easier and safer than it is now. In order to carry the weight of engines, passengers and envelopes, the Zeppelin airships are of enormous size and carry vast quantities of gas. Their very size has been the greatest element of danger, for their extended surface gives a grip for gales. Bigger engines to fight the gales would require bigger gas capacity, and so on.

Although there are a number of other important considerations which affect this point, still the fact is largely true that increasing the size of the whole outfit does not satisfactorily solve the problem of safety in gales. On the other hand, if it should be possible to have the same lifting power—the same powerful engines—with even a slightly reduced gas envelope, it is all a gain for safety.

It has been estimated by one scientist that at an altitude of 300 miles above the surface of the earth the atmosphere is composed entirely of coronium, and that farther up still the coronium exists, getting thinner as it extends into space.

At a height of 170 miles he estimates that the atmosphere consists of about equal parts of coronium and hydrogen, and at forty-five miles the gas [illegible] is an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a light gas, [illegible] at the surface of the earth—[illegible] only in very minute quantity.

Are Women Coming To This?

A Clever English Satirist's Prophecy of the Tattooed and Tinted Girl of To-morrow

THE present epidemic of grotesque facts—the painting of silhouettes on women's faces and backs, the dyed wigs, the bizarre dresses, and so on—has prompted Dion Calthrop, the brilliant English satirist, to write a remarkable prophecy concerning the girl of to-morrow. It follows.

By Dion Clayton Calthrop.

THE sleeping figure of Miss Brown looked strangely natural in the bizarre surroundings: her green hair flowed over the pillow and made a startling contrast against the white sheets. A soft-voiced clock proclaimed the hour of one, and on the stroke the bedroom door was opened by a maid with magenta open-work stockings and gilt shoes, a white dress studded with rough designs of exotic flowers, and beautifully waved black hair, in which one solitary red curl shone jauntily. She parted the curtains and allowed the sunlight to filter in through the red colored windows.

One lazily stretched arm beautifully tattooed showed that Miss Brown was awake.

"One lazily stretched arm, beautifully tattooed."

The maid then wound up the artificial canary, who proceeded to whistle a naughty little air by Borax consisting of nine discords. The haunting melancholy filled the room for a minute and a half and ceased as abruptly as it had begun.

The lazy hand reached its languorous way to Miss Brown's whitened face and brushed back an idle green curl that had strayed across her eyes.

The room had a piquant beauty all its own. It had been designed by a young Frenchwoman of only six, and had all the wonderful quality of unspoilt imagination. The wooden bed of bright red lacquer stood on gold feet; the black sheets and pillows were of a dazzling depth against the coverlet of purple crepe. The floor was of white enamel, on which a gilded bearskin and a few savage colored rugs lay. The ceiling was burnished gold and the walls were a dull gray.

Now fully awake, Miss Brown pressed the concealed bell, and when the maid returned demanded a dry Martini cocktail and her lunch. This done, she reached out her hand for the Police Gazette and eagerly scanned the columns for some thrill with which to stimulate her imagination. Presently her cocktail appeared, followed shortly by a lunch of chillies, a devilled sole and some hot caviare. This she picked at while she sipped a glass of champagne.

At a quarter to three Miss Brown became possessed of a feverish energy; she rose, bathed, caused her purple wig to be placed over her own sweet green hair, only allowing one stray but fascinating curl to escape and toy with her ear. A few dextrous touches and her face was ready. The odd wit of wearing but one eyebrow, the other having been shaved off, gave to her face just that grotesque air for which she was so justly celebrated. From the disorder of her ebony dressing-table she found the bottle of her own special scent, and liberally sprayed herself. It was a scent many of her boy friends envied, being a secret concoction of Virginia tobacco and giving out a perfume rather like the pit of a music hall. With a dainty fancy she called it Essence de Revue.

Miss Brown was an experienced woman of eighteen, though she owned to twenty-four, and, but for her hair, might have been taken for any young man about town.

The last touches were made to her toilette, a purple patch placed by one eye, the little cigars she affected tucked away in their gold case; the names of three race horses on a slip of paper—all certs for the day—and the telephone number of an airman who was coming to tea with her at her club safely seen into her purse.

Then, as though the exertion of dressing had fatigued her, she took some absinthe, and at last was guided to her car by the ever-attentive maid.

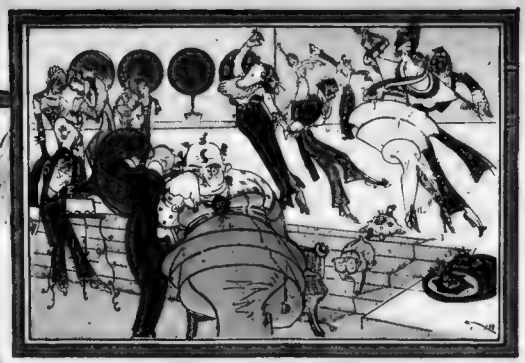
The liveried man-servant bowed in great deference to her as she sailed through the portals of the Ebon Club, and now all eyes were upon her in admiration.

It was a wonderful crowd, the very pick of the middle classes, with here and there a Bohemian earl or a duchess with a vagabond taste. England's brightest boys abounded, all crazy for the dance, dressed in elegant fashion and glossy from their well-pomaded heads to the tips of their white-topped dancing boots. Prize dogs of every color dye could produce lay about on settees or gazed dully out of the pockets of big muffs. Here a jewelled tortoise ploughed his solitary way among some bread and butter all unnoticed.



THE BALL OF THE FUTURE.
"Prize dogs, jewelled tortoises and painted dancers."

Colored Wig, Painted Face, Slouch and Grotesque Gown. This Costume at a Paris Fancy Ball Did Not Attract Much Attention Because It Was Not Too Far from the Reigning Fads.

But now the orchestra, discreetly silent before, broke into the bored air of a tango, and in a moment all was changed. All gaiety was forsworn. The anxious tango expression flew to every face. Boys clasped comparative strangers to their hearts, and with a noble resolve to do or die, threaded the slow mathematics of the dance.

Here and there in the intervals of the dances the young men might be seen drinking bismuth-and-soda for their nerves, while the women toyed with a whiskey-and-soda or fed their dogs with chocolates.

But at the very height of the afternoon, while, in the slightly broken English she assumed to hide, truth to tell, a suggestion of a vulgar accent, Miss Brown was regaling seven rapt youths with an account of her indigestion after a course of cocktails, an awful thing happened. Into the room a stranger came, brought in by a young member, now suddenly aware of his fatal blunder.

The stranger was a woman, big and fine and fair. She was proportioned like a Juno, with clear gray eyes. She was full figured and broad. She was free of paint or powder. She carried no small dog. She came like Nature into the room and smelt of common roses. She spoke. "This," she said, "would amuse my children."

Children! With one wild cry of agonized disgust, Miss Brown fainted. And men said afterwards in hushed whispers that the stranger's immodesty had shocked them beyond all words.

MATRON OF BACK BAY SOCIETY AND HER INTERESTING CHILDREN

Brides and their many affairs are taking up the entire social stage just at present, and for weeks to come all other smart affairs will simply be incidental. Miss Little's wedding will be one of the most important, though one of the most quiet, of the Easter affairs. Her marriage to William Elliott Marshall Whitlock of Baltimore takes place on Thursday, but will be a quiet home affair. The ceremony will take place at the John Mason Little residence on Dartmouth street.

Miss Little will have her two little nieces for her only attendants. They are Louisa and Ida Ogden, daughters of Mrs. Charles W. Ogden of New York. Only near and the more intimate friends will attend the ceremony, which will be performed by the Rev. [illegible] Cheshingham

I understand that Mrs. [illegible] Putnam of Commonwealth avenue is very much concerned over the sudden operation which her niece, Miss Evelyn Byrd Morton of Baltimore, Md., had to undergo this past week for appendicitis. It was very unexpected, as Miss Morton was there to see her mother was giving [illegible] She was stricken [illegible] was a guest at [illegible] to the Baltimore Hospital, where the [illegible] Miss Mor[illegible] Moncure Robinson of New York, and [illegible] Mr. Robinson is a brother of Mrs. Putnam.

MISS ETHEL CHANDLER.

One of the much discussed and widely heralded weddings of April will be that of Miss Ethel Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ward Chandler of Marlboro street, Back Bay, to Dr. Edward F. W. Bartol of Milton, at the Milton Trinity Church on Wednesday, April 15. Miss Chandler and Dr. Bartol are both lovers of the out of doors and devotees of sports in which social rivalry is the keenest. Their [illegible] is generally regarded as [illegible]

Many invitations have been sent out by Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Wilson Miles Carey, Jr., of Baltimore for a dance to be given at their residence in Baltimore on Monday evening, April [illegible] in honor of Miss Edith McHenry, niece of Mrs. Frank Lee of Chestnut Hill. The guests will be limited to debutantes and the younger dancing men and with a few of the young married friends of the host and hostess. Miss McHenry was one of the most feted debutantes of the season just past, and is now in Baltimore with her aunt, Mrs. R. Brent Keyser, who is a sister of her father, Carroll Henry. Miss McHenry spent a portion of the Winter with Mr. and Mrs. Lee at Chestnut Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] will join the Summer colony at Woods Hole this season, having just purchased a cottage there. Mrs. Choate has just returned to her Southboro estate from an extended trip through the South.

Mrs. N. W. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Harding, Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague and E. P. Shaw of Brookline are the patrons and patronesses from Boston for the Easter ball at White Sulphur Springs tomorrow evening. It is to be a [illegible] affair and will take place at the Greenbrier Hotel.

On Tuesday the much-talked-about Anti-Shelf Club, which was organized by the attractive Charlotte Bayliss, will have its last meeting of the season at the Bayliss home, No. 5 Commonwealth avenue. Miss Bayliss will [illegible] a number at dinner parties and others will come in for dancing later in the evening. Several other members of the club are also giving dinners the same evening and will later go with their guests on to the dancing in the Bayliss ballroom. Miss Bayliss and her parents will go to their summer place at Taunton about the middle of May.

Another event of interest tomorrow will be the two performances of the Bernard Shaw play, "Candida," in Brattle Hall, Cambridge, at a matinee at 3 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock, by the Cambridge Political Equality Association.

The cast is as follows: Candida, Miss Jessie MacDonald; Miss Prossy, Miss Elsie [illegible] Hinckley; Morrell, H. W. Stevens; Marchbanks, J. A. Crafton; Lexy Mill, James Gifford; Mr. Burgess, Charles W. Putnam. The patronesses for the affair are Mrs. Lewis J. [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Wessell[illegible], Mrs. P. [illegible] Kennedy, Miss Miriam Gage, Miss Margarette B. Krebs, Mrs. George W. Blackwell, Mrs. Davis R. Dewey, Mrs. Junn S. Humphreys, Mrs. Edward C. Jeffrey, Mrs. E. W. Norton, Mrs. Lionel S. Marks, Mrs. G. M. Parker, Mrs. Henry W. Savage, Mrs. H. Giles Tainter and Mrs. Asa Eliot Sheffield. The proceeds of the entertainment will be devoted to the cause of equal suffrage.

CHATTER OF SOCIETY by the Dowager

I hear on the best authority that Miss Mary S. Ames of this city, who is a very close friend of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, is among the few out of town guests bidden to the dinner which Mrs. Vanderbilt is giving on Wednesday evening next at Sherry's in honor of the approaching marriage of her nephew, Mr. Francis French, and Miss Eleanor Livingston Morrill, April 23, at St. Bartholomew's Church, in New York. Mrs. Vanderbilt's guests will include the entire bridal party. The officiating clergyman will be the Rev. Loughton Parker, formerly of Emmanuel Church, on Newbury street.

An interesting event for Miss already scheduled is the [illegible] the cabaret and [illegible] tion to be given at the [illegible] Plaza on Monday, May 4, for the benefit of the Infants Hospital. It will be one of the smartest and most interesting events of the "little season" and will no doubt net a tidy sum for the worthy cause.

The competition is open only to amateurs, to whom suitable prizes will be awarded for grace and proficiency in dancing the maxixe, the tango, the one-step and the hesitation by a group of judges whose names will be announced later. Among the well known society [illegible] who will [illegible] competition are Mrs. Hall [illegible] Mrs. Allan Forbes, Mrs. Harris Livermore and Miss Mary Vanbah.

The vaudeville will be under the management of Vinton Freedley, Harvard '14, who has been covering himself with glory in the Hasty Pudding Club show, and Mrs. J. Prentiss Bradley, Mrs. James Jackson, Jr., Mrs. J. A. Woodward and Mrs. Rudolph Weld will have charge of the refreshments, which will be served by a group of society girls under the direction of Miss Josette Nurse.

Mrs. Homer H. Richardson is chairman of the general committee and Miss Frances Porter has charge of the sale of tables and of admissions.

Another Easter wedding will be that of Miss Marion Peale and Lawrence Boynton Paine, the younger son of Mrs. William F. Paine of Brookline.

Miss Peale is the daughter of [illegible] Mrs. Algernon Peale of [illegible], N. J. Among the ushers will be Benton Bradshaw [illegible] B. G. Wheeler.

Among the interesting events for April will be the lecture on "India, Old and New," which Rustom Hustomjee, editor of the Oriental Review, Bombay, India, is to give under fashionable patronage at Steinert Hall on Tuesday evening, April 21, at 8:15 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah H. Harding of Brookline have gone South for the Easter season. They will be for some time at White Sulphur Springs.

CHATTER of SOCIETY by the Dowager

Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno of Commonwealth avenue, who is by far one of the prettiest of the younger matrons of the ultra-fashionables, is looking especially pretty this season. One of her most modish costumes is a black and white satin dress in stripes some two inches wide, with trimmings of black lace and satin, the latter forming a deep bodice effect on the gown. With this she wears a deep-cut steel dog collar over a wide band of black velvet, which is most effective. Her hat is a small black-crowned turban with close-fitted brim and trimming of ostrich plumes.

I ran into Miss Hope Norman of Beacon street the other afternoon just as she was alighting from her motor. She is just back from Florida and Washington, with her mother, Mrs. Guy Norman. Miss Norman was especially chic, she wore a dark brown cloth suit, the long cutaway coat of which was trimmed at the back with buttons of the same material The revers were faced with the new shade of brown taffeta silk Her hat was the fashionable "dressed straw," matching her suit, and had only two small brown silk pompons for trimming It was worn well down over her wealth of blonde hair so that her ears were entirely covered. She wore a beautiful white lingerie waist with quantities of Irish lace trimming

Colonel and Mrs. Edward Eldredge of Beacon street had a jolly party at dinner the other evening at the Lombardy Inn, when Mrs. Eldredge—formerly the Countess Peruzzi de Medici of Italy—was looking extremely well in a gown of exquisite black thread lace. It was worn over heavy black Duchesse satin and the bodice had a square neck of white lace outlined in pale blue satin ribbon. With this she wore a large black picture hat of finest Manilla straw, trimmed in long sweeping black ostrich plumes. Mr. and Mrs. George Morgan of Havrah Hubbard of the Boston Opera House will give nine of the Hubbard Opera Talks in Boston and vicinity this week. "Jewels of the Madonna" will be presented before the Music Club in the Congregational Church vestry, Webster, at 4 o'clock, Monday, and before the Woman's Club in the Methodist Church vestry Beale street, Wollaston, at 2:30 o'clock on Wednesday. "Monna Vanna" will be given before the Woman's Club in Odd Fellows' Hall, Norwood, at 2 p. m., Tuesday; "Lohengrin," before the West Roxbury Woman's Club in Highland Hall, on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, before the Hyde Park Current Events Club in French's Opera House, Thursday at 8 p. m., and before the Woman's Scholarship Association, in Room 216, Huntington Chambers, 30 Huntington avenue, Saturday at 2:15 p. m. "Love of the Three Kings" and "Secret of Suzanne" will be presented before the Y. M. C. A. in the Congregational Church vestry, Wakefield, Wednesday at 8 p. m., and "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" will be given before the Ladies' Club at the residence of Dr. Clarence K. Ordway, 371 Main street, Winchester, Thursday at 2 o'clock. On Friday evening, "Haensel and Gretel" will be given for the residents and guests of the Woolson Home for the Blind in Cambridge. Floyd M. Baxter, pianist, will supply the musical illustrations for all the talks.

Mrs. Wallace D. Williams of Brookline is to contribute readings and Mrs. Carroll J. Swan is to sing at the musicale and tea that is to be given by Mrs. C. W. Randall at the Hotel Princeton, Commonwealth avenue, on Monday afternoon, April 27, in behalf of the Publicity Committee for the Country Fair that is to be held by the Brightbelmstone Club, June 4, 5 and 6, at the Allston Golf Club grounds. Among the ladies assisting Mrs. Randall are Mrs. F. E. J. Dowling, Mrs. Frederick Hammond, Mrs. Charles E. Holman, Mrs. Arthur W. Mutty, Mrs. William H Hosa, Mrs. Frederic A. Tupper, Mrs. Chester L. Jacobs, Mrs. William H. Emerson, Mrs. Nella J. Doggett, Miss Ruth L. Blacker, Miss Priscilla Holmes of Allston, and Mrs. Ernest Lyon and Mrs. Wirt Dexter Brown.

On Saturday, the 18th, comes Miss Katherine Amory's wedding to James R. Hooper, Jr., the ceremony to take place at Trinity Church.

The annual theatricals of the Ways and Means Committee will be given at the new Wilbur Theatre Thursday and Friday afternoons, April 30 and May 1 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. "Jim the Penman" is the title of the play. It will be produced under the direction of Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Pierce, assisted by Mrs. Lyman Whitman Gale, Mrs. Guy Currier and Clifford F. Pember.

The Players' League will have charge of the first one on April 20; Mrs. Currier, president of the league, will preside and will be assisted by many well-known professional people. On Friday, May 1, the The Dansant will be in charge of Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Mrs. George R. Fearing, Jr., Mrs. Oakes Ames, Miss Katherine Fay, Mrs. William H. Wheelwright and Mrs. Louis Agassiz Fuas.

On the Ways and Means Committee are such well-known women as Mrs. Benjamin F. Pinman, chairman; Miss Fanny C. Ingoldsby, treasurer; Mrs. Ellen F. Adams, Mrs. Oakes Ames, Miss Caroline M. Amory, Mrs. Richard Washburn Child, Miss Mabel W. Daniels, Mrs. Robert L. De Normandie, Mrs. Wirt Dexter, Mrs. Frederick C. Dumaine, Mrs. William C. Eastman, Mrs. John G. Edwards, Miss Frances Elder, Mrs. Joseph Story Fay, Miss Katherine Fay, Mrs. G. R. Fearing, Jr., Mrs. Lyman W. Gale, Mrs. Thomas N. Gray, Jr., Miss Margaret Hatfield, Miss Eleanor Hinckley, Miss Charlotte Jones, Mrs. Francis Peabody Magoun, Mrs. Frederic L. Ailliken, Mrs. Samuel McComb, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. H. P. McKean, Mrs. Walter Gilman Page, Mrs. Charles H. Prince, Mrs. D. Blakelee Rogers, Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, Miss Julia Shewell, Miss Louis R. Sherwood, Mrs. Charles H. Stearns, Mrs. William W. Wheelwright and Mrs. Herbert H White.

With the dawn of Easter things socially brighten up perceptibly and the coming weeks will be, for a short time at least, quite as gay as the real season which was so decidedly merry.

Among the events scheduled is the dinner dance Tuesday evening for which the Copley-Plaza management has sent out cards.

Dinner will be served at 7:30 and dancing will take place in the ballroom from 9:30 until 2

One of the important events of the week will be the birthday reception and tea of the Daughters of Massachusetts at the Hotel Brunswick from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The guests of honor on that occasion will be Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, President of the Senate and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Auditor of the Commonwealth, Frank H. Pope and Mrs. Pope, Attorney General Thomas J. Boynton and Mrs. Boynton, Dean Caroline L. Davies of Jackson College, Mrs. George W. Perkins, President of the State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Frank L. Young, president of the Boston City Federation.

Others to take part are:

I happened to meet Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham of this city and Hamilton the other afternoon just home from their trip to California, where they spent the past two months traveling extensively, as they shipped their car West to enjoy the motoring there. During a short visit in town they were guests of Mrs. Cunningham's sister, Mrs. Jay Bird, on Bay State road, where I happened to see them as they came from one of Mrs. Cunningham's motoring with their hostess. Mrs. Cunningham was looking well in a smart gown of seal brown cloth made up with cream lace and embroidery of brown chiffon, the latter being used also to trim the transparent neck of the costume in surplice effect. With it she wore a brown coat of the same material trimmed in dark brown silk braid. She wore stunning sable furs. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham are now at their Summer estate in Hamilton for the season.

I hear that the stork is hovering over the domicile of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Bartlett, Jr., who was formally Miss Christine Hunnewell and a bride of last Summer, at the family home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Hunnewell at Wellesley. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are summering on the North Shore this year and they have rented a house

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Ahl, who recently returned from their Winter at Palm Beach on Wednesday, quietly observed the anniversary of their wedding Mrs. Ahl was formerly Mrs. Robert C. Heaton. On the same day Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Warren celebrated the first anniversary of their wedding. Mrs. Warren before her marriage was Elizabeth Sears.

That interesting young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Amory, have returned from their trip abroad and are to spend a few weeks in Boston prior to going for the season to their Summer place at Nahant. Mrs. Amory before her marriage was Leonora Cobb

Mrs. William Draper and her daughter, Margaret, will not be of the exclusive North Shore colony this season, as they have planned to spend the Summer abroad. The Drapers will sail for Europe on the 15th.

The young friends of Miss Charlotte Bayliss are making her home-coming a decidedly merry one, and she is being feted and dined on all sides. Miss Bayliss, who was the organizer of the popular Anti-Rheit Club, is distinctly a leader in her exclusive young set and has been enjoying a trip to Panama with a party of friends

Among the recent smart set arrivals at White Sulphur Springs are Mrs. Nehemiah Rice and Miss Annie Rice of Commonwealth avenue.

Among the many Bostonians preparing to depart for Europe soon are Mrs. Charles G. Weld of Hay State road and Miss Mary Weld, who are to spend a year or more traveling abroad. Miss Weld is one of the wealthiest young heiresses in society and when she makes her debut she will be one of the most important buds of her year

Mrs. Gardner Washburn of Clyde street, Brookline, is sailing very soon and will spend the summer in foreign travel. She will join Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clausen of Brookline and their daughter, Miss Frances Clausen who sailed several weeks ago for Mediterranean ports

Mrs. Hobert Treat Paine, 2d, of Beacon street, is also preparing to go abroad very soon, as are also Mr. and Mrs. David Crocker of Commonwealth avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Barr who were in town at the Copley Plaza several days after their return from the West, have gone to their Beverly Farms estate to remain for the Easter holidays

Among Bostonians sailing Tuesday for Europe were Mrs. Cedric Lefebvre, Mr. and Mrs. William York Peters and their daughters, Miss Amy Peters and Miss Catherine Peters

Mrs. Stephen M. Weld of Dedham has returned from New York, where she has been spending some weeks with friends. The Welds will go to their fine estate in Wareham in the late Spring Mrs. James M. Codman has been in New York for a short visit

Mrs. George A. Draper and her daughter, Miss Helen Draper, who was one of the very prettiest of this season's buds, accompanied by Mrs. Draper's sister, Mrs. George H. Davis, have arrived at the Virginia Hot Springs, where they are spending Easter.

In the WORLD of Society

Mr and Mrs. John M. Graham of Commonwealth avenue are to be among the early arrivals at Manchester this Spring They will be among the earliest to open their seashore villas

Dr. and Mrs. Channing Simmons of Commonwealth avenue are among those who have kept their country estate open for week-end visits and have just returned to town from their Falmouth estate, where they spent several days

Mrs. James Means of Beacon street is among those who are planning dainty hospitalities and hers will take the form of a dinner party at her residence on Easter Monday, the affair is in honor of her son, Lloyd Means, and her several of his young friends. The dinner will preface the annual dance of the Noble Jubbol functions to be given later in the evening

Among the very earliest of our fashionables to take flight from town are Mrs. Walcott Howe Johnson of Commonwealth avenue and her children, who have gone to their Wenham estate for the Summer.

Miss Bertha Coolidge, eldest daughter of Mrs. Albert L. Coolidge of the Ludlow, is making quite a name for herself in Paris where she has been studying art A number of her miniatures have been on exhibition there

Mr. and Mrs. William W. Kallen of Hotel Puritan will go down to their Cohasset estate about the first of May for the Summer.

Miss Elizabeth Perkins of Clarendon street is about arriving in Europe. She will remain abroad until the last of June, when she will go to Beverly Farms for the remainder of the season

Mr and Mrs. Edward M. Farnsworth of Brookline have returned from a brief visit in New York.

James Tyler Wetherald and his son, Royal W. Wetherald, sailed on Tuesday from New York to Europe. They go first to Paris, where they will meet Miss Dorothy Wetherald, who has been spending the Winter in Spain and the Orient.

Miss Margery Lee, the attractive daughter of Mrs. George Lee, who since returning from abroad has been at the Copley-Plaza, is now the guest of friends in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dabney Stackpole of Commonwealth avenue, sailed Tuesday from New York for Europe. Mrs. Frank Gair Macomber of Beacon street, sailed at the same time.

According to latest reports Mr and Mrs. Thomas N. Lindsay and their two young daughters, who have been abroad several months, will not return to Boston this Summer. Mr. Lindsay is to remain in Africa, where he is hunting big game, and Mrs. Lindsay and the children will stay with her mother, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page. Mr. Page is the American ambassador to Rome and Mrs. Lindsay is staying at the embassy.

NEWS of SOCIETY

SOCIETY'S COWGIRLS GOING ON STAGE

Wild West Ranchmen Will Turn Green with Envy if They Get a Glimpse of "Petticoat Ranch"

Debutantes and buds of the fashionable Vincent Club find little time for social frivolities these days with the annual show, "A Modern Pandora," set for April 25, 28 and May 1. At this show of this year, if plans do not fail, promises, in the number of features at least to eclipse any performance thus far given by the Vincent Club girls.

A novelty of the performance will be the entrance of Miss Rose Saltonstall as Mercury. Miss Saltonstall will make her stage debut apparently floating down through the air in reality suspended from a tiny pulley which runs along a wire invisible to the audience. Pandora's Box from which the principals of the cast and the dancers will emerge is to be built at the rear of the stage. Performers will enter from behind the scenes and first appear to the audience through a door in front which noiselessly closes after each as she comes out.

Following the fifers and drummers will occur the novel drill of a company of the girls in uniform, which means regulation suits and trousers with gold buttons, gilt braid and "thick bustle" hats in the grenadier. The drill promises to prove one of the novelties of the show. Music has been chosen from different comic operas and will be rendered by Mrs. Rentfrew's orchestra.

Among newly announced features will be a solo dance entitled "A Modern Extravagance," by Miss Dorothy Jordan, a song by Miss Phyllis Robbins and "The Rainbow" and "The Dance of the Evil Spirits" two dances which promise to prove decided attractions. The Rainbow dance will be executed by Mrs. Manfred Bewditch, Miss Helen Bullard, Miss Hilda Foster, Miss Louise Dixon, Miss Dorothy Howard, Miss Irene Lockwood and Miss Louise Whiting.

The girls who will take part in "The Dance of the Evil Spirits" are Miss Lucy Cabot, Miss Anne Stetson, Miss Madeline Herring, Miss Rachel Warren.

Another star event of much interest will be the sling dance to be executed by Mrs. G. Hall Roosevelt and Miss Ruth Harrington.

The following comprise the octette, a part of the chorus: Girls: Miss Elizabeth DeNord, Miss Eleanor Fabian, Miss Frances Webster, Miss Elsie Lawrence, Boys: Miss Caroline Fessenden, Miss Natalie Thayer, Miss Hunnewell and Miss Martha Thorndike. Miss Marie Ames will lead the ballet.

The sale of tickets for the show will begin tomorrow and continue daily at Herricks on Boylston street from 11.30 to 1 o'clock. E. C. Wheeler, Jr., who has taken part in former performances of the Vincent Club, has charge of the ticket selling. The girls are being instructed in the different dancing features by Mrs. Lilla Vilas Wyman. Miss Florence has charge of the drilling and the management of the cast and the production is in the hands of Mr. James Gilbert.

Mrs. Charles Whitney of "Rockledge," Milton, left town on Thursday for Washington, where she is to be the guest of friends until the 20th of the month, when she will go to New York to be the guest of her niece, Mrs. Henry S. Satterlee (Ethel Whitney). Later in the season Mr. Satterlee will play a return visit to Mrs. Whitney.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Luce, who had intended going for the Summer to their bungalow on Cape Cod, have been obliged to change their plans on account of Mrs. Luce's health, and will instead go to Edgehill, Nahant, for the season.

Among the well known society women who are patronesses for the The Dansant at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday afternoon, April 16, are Mrs. Jay Wise Dexter, Mrs. F. B. Crowninshield, Mrs. George R. Fearing, Miss Florence Burr, Mrs. Hallett Movius, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. James A. Parker, Mrs. Guy W. Currier and Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw. The affair is for the benefit of the Massachusetts Political Equality Union.

The Hon. and Mrs. Curtis Guild have returned to their home in Matthews street from their visit in Washington.

Mrs. Allan Curtis and Miss Eveleth Curtis, who sailed for Europe several weeks ago, will return very shortly. They will for a short time be at their Beacon street home, to go later on to their seashore estate for the Summer. Before returning, however, Mrs. Curtis and her daughter will make a tour of Sicily.

The Frederick Ayers of Commonwealth avenue are at Virginia Hot Springs for the Easter season. Upon their return to Boston they will go directly to their Beverly Farms estate for the Summer.

Mrs. Alanson Tucker, who has spent a few weeks also for the past month in Paris, will sail early next month for home, and will visit at the Somerset several weeks before opening her Bar Harbor house, "Sea Fox." Mr. and Mrs. Reid Hewitt are other Bostonians now in Paris.

Miss Mary Black, daughter of Mrs. O'Neil, James F. Curtis and her sister, Miss Caughter Elisabeth are in Washington for Easter, the guests of Mrs. Curtis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Morrison.

Mary Dodge, to perform the baby dance.

Mexican and Spanish songs and dances, a baby dance, a peacock dance, and a score of other features acted, sung and tripped in the breezy atmosphere of "the ranch" are expected to make "Petticoat Ranch" given by the members of the Junior Charity Club of Boston next Thursday afternoon and Friday evening one of the leading performances of the Spring season.

"Petticoat Ranch" is all that the name implies. Over 3 society maids and matrons costumed in picturesque attire will appear in an amazing array of stunts which have been arranged as a part of the play.

As one of the first society performances of the post-Easter season it is expected that Junior Ball will be well filled with an audience interested both in the show and in the charitable cause for which it has been planned.

One of the star features will be a parade by cowgirls and cowboys, "The drill of the Texan [illegible] the following taking part: [illegible] Miss Dorothy MacDonald, [illegible] Mealy, Enid [illegible] Mrs. Homer [illegible] (girls). This drill will be led by Mrs. [illegible] of the [illegible] events of the [illegible] will include the Texas Tommy and a group [illegible] to be [illegible] lance at [illegible] second act, [illegible] in the wild [illegible] little boys in [illegible] Sharp, [illegible] all armed [illegible] will appear in the [illegible].

[illegible] Chinese dance of six maids, "Mother's gone to join the army" will be sung by eight suffragettes with yellow ribbons across their breasts bearing the token "Votes for Women" in large letters.

Pretty Miss Constance Kerry, one of the solo dancers of the performance will appear in the peacock dance dressed in the attire of the [illegible] of the [illegible] shoulders, and when she lifts her hands in the dance the million eyes of her plumage will open and twinkle, just as they do when the peacock spreads its tail. Miss Mary Dodge will perform the baby dance. Mrs. [illegible] White and Mr. Dodge [illegible] will demonstrate [illegible] brilliant Spanish costume and smoking the inevitable cigarette of the senorita, will do the Spanish dance.

The following is the complete cast of the show:

Earl of Harcourt	Louise Ordway
[illegible]	Winifred Wagner
[illegible]	Dorothy Dodge
[illegible]	Madeline Herring
[illegible]	Isabel Foster
[illegible]	Rachel Warren
[illegible]	Mrs. [illegible]
[illegible]	Mrs. [illegible]
[illegible]	Miss [illegible]

Mrs. Hasbrouck Young of Winchester, president of the club, is managing the show. The production is under the direction of George R. C. Lord of Cambridge, who wrote the play.

Mr. and Mrs. William H Coolidge are at their Beverly estate at Magnolia for the Easter weekend. They will shortly go down for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison K. Ranger of Philadelphia will come on to their North Shore villa at Manchester early this season. The owners have been making a lengthy transatlantic tour.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam have just returned from a visit to New York, while there they were at the St. Regis.

The Misses Stanton Churches, who have been absent from their North Shore estate while repairs were being made, have returned there and will remain throughout the season.

The W. R. Cabots will be much missed from the North Shore this season, as they have decided to spend the Summer abroad.

The Matthew Bartletts are among the latest arrivals at Beverly Farms for the season.

Mrs. William J. Wright, who spent the greater part of the Winter in New York, opened her Dartmouth street house in time for Easter.

Theodore Parsons Chandler 2d, of Quincy, Miss Sue Stone of Dedham, where, upon concluding their bridal tour, they will make their permanent home. They will be ready for callers there after the first of July.

Mr. Frederick W. Tucker of Spencer street is to spend the coming Summer at Edgehill, Nahant, instead of at Cohasset, as has been his custom.

SOMERVILLE

The wedding of Alderman William T. McCarthy of Ward 1, Somerville, second assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, and Miss Nellie Frances Sullivan, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Sullivan of No. 21 Lincoln street, East Somerville, will take place at 10 a. m. on April 22, at St. Benedict's Church, East Somerville.

Among the guests at the church ceremony will be a number of priests who will occupy seats in the chancel. Relatives and friends will be present at the wedding breakfast and reception which will follow at the home of the parents of the popular bride-elect. After the honeymoon trip the couple will live at No. [illegible] street, East Somerville.

Nuptial mass will be celebrated by the brother of the bridegroom, the Rev. Thomas F. McCarthy, pastor of St. Clement's Church, Medford. Miss Marion E. Sullivan, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. There will be four bridesmaids, Miss Marguerite Miller, No. 90 Fenway, Back Bay; Miss Marguerite McDonough, No. 101 Sheridan avenue, Medford; Miss Katherine Hartnett, No. 113 College avenue, West Somerville, and Miss Florence Crawford, No. 41 Wales street, Dorchester. Agnes C. Sullivan, youngest sister of the bride, and Margaret McCarthy, niece of the bridegroom, will be flower girls. Luke D. Mullen Jr., the four-year-old son of Luke D. Mullen, president of the Charlestown Trust Company, will be ring bearer.

Francis X. McCarthy, brother of the bridegroom, will be best man, and Thomas H. and Lawrence H. Sullivan, Jr., brothers of the bride; George S. McLaughlin of Somerville and Frank O'Donnell of Cambridge, First Assistant District Attorney of Middlesex Count, will be ushers.

Miss Sullivan, who is a native of South Boston, was educated at the Bunker Hill grammar school, Charlestown, and Notre Dame Academy, Boston. She is a talented soprano soloist, pianist and violinist. Alderman McCarthy was born in Somerville, November 5, 1884. He graduated from Fenwick Preparatory School in 1901 and from Holy Cross College with high honors in 1905. In 1908 he received the degree LL. B. from Boston University Law School and was soon after admitted to the bar. He has been an Alderman from Ward 1 the past three years.

IN CHINESE GARB

NO OTHERS ADMITTED TO COPLEY SOCIETY FETE

Miss Chi Che Wang, Wellesley's famous Chinese student, who will assist in presentation of Copley Society's Chinese play and fete

Everybody who attends the Chinese play and fete to be given by the Copley Society will have to wear Chinese costumes. No one not in Oriental attire will be admitted. The weird strains of Chinese musical instruments and the decorations will add to the unique atmosphere of the affair.

The fete will be preceded by a Chinese play in several acts, entitled "See Yue Chee," which depicts the introduction of Buddhism from India into China. It has been dramatized from an eight-volume Chinese classic of the seventh century, A. D., and will be performed by the Chinese students of Harvard and Technology. Following the performance, another novelty will occur in a Tsar Tien or serving of refreshments. After the Tsar Tien there will be dancing until 1 a. m.

The scenery for the play is being painted by the students [illegible] the decoration department of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts under the direction of Livingston Platt. The play itself includes the introduction of Chinese national dancing and jugglery.

The hall will be a veritable Chinese theatre, with balconies arranged about the sides; Chinese lanterns and the like. Even the music will be upon Chinese stringed instruments.

The Chinese students here have been at work for several months upon the production of the play. The committee on costumes is to meet Tuesday and Friday afternoons from three to six, and after Tuesday, April 21, the committee will meet daily until the day of the fete.

Miss Mary O. Porter of Brimmer stret is chairman of this committee, which also includes: Turpin Hsi, Techun Hsi, H. Winthrop Peirce, who has drawn a series of colored plates from which costumes can be selected; Miss Pauline Croll, the originator of the show poster and of thirty-two headdress studies, and Miss Mary O. Clarke.

The general management of the play is under Y. S. Tsao, a student at the Harvard School of Business Administration. The dramatic committee consists of Loy Chang, M. G. Hou, Techum Hsi, Turpin Hsi, Chi Che Wang, F. T. [illegible] Z. T. Zee, all Chinese students at colleges nearby.

The following comprises the [illegible] committee: [illegible] Maris Danforth Page [illegible] [illegible], president of the [illegible] Society; Thomas Allen, W[illegible] B. Allen, Daniel O. Brewster, Henry Hunt Clark, Frederick W. Coburn, Eugene N. F[illegible] Newton Mackintosh, Mrs. Everett Morse, Miss Jean Nutting Oliver, H. Winthrop Pierce, Miss Mary O. Porter, Miss Amy Sacker, Henry D. Sleeper, Joseph Lindon Smith, Y. S. Tsao, C. Howard Walker, Edward R. Warren and Frank W. Webber.

The invitations to the fete will be printed upon Chinese paper with decorations in oriental design.

Among the entertainers at the Tsar Tien will be Chinese girls from the different Greater Boston schools, including Miss Chang and Miss Wang of Wellesley College and Miss Chu of Cushing Academy.

THE ROLL OF HONOR

Winners of the Boston American $2,000 EDUCATIONAL FUND

Offered for the Best Hand-Colored Work on Pictures Submitted in the American's Recent Water Color Competition

STATEMENT

By

Theodore M. Dillaway,

Director of Manual Arts, Boston [illegible] Schools.

The educational enterprise of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN in its recent Water Color competition is certainly most commendable. I feel sure that this has been the means of awakening greater interest on the part of teachers, school children and all other contestants in the varied beauties of Nature and the Fine Arts.

The character of the work submitted was generally of a high order and indicated intelligence in the handling of water colors and a discriminating taste in combining the colors to produce harmonious results.

It is hoped that this excellent beginning in the study of color in nature and art may be more general for it is, unquestionably, of great educational value.

During the competition many visited the Museum of Fine Arts for the purpose of studying the pictures that the AMERICAN had reproduced for coloring. This helped to make the museum collection more widely known and appreciated.

The examination and comparison of the large number of hand-colored pictures submitted has been conducted with great care and entire fairness to all.

Theodore M. Dillaway

The AMERICAN extends its thanks to Mr. Dillaway, who so generously gave his own valuable time to the examination of the pictures submitted.

this exquisite picture (larger) in full colors, and a big cake of this wonderful Health Soap

First a healthy skin—then a beautiful complexion

The healthy skin must come first.

Keeping it clean is not enough—it must be protected.

Lifebuoy Health Soap, as its odor shows, contains an antiseptic solution which purifies and protects the skin, and thus promotes its health and beauty.

Watch your skin improve with its use. Three cakes will show wonders. Get three cakes from your Grocer or Druggist. Don't delay.

We are willing to lose money to get you to try Lifebuoy Health Soap because experience proves that those who try Lifebuoy once will use it regularly.

Trial offer, this week only. Buy 2 cakes for 10c; get 1 cake and this beautiful picture FREE—use coupon

THE above reproduction gives but a faint idea of the dainty charm and lifelike coloring of the original. The painting is by Philip Boileau, one of the most famous American painters of beautiful women, whose girls' heads you have often seen on covers of the Saturday Evening Post and other publications.

Mr. Boileau painted this picture to show correctly the "Lifebuoy complexion," famous for its fresh, youthful tints.

The painting was so remarkably beautiful that we had calls for it from all parts of the country.

So we have had a number of exact reproductions made by a special process which brings out all the beauty of the original painting.

These reproductions in full color, without advertising, we have decided to give to the readers of the American without charge.

This Is the Way to Get the Soap and the Picture:

Fill out the coupon in the lower corner of this advertisement with your name and address and take it to your grocer or druggist. Give him 10 cents and he will give you three cakes of Lifebuoy Soap. As the price is 5 cents a cake, you thus get one cake free. Then cut out the picture of the old sailor on each of the three Lifebuoy cartons. Send all three sailor pictures to Lever Brothers Co., Cambridge, Mass., and the picture will be sent to you promptly, without charge.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

5c

Any grocer or druggist to whom you present this coupon will give you 3 cakes of Lifebuoy Soap for 10c. As the price is 5c a cake, this gives you ONE CAKE FREE

Mrs. Alice C. Maloney, Supreme Deputy of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Society, attended a meeting of the Sacred Heart Branch, Malden, Friday. For the middle of May a class initiation is being planned which will take place in Edwards Hall. Mrs. Mary Dever is president of the branch.

"Thanks, noble comrades, she's mine!"

His—the very thought made her shudder.

The most beautiful girl in Bergman's Beauty Show, famed where white lights and wine sparkled, sought after by millionaires, finally married to one. Her cup of joy would seem to brim over.

But life since she left the little up-state village had been distasteful. Only when her boy-husband, disowned, was left with naught but a craving for alchohol, did a tinge of love come.

By Betty the Shopper

The dainty miss who plans her trousseau this season need not feel that her choice in wedding gowns is limited to [illegible] simple lingerie [illegible] all important [illegible] neck, long [illegible] sleeves [illegible] matter. [illegible] Dame Fashion makes her wants and [illegible] cades [illegible] ratio into [illegible] the fashion [illegible] And as to the cut—it may be demi-décolleté or high [illegible] just as Milady fancies.

The gown itself may be constructed in a [illegible] of course [illegible] Two much fuss and feathers will detract from its beauty. Let the bride indulge her love of the fanciful in any of the other frocks of her wardrobe. [illegible] must be lighter [illegible] bridal gown.

Fortunate, indeed, is the girl whose family boasts a chest of rare old lace that can be pressed into requisition on such occasions. For her the problem of the wedding gown is easily solved. A touch here and there of the filmy, cobweb transparencies of our grandmother's days and the simplest gown becomes a thing of beauty.

The arrangement of the veil has always been a matter of great moment, and styles change in this as in the making of the gown. This year in the tulle veils cap effects are very good. Some have the side flare, in the manner of the Castle hat, others have a flare in front, wired to give the effect of an upstand ng brim. Then again the cap is often laid in soft pleats which droop gracefully over the hair. If one is the possessor of some rare old point, it is usually arranged to show the beauty of the lace most effectively.

This season it is better form for the bride to carry a bouquet than a prayer book, though many people of undisputed good taste prefer and will carry the book.

In the matter of gloves, if it be a daytime wedding, she may wear a one-button glove with her long sleeve gown or the mousquetaire glove in elbow lengths.

When the most serious problem, the wedding gown, is out of the way, then the selection of the multitude of other dainty things in a trousseau becomes all absorbing.

If the girl be unusually fortunate, a adoring mother, aunts and cousins, silver with [illegible] contribute the beautiful, filmy things of lingerie that she must own.

This year they have a wide choice in the selection of materials for the underclothing. Fine batiste, silk muslin, crepe de chine and soft China silk will combine comfort and service and still give the soft, clingy lines so necessary.

Of course the bride will want a fine lawn or [illegible] sprinkled over with dainty lace, more because custome associates such things with a trousseau than [illegible] their actual popularity just at [illegible] crepe de chine and soft [illegible] to recommend this year. The dainty knickers she wears will be of this material, as will also be the clinging petticoat or soft chemise.

The shoes also [illegible] beautiful things, [illegible] who must buy them ready made need not fear that they will lack in daintiness. In fact, many people prefer to get them in the stores. [illegible] sewing and [illegible] the [illegible] required which adds more than makes up for the added expense.

Until recently the American woman looked aghast at the variety of color her European sister used in her underclothing. White alone seemed appropriate for the woman of refinement, but this year flesh pink becomes the vogue, and the daintiest things are made in this tone of sheerest lightness. combination, chemise, camisole and petticoat developed in flesh tint crepe de chine would make a lovely set for the bridal trousseau.

The envelope combination is one of the newest ideas in lingerie, and since it obviates the necessity of wearing an extra corset cover and is easy of adjustment it is bound to be popular. A shop in Winter street is showing these combinations in crepe de chine, sheer linen, batiste and nainsook, with an elastic run top which conforms it over the bust and under the arms thus doing away with the silk cord and unsightly shoulder straps. These sell from $1.98 to $4.50, according to the material used.

No article of the bride's wardrobe is selected with greater care than her negligee. The soft, clingy materials in all the delicate shades at her command provide her with a never-ending source of selection. Every season reveals in these dainty things, and truly I think she deserves a great deal of credit for the restraint exhibited her wearing this beautiful and often most becoming robe, her gowns outside of her boudoir.

I once heard a very charming girl who after a brilliant wedding had gone with her husband to make her home on a Western cattle ranch confide to a few of her intimates that the only thing she jealously guarded from her trousseau was a filmy, creamy negligee. Though six years had passed since her marriage and [illegible] combination of either of these with silk.

The cotton crepes have advanced amazingly in the estimation of fashionable women. This is largely due to the efforts of the French weavers from whose looms have come truly marvelous fabrics which the dress designers have used with artistic effect in the lingerie gown.

Splashes of color are interwoven in the new French cotton crepes. Sometimes it bursts out in full blown flowers introduced in border effect, and again the color takes the form of [illegible] sprigs of irregular flecks whose tones are emphasized in the solid hand used for the border. Dolly Varden pompadour and [illegible] terns are very much favored, and some of these have curious borders of [illegible] stripe arrangement.

Every Woman Envies Kitty Gordon Her Gowns Marvels of Art and Beauty

This exquisite gown combines all of the newest features. If a gown which is backless and sleeveless can be correctly [illegible] above anything. A high girdle and bretelles of crystal trimming with a suggestion of tulle here and there form the corsage. The heavily embroidered skirt has a double flounce tunic which is confined at the waist by the silk girdle. A beautiful headdress of pearls and feathers is worn with this costume.

This marvellous gown worn by Miss Gordon has a silken foundation with a complete overdress of crystal beads. The sleeveless corsage has a unique lattice work arrangement of the crystals with a solidly embroidered crystal ornament in front. The skirt has an escalloped minaret, outlined with fur, short enough to disclose the double puffing of satin under crystal trimming. With this gown Miss Gordon wears her thousand-dollar paradise and her pearls.

Miss Gordon might be ready to serve tea in her boudoir, so dainty and becoming is the negligee she is wearing. Flesh pink crepe de chine is the material used, while shirring of silk is the only trimming.

Miss Gordon's costumes have been at once the envy and admiration of two continents. They are designed for her by the Callot Soeurs of Paris, a house whose name carries of itself garment attests to its perfection.

With one of these exquisite creations, Miss Gordon wears a black and white parasol for which she paid one thousand dollars. She is justly proud in its possession, as it is one of the finest bits of plumage in this country or Europe.

Miss Gordon is also famed for the rare taste she shows in the selection of her jewels. At one time during the play she wears a three-strand pearl necklace reaching to her knees and fastening with a priceless cameo and brilliant in her mother's locket.

This delightful English girl, however, is not obsessed with the passion for clothes, one might imagine after seeing her wonderful wardrobe. On the contrary she is a real "home body," whose all-absorbing ambition just now is to own a country place near Boston.

"I've fallen in love with your city and its charming suburbs. One always hears of the delightful country and there places surrounding Boston, but never until I'm a visit did I fully realize their charm. Now though I'm a loyal English woman—I am certainly going to own a shore place somewhere within an hour's motor ride of the Cort Theatre. So you see my summer promises to be quite worth while."

Far be it from me to arouse hopes in the breast of the trusting vender of real estate. But Miss Gordon's statements carry conviction so—gentlemen, get busy.

Dance Frocks

The theatre-restaurant-dance-frock of taffeta, flowered satin or startling striped designs, are sometimes accompanied by airy little capes of gauze that are attached to the back of the small-sleeved full to long waist line after the manner of the Capuchin hoods. These airy appendages give a charming note of frivolity and coquetry to frocks designed for a frivolous hour and a coquettish one.

Another delightful little touch is the appearance of the bow of black velvet or black taffeta at the back of the neck of the semi-formal gown. Frequently the bow heads a fall of lace that at first appearance suggested a misplaced jabot.

There is no doubt that lace will be in big demand for the evening dance frock. Already one has only to drop in at any one of the smart after-theatre places and observe the quantity of lace and malline that is being used for the fashionable gown.

Silk Knitted Sweaters

The silk knitted sweaters have been well received. Some of these are shown in solid colors; many of them are knitted with a double thread of contrasting shades and are reversible. These have quite a tailored effect, being shown with wide collars cuffs and belts and large buttons. They come in all lengths, but those which have received most attention are about hip length.

A notable feature in all the sweaters shown this year is the change in the shape, many of them curving to suggest the waist line.

By NAN MANTEAUX.

"Pretty Mrs Smith," who in real life is Kitty Gordon, the charming star of the Cort Theatre great success, has recently had a most unusual compliment paid her. Her manager, Oliver Morosco, realizing her love of dainty and beautiful things, has presented her with a complete set of pearls. The exquisite [illegible] has been supplied by a Bond Street [illegible] after designs by J. Daniel Prawley. Mr. Prawley did not go about this matter of designing hurriedly. He studied the tastes and temperament of the star, and built his designs around her, as it were, with the result —that in as far as it is possible to reproduce personality in [illegible] textures—he has reproduced Miss Gordon, and she fits into her new surroundings with the same ease that she wears any of her charming gowns.

And the beauty of it all is Miss Gordon doesn't have to [illegible] behind her. No siree. When "Pretty Mrs. Smith" moves on all these lovely things go with her to be set up at the next stopping point.

It would be hard to imagine Miss Gordon in any but delightful surroundings, so it is quite easy to speculate on what passed through Mr. Morosco's mind when he saw his star installed in the usual stage dressing room. He decided she must have a room worthy of herself and her gowns—and presto—she has.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

Damask, our old friend of table cloth fame, is forging to the front in popularity for frocks. Many of the early Summer gowns shown here at present are developed in this material.

Plaid taffeta will be good for your dressy afternoon frock this spring. Combined in some clever manner with a plain or changeable taffeta it will be most effective.

The waist coat girdle is one of the delightful accessories that will give an air of smartness to an old gown. Poplin is a splendid material for these as it has sufficient body to hold its shape indefinitely.

The evening gowns of the coming Winter will be a gorgeous affair indeed. Wherever women gather to finish out the wee small hours there will be the glitter and allure of gold and silver cloth, of nets and [illegible] trusted laces. Fashion has decreed that this will be the correct garniture, if not the material for the entire gown.

Many of the newest skirts are featuring the hip yoke. It must not [illegible] but [illegible] give the same effect as the [illegible] hip girdle.

Dainty patterns of flowered lawns, batistes and thin handkerchief linens are used for the Summer waist and under these will be worn attractive little bodices of some sheer material with flat shoulder straps of fine lace insertion.

Have you seen the shoes composed of two materials? They're very smart. The toe and the back of the shoe may be in velvet, with the upper front and heel in satin. Leather and velvet or leather and satin are also combined quite successfully in these shoes.

Flowers, flowers everywhere! You just must have a flowered chapeau in your Summer wardrobe if you would be ultra smart.

Panjers and tunics appear to be the natural and artistic accompaniment of the dancing frock. Sometimes they are in the familiar minaret effect, and frequently they fall in flounce suggestions with the puffed up drapery at the back to give the new bustle or cascade drapery.

If Milady can have but one hat black of course is always the safest choice. But for one of unlimited means every frock in the wardrobe can have its own particular chapeau to go with it, and [illegible] variety in choice, they will bear little resemblance to each other.

King Cotton Reigns

The cotton materials are at last coming into their own. Not for many seasons has this fabric been as popular as it promises to be this Summer, not only for the simpler frocks, but for the most fashionable gowns.

Today the shops are filled with cottons in the most delightful designs and weaves. The colors are as various and fascinating as the weaves, so one must be strong indeed who can resist buying several dress patterns.

The coarsely looped and ragged surfaced cottons are the most attractive, if indeed it is possible to discriminate at all. They will make charming suits and frocks for beach wear.

Cotton chinchilla is one of these rough fabrics and will be used in suiting clothes a great deal. It is forty-two inches wide and sells for $2 a yard.

Cotton duvetyn, which looks much like the duvetyn of the Winter months, can be had for seventy-five cents a yard. This is thirty-six inches wide.

Heavy ratine, forty-eight inches wide, sells for $1.95 a yard.

Eponge, in a stunning basket weave, half silk, comes forty-two inches wide and sells for $3 a yard.

Novelty check ratines are very smart. One recently shown in a Boston shop would make a stunning coat for wear with a white skirt. The checks were of blue and orange most carefully blended. This material is forty-eight inches wide and sells for $1.95.

White cotton crepes, sprinkled over with the dirtiest embroidered flowers, will make delightfully girlish dance and afternoon frocks. These are forty inches wide and sell for $2.50 a yard.

Voile, which has been much talked about since cotton materials began to appear, can be had from seventy-nine cents up. The price varying with the width and quality.

There is a very handsome embroidered chiffon being shown in a Tremont street shop. The colorings, on a black foundation are exquisite. It sells for $6.50 a yard, but a yard and a half is sufficient for a waist.

Brocaded cotton velour, for the light wrap, is forty-two inches wide and sells for $1.50 a yard.

Silvertyn, a new fabric, which looks a great deal like mohair, is fifty-four inches wide and sells from $1.50 to $2.50 a yard.

Tub silks, thirty-two inches wide, are selling for thirty-nine cents a yard.

Vegetable silk and cotton duvetyn sells for $4 a yard. This is forty-two inches wide.

Yellow Predominates

Yellow may be said to dominate the sartorial chromatics. It flashes forth its radiance in serges, habutai, [illegible] cloth and various novelty weaves named and unnamed. It is seen to best advantage in the silks and satins which contribute very largely to the costumes, dresses and the wraps of the new season. In taffeta—that ubiquitous fabric—it is frequently shot with old blue, with red or with green, as found it is preferred unadulterated by another color.

Even the most vivid shade of orange is no longer considered too garish, and it is to be understood that its use is not confined merely to a bit trimming or belt or a flower in the corsage, but that it is used for entire garments, such as suits, dresses and separate coats. In the last it is particularly happy in the development of the top coat, in soft fabrics usually toned down by the collar and cuffs of white or black, intensified by the addition of vivid green or purple in neck and sleeve finish.

Spring Posies

If there is one season more than another when flowers have their particular appeal, it is at Easter time. When the whole world seems busy getting into new life then every flower and every flowering plant carries a seasonable message of joy.

The corsage bouquet that milady dons on Easter morn should be of real flowers if it is within her power to have them.

The gallant swain who sends his lady flowers for this occasion usually chooses the sweet of valley lily. Beautiful bunches of these [illegible] in hue, sell at this season from two to five dollars.

Clusters of valley lilies can be had from two dollars up and orchids sell for a dollar apiece. Since there are from four to twelve in a bouquet it will require no small outlay of money to provide milady with a corsage of this particular flower.

However there are many other varieties of flowers, more [illegible] they may not carry the air of exclusiveness associated with the orchid are very Spring-like and joyous.

THE STORY SENSATION OF 1914

Winston Churchill's

"A FAR COUNTRY"

It is based upon the biblical quotation concerning the prodigal son "and took his journey into a country and there he wasted his substance in riotous living." That gives some hint of the tremendous scope, tensity and human interest of the author's motif. It is probably the most compelling piece of fiction since "Richard Carvel" and "The Crisis." Everybody will read it—must read it or argue himself out of date. "A Far Country" will be superbly and profusely illustrated by

Social Set to Attend

The novelty of the Pop-Concert Dansant under the auspices of the Guild of the Infant Saviour promises to be one of the most interesting functions of the season. It will be held in Hotel Somerset Thursday evening April 23. Patrons desiring tables are to order them this week.

The affair is in charge of the executive board and entertainment committee.

[illegible]

An attractive musical program has been arranged, which will be played during the concert.

While the pleasure of the affair is uppermost in one's mind, the director, Rev. James A. Supple, D. D., calls to mind the fact that the guild is entirely a private charity, depending for revenue solely on the success of its social affairs.

Many of the young debutantes will assist at the affair and are as follows: Miss Beatrice Barry, Miss Josephine Cassiff, Miss Anna Broughton, Miss Aileen Conakly, Miss Marie Crosby, Miss Beatrice Coyle, Miss May Collins, Miss Eleanor Driscoll, Miss Theresa Daly, Miss Edythe Dophine, Miss Ruth Dillon, Miss Helen Donovan, Miss Marie Enright, Miss Alice Fitzpatrick.

Miss Agnes Fitzpatrick, Miss Miriam Farnham, Miss Mary Green, Miss Nellie Given, Miss Louise Gately, Miss Gertrude Hanlon, Miss Esther Harris, Miss Ursula Hazen, Miss Estelle Hanlon, Miss Alice Jordan, Miss Lucy Keefe, Miss Grace Morton, Miss Katherine Morton, Miss Katherine Morrin, Miss May McGaffee.

Miss Janet McMurphy, Miss Louise Murphy, Miss Lucile Norris, Miss Helen O'Neill, Miss Irene Little, Miss Katherine Phelan, Miss Louise Rogers, Miss Katherine Rooney, Miss Mary Quill, Miss Rita Smith, Miss Mollie Stack, Miss Leonore Stack, Miss Mary Slattery and Miss Katherine Walsh.

To Lecture on Joan of Arc

With the purpose of founding a chair of philosophy at Boston College, the students of the University extension courses at the evening school have begun preparations for a lecture and concert, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the cause. The lecturer will be the Rev. Matthew L. Fortier, S. J., Professor of Philosophy at Boston College and also professor of the masters class in the night school.

Father Fortier is well known as a lecturer and speaker and just recently conducted one of the most successful lectures in the history of the East Boston Catholic Literary Association.

His subject will be "Joan of Arc." The date fixed is Friday, May 8.

In connection with the lecture, an elaborate concert program has been arranged.

All the arrangements are in the hands of the members of the evening classes conducted by Father Fortier and Father Lyons, the president of Boston College.

The Knights of Columbus and several other prominent Massachusetts organizations are helping to make the affair a success.

Tickets may be had from members of the evening classes or by addressing Maurice Flynn, '15, Boston College, University Heights, Newton.

M. C. O. F. NOTES

In response to a circular sent to all subordinate courts, which is inviting contributions to the M. C. O. F. delinquent fund, a total of $167 was received during the month of March.

By the ordination of Father Tatian, 8 vacancies occure in the scholarship examinations for which will take place prior to the opening of the Fall term in September, as of notice which will be sent to all courts of the order, those eligible to compete for the scholarship being Foresters or sons of Foresters.

The collecting of funds for the chapel erected by the Catholic Church Extension Society at Puposky, Minn., devoted to the memory of deceased members of the order, has been completed, the balance of thirty seven dollars has been forwarded by High Chief Ranger Edward N. Cline to Rev. Dr. Francis C. Kelley, president of the society.

No meetings of a public nature and no visiting will be made by the high standing committee or deputy high chief rangers during Holy Week.

The lady friends of Oranmore Council, Cambridge, will be tendered a complimentary whist party and dance in St. Peter's Hall on Friday evening, April 17. On Wednesday evening, April 22, the council will exemplify the first degree upon a large class of candidates. On Sunday, April 26, the council will attend its annual communion at St. Peter's Church at the 8 o'clock mass.

St. John's Council, East Cambridge, exemplified the first degree upon a class of twenty-five candidates at its meeting Monday evening. The annual ladies' night of the council will be held in Institute Hall, East Cambridge, Wednesday evening, April 15. The council will attend its annual communion at St. Patrick's Church, East Cambridge, Sunday, April 26.

Preparations have been completed for the grand concert and ball to be given by St. Raphael Court of Dedham, on Easter Monday night, in Memorial Hall, Dedham. A select concert will be given by Reynolds' Orchestra from 8 to 9, followed by dancing until 2 o'clock. The reception committee is composed of Charles J. Ripley, chairman; Charles H. Riley, James Gahney and Thomas F. Murray. The dance officers will be Thomas J. Brennan, floor director; John J. Smith, assistant floor director, and William Brown, John Hickey, Charles H. McDick, James Regan, Charles Dwyer, John Mulkern, James Flynn, Joseph McCarthy, Patrick Fox and Michael Hunt.

Musicians Praise Banda Orchestrale

Signor Gallo's New Method Approved by Composers.

Signor S. Gallo has received high commendation from composers and musicians of Boston for the treat they confess was afforded them by the concert of his Banda Orchestrale of seventy pieces given at the Majestic Theatre last Sunday evening.

Reduced to simple terms it was a band playing with all the delicate shading of a brilliant orchestra of the same number of pieces. This is accomplished by a new method of orchestration, of which Signor Gallo is the author.

Castles to Tango Here on April 27

If you think the Argentine "Tango" is not what it should be, go see the Castles dance it and you will become converted. The Castles—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, the two highest salaried dancers in the world—are making a whirlwind dancing tour of the United States, playing only one night and one special matinee in even the biggest cities. They will appear at the Boston Opera House matinee and evening, Monday, April 27.

MUSIC NOTES

The twenty-second Symphony program, which will be played next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, will present as soloist for the first time in a number of years that most delightful American artist, Madame Louise Homer. Madame Homer as her first number will sing the air, "O Pardon Me," from Bach's "Passion," and the air, "Divinities du Styx," from Gluck's opera "Alceste." Her second number will be the air, "O Don Fatale," from Verdi's opera, "Don Carlos." The symphony will be that by Hermann Goetz in F major, which has not been played here since Dr. Muck's first engagement in Boston. Another work on the program which has not been heard in a number of years will be Charles Martin Loeffler's "La Mort de Tintagiles." In this Mr. Emil Ferir of the orchestra will play the viola d'amore. The final number will be Beethoven's "Leonora No. 1" Overture.

The last Symphony concert in Cambridge will be given in Sanders Theatre April 23. Madame Marie Sundelius will be the soloist and the symphony will be Beethoven's fifth in C minor. The other orchestral numbers will be the overture to Cornelius' opera, "The Barber of Bagdad"; Dukas' scherzo, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice on Spanish Themes. Madame Sundelius will sing the air, "Dove Sono," from "The Marriage of Figaro," and Micaela's air from "Carmen."

• • •

The Symphony program for the week consists of but two numbers, Peter Greeley Clapp's new Symphony in E Minor and Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" Suite. Dr. Muck will, of course, conduct the Bizet Suite, which comes last on the program.

The regular Easter production by the Handel and Haydn Society will be given in Symphony Hall today at 7:30. The work will be Gounod's "Redemption." It would be hard to find more interesting soloists than those engaged for this performance. Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, soprano; Miss Edith B. Whitcomb, soprano; Miss Nora Burns, alto; Mr. Lambert Murphy, tenor; Mr. Earl Cartwright, baritone; Mr. Oscar Huntting, bass. The society will have the assistance of the Boston Festival Orchestra, and Mr. Emil Mollenhauer will conduct as usual.

The principal number on the program to be given by Madame Teresa Carreno at Jordan Hall, Wednesday afternoon, April 15, will be Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3. The other composers represented will be Chopin, Schumann, MacDowell and Liszt.

M. C. O. F. NOTES

The general committee having in charge the reception to representatives to the thirty-fifth annual convention of the High Court at Springfield held a meeting, Tuesday evening, at which arrangements were completed for the reception. The plans provide for special decorations, a concert by Hagerty's orchestra of fifty pieces from 8 to 9, to be followed by a social. Edward F. Connelly was elected master of ceremonies and James H. Benson, H.I.S., was elected floor director, with numerous assistants from local courts. Tickets have been distributed to all courts of the order in Western Massachusetts and it is expected a large gathering will be present, in addition to the representatives from courts throughout the State.

St. Columbkille and St. Genevieve courts of Brighton are making arrangements for a grand reunion, entertainment, card and dancing party to be held Wednesday evening. The entire upper floor of the bank building has been engaged and the committee has arranged a forty-five party which will take place in Parnell hall, after which the old folks will enjoy dancing. The whist party for which the Past Chief Rangers of both courts have donated souvenirs, will be held in the Knights of Columbus rooms, after which the Garden City quartette is to furnish music. Dancing will be held in Red Men's hall from 8 till 1 o'clock. An energetic committee of one hundred members is striving to make the party a social, as well as financial success, the proceeds of which will be donated to the sick benefit fund of the courts.

Montgomery Court of Lynn will hold a whist party in St. Joseph's Hall next Friday evening. The committee consists of C. L. O'Neil, Michael Prendergast, George E. Pare, John D. Herlihy, J. McGeough, John Mitchell and Daniel Murphy. John Herlihy, C. L. O'Neil and John McGeough were appointed as delegates to attend the meeting of the representatives of Lynn Catholic societies who will arrange for the Memorial Sunday of Catholic societies.

At the next meeting of Lafayette Court of Lynn the members will be addressed by William H. O'Brien, chief of the telephone and telegraph bureau of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission. He will speak on "International Arbitration."

Prosperity engenders sloth.
Stars are not seen by sunshine.
Still he fisheth that catcheth one.
Still waters are the deepest.
Such a father, such a son.
Success is never blamed.
Poverty trieth friends.
No flying from fate.
Never refuse a good offer.
A bargain is a bargain.
A blind man would be glad to see it.
All men can't be masters.
All the fat is in the fire.
An ill life, an ill end.
An ill wind that blows nobody good.
All your geese are swans.
A short horse is soon curried.
A slight gift, small thanks.
A wise man knows his own.
A word before is worth two after.
A work well begun is half ended.
Bad words find bad acceptance.
Bare words buy no barley.
Be it weal, or be it woe.
Be just to all, but trust not all.
Believe well, and have well.
Best to bend it while a twig.
Better be envied than pitied.
Better be happy nor wise.
Blood's thicker than water.
Fear is stronger than love.
Foolish pity spoils a city.
More afraid than hurt.
Few words, many deeds.
Few words are best.
Fools are not to be convinced.
Fortune favors the brave.
Fools live poor to die rich.
Guilt is always jealous.
Great boast, small roast.
I have a crow to pluck with you.
Hours of pleasure are short.
Hot love is soon cold.
I am loth to change my mill.
It is never too late to learn.
Lazy folks take the most pains.
Sure bind, sure find.
Truth is a means, not an end.
Wedlock's a padlock.
Weel is that weel does.
What has been may be.
Weapons bode peace.
When the cup is full carry it even.
Sudden glory soon goes out.
Fancy may kill or cure.
More haste, worst speed.
Better be a shrew than a sheep.
Better half a loaf than no bread.
Better God than gold.
Company in misery makes it light.
Conduct and courage lead to honor.
Confess and be hanged.
Congruity is the mother of love.
It is never too late to mend.
Crafty men deal in generals.
Dirt parts good company.
Dirty troughs will serve dirty sows.
Difficulty makes desire.
Debt is an evil conscience.
Fair faces need no paint.
Fair hair may have foul roots.
Faith sees by the ears.
Few leaves and bad fruit.
Business neglected is business lost.
Busy folks are always meddling.
Burning the candle at both ends.
Good wits jump.
Grace is the best for the man.
Good words fill not a sack.
Grasp all, lose all.
Grind with every wind.
He doth much that doth a thing well.
He is wise that is honest.
He that cannot pay let him pray.

Lightly come, lightly go.
Like author, like book.
Lend and lose; so play fools.
Learn to creep before you run.
Many a true word spoken in jest.
No and yes often cause long disputes.
Never sigh, but send.

PRELATES FROM U. S. IN ROME TO HAVE HOTEL

Inconvenience Which Will Confront American Delegation This Year to Be Overcome.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

Special Cable to Boston American.

ROME, April 11.—The Rev. John Iselbacher, a nephew of a former parish priest of New Britain, Ct., left for America this week charged with an important mission by Pope Pius and the Vatican.

If the mission is successful it means the establishment in Rome of another American institution. According to what recently took place in high Catholic circles, the attention of the Pope has been again drawn to the fact that American prelates visiting the Eternal City are without proper accommodation and headquarters such as the prelates of all other nationalities have here.

This fact first attracted the notice of his Holiness in 1911, when the two new Americans—Bishop Farley of New York and O'Connell of Boston —were summoned to Rome to succeed Satolli and were compelled to make their headquarters in different hotels unfrequented by the Roman hierarchy or patronized by the clerical element.

This year has been designated by the Vatican as a general visit of American prelates to pay to the Pontiff personally, and the lack of proper accommodation for these visits is now more apparent than ever. Since the year began fifteen bishops of various North American dioceses have visited Rome officially, and before the end of the year more than sixty other American cardinals, archbishops and bishops are expected here, accompanied by large delegations of priests from their respective dioceses. Among these will be Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and the other two American cardinals I have mentioned. Owing to his advanced age, Cardinal Gibbons has not visited Rome since the conclave in 1903.

All will be obliged to stay at hotels this year, and Father Iselbacher's mission to America will be mainly devoted to raising funds to found an institution which will be both a club and a religious retreat as well as a temporary home for distinguished prelates visiting Rome.

A plan was submitted to the Vatican authorities some time ago with a view of enlarging the American College in Rome. This was disapproved to be impracticable, owing to the prohibitive prices demanded by the proprietors of the surrounding buildings. It was later suggested that an institution run on the lines of an exclusive club would cost less, consequently Father Iselbacher's proposal to interview personally a number of prominent Catholics in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and other large cities with a view to raising the necessary funds was fully approved by the Vatican authorities.

It is argued here that the number of American clergymen visiting Rome is sufficient to warrant the institution and pay all running expenses, once the fund for a suitable building is provided. It is further urged that the very distinguished families patronizing the hotels here are the Americans. The French, German and other foreign prelates invariably stop at the colleges of their respective countries, or if originally belonging to some monastic order are domiciles at the house of their order in Rome. The Vatican authorities who are backing Father Iselbacher's project, which has the warm support of His Holiness, want it to be clearly understood that the chief scope of such an institution is to provide comfortable quarters at much lower terms than the leading hotels, but at the same time to not restrict the freedom of choice of the distinguished visitors.

Arrangements are being made at the Vatican to accord Cardinal Gibbons a right royal reception when he arrives here. Many reasons combine to account for this attention. The Holy Father has not seen him since the memorable day of the election, when the new Pope embraced him in the presence of the entire Sacred College in conclave in the chapel, as the first American cardinal emerged with the sovereign Pontiff arm in arm.

Moreover, it is known that, as dean of the American cardinals, Cardinal Gibbons will always be regarded by the Vatican state chancery as the man whose counsel in American church affairs is the most reliable.

'I'M NOT DOWN AND OUT,' DECLARES EDWARDES

Famous London Musical Comedy Producer Recovering Health, Promises More Successes

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, April 11.—George Edwardes, whose musical comedies have been so much applauded in America, is almost himself again.

London does not know this. London, which loves and admires Edwardes, is still talking avidly of "his passing." But the Boston American correspondent who ran down to Hourncombe yesterday found Edwardes far from being an invalid.

At this moment his word, as always, is final in every question of his theatrical business. In six months, or less, he will be in his office—himself again.

"So America wants to know if I am really 'down and out,'" Edwardes began laughingly. "The answer is no, a very positive no. It reminds me of that famous obituary notice of him that Mark Twain characterized as exaggerated.

"I shall be in the saddle in a short time and I have every reason to believe I shall be producing musical comedies when my present juveniles are playing character parts."

STAGE SECRETS OF SUCCESS.

Then the great producer of musical comedy told some of the secret of his success, and from the height of his experience, some of the secrets of an artistic record in every produced and many more planned.

"To say that musical comedy productions in London are more lavish and more complete than American productions is nothing new. All my many Americans have told me. If this is so, I presume the reason is not difficult to find.

"Primarily we can obtain the same good talent for less money than the American producer. But we spend more money also. I spend between £8000 and £9000 on every production I make. But after all, this initial expenditure is hardly a beginning.

"From my observations I have found that many producers either try to save on the production and bank their faith on an organization of talented artists, or having spent a large amount in scenery and costumes feel that that ends their responsibility on their cast. My experience is that it is necessary to be zealously active with both.

"The salary list of the 'Marriage Market' now at Daly's is the largest I have ever paid—fault, almost a year's run and still playing to packed houses.

N. Y. FAILURE A PUZZLE.

"I hear 'The Marriage Market' was not a success in New York. I cannot pretend to know the reason, but I can say that we spend a great deal of time and money in a direction few musical comedy producers in America seem to consider important.

"Atmosphere in musical comedy, the kind of atmosphere your David Belasco creates in his dramatic plays, is the sine qua non of high class entertainment. We understand the temperament of our audiences here and know exactly what they demand by way of atmosphere.

"Now, must never forget that audiences have quite as much temperament as actors.

"The American habit of making a chorus girl a 'star' over night does not and never can obtain here. Many of my principal artists have been graduated from the chorus, but the development has taken years. In London a pretty face and figure alone do not constitute the only necessary qualifications for a musical comedy star.

"The first requisite for a musical comedy leading woman is a great personality. Next comes voice and good looks. She must sing and dance well—not fairly well, but very well. If she can conform to this standard, she need have little else. Lack of experience for such a woman is more than offset by her personality alone—if she has a great personality.

"If I can find any young woman with this one quality, I can make her, in time, a comic star. But the only school I believe in is in the theatre itself, in which even an inexperienced Fritzi Scheff has to begin, if she would become a star in the grand opera sense.

"Fortunately, English artists take to their work. We do not encounter a predisposition among pupils to renounce the very quality that has made them stars. I understand in America there are examples of this kind of thing. I hear that a man, for instance, wins his right to be a star through his great ability to dance and then, having become a star, refuses to dance more and depends on past performances and his popularity.

"An artist in England must work before he is well after he has arrived as he did before. English audiences demand their money's worth from everyone concerned."

KLAW PLANS TO SHOW 'APHRODITE' IN AMERICA

Broadway Manager Thinks He Can Tone Down Nude Scene Which Jolted Even Paris.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, April 11.—If negotiations now proceeding materialise, New York will next Winter see the sensational new Paris play, "Aphrodite," with the nude statue it is crucified on the stage and which has been the talk of Europe for the last two weeks. Marc Klaw of New York, who is endeavoring to satisfy the American rights to this play, said today:

"It is a beautiful play, which will make a strong appeal to American audiences.

"Originally, Mlle. Derny, the dancer, was seen performing the nude statue, but following the police campaign against the extreme daring in theatres, she has worn a flimsy cloth which had just the opposite effect to that intended.

"From an esthetic standpoint there is nothing objectionable in the perfect nude, though as a general rule, it makes no appeal to American audiences. Efforts to exploit it in New York theatres have always defeated their own object, because it calls for such well-balanced minds and the sensational effect soon ceases.

"The treatment I have in contemplation in regard to the staging of 'Aphrodite' in New York will have been settled when nothing will be done to offend public taste. With our mechanical stage appliances we could run off the play in two hours, whereas in Paris the scenic changes involve intervals of no less than fifty minutes in the course of the evening.

"Apart from 'Aphrodite,' Europe has not much this year that would appeal to the American public. Better plays have been produced in New York in the last year than in Paris or in Berlin.

Mr. Klaw has gone to Tunis and will return after three weeks. He then will visit Vienna and Berlin.

BUTTON-UP-BACK GOWNS ARE TO REMAIN AWHILE

Bolero with a Bias Bow Behind Is the Latest to Torment Meek Husbands.

By MME. RENEE DUVANT.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, April 11.—Alas! the hope that the garment buttoning in the back was soon to be a thing of the past—for a reasonable period at least—is blasted in the bud.

The fatal sign of feminine clinging to this anomaly—so dreaded by the other sex—is before us.

It is true here with a row of buttons and buttonholes behind, and not straight, either, but on the bias! The fitting would be less absurd with any other garment.

It is really too bad that this picturesque detail of the Spanish dancing costume cannot be preserved in its distinctive colorings in its traditional form.

Fashion experts think that placing the opening of the bolero behind is highly significant of a reactionary movement in other respects. Indeed the extent to which certain minor distinctive features of fashion are being revived is already rather disconcerting.

The combination of some of these with the newest general ideas of style is charming, but in many other instances it is quite that reverse. She who would be tastefully dressed nowadays will find it more difficult to be so than ever before unless she herself is possessed of infallible taste. The complexity of ideas among which she must make her choice is nothing less than bewildering.

A good example is the multiplicity of the designs for sleeves. They may be long or short, full or narrow, puffy or rigid. From some of the last-mentioned type a bit of crushed mousseline de soie is visible at the end, giving exactly the effect of a baby's sleeve. Certain sleeves have arm-sizes so large that they invade even the space allotted to the cleanture. If this be of extreme breadth.

On a half-sleeve of serge, little gathered lace flounces, diminishing from four to six, superimposed one above another, produce at a short distance exactly the impression of a pair of stout dietaffe wound with fluffy white silk. Another style of sleeve which today is narrow at the bottom and swells out above like a leg-o'-mutton. It is laced from the elbow downward with double black silk cord, exactly as shoes are laced.

More freedom is given to whim or fancy in the opening provided in costumes than in coats. This freedom is just in inverse proportion to the importance and to the stability of the ornamentation and the correctness of the general design. The more complicated the costume the less pronounced are its decollete features.

Chef Davey, Friend of Americans, Dead

Was Cook at Simpson's Chop House for Half a Century.

LONDON, April 11.—Thousands of Americans will be sorry to hear of the death of "Old Davey," who for nearly fifty years was chief cook in Simpson's Chop House. Davey was quite a character and knew personally many famous Americans. Ex-President Roosevelt, when here after his African trip, dined with Davey at the conclusion of a session in Simpson's which was under the helpings of one of Davey's famous saddles of mutton.

Japan's Crown Prince Is Going to Oxford

LONDON, April 11.—To the ever-growing number of Oriental royalties who have been educated at Oxford or Cambridge of recent years will shortly have to be added a most interesting figure.

This is the Crown Prince of Japan, who is to be sent to Oxford after the Summer vacation.

There are already two Sons of the King of Siam at Oxford.

AMERICAN WIFE MAKES WORKER OF LORD CAMOYS

British Nobleman Leads Campaign for Pure Food Laws—Longs for Dr. Wiley's Aid.

By W. ORTON TEWSON.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, April 11.—Lord Camoys, the husband of the former Mildred Sherman, of Newport, is a British nobleman with a serious purpose in life. It is impossible to bother him by asking questions regarding the amount given to him by his wife. Capital enough, no doubt. Matters of that kind don't seem to interest him in the slightest.

But mention the term "Pure Food Legislation," which he is chairman of the executive committee, and his face lights up and assumes an expression of animation quite remarkable.

The fact is more noteworthy because Camoys was not born a social worker, and it is doubtful whether his ancestor who fought in the battle of Agincourt, transmitted any such tendencies to this stock. It so happened that Lord Camoys married an American wife, who didn't appear to have inherited any inclination of the typical English nobleman's determined opposition to progress, though he should sacrifice some of his ornamental qualities—not per-made and his something useful.

SENT FORTH TO FIGHT.

Accordingly, the pure food campaign happening to be one of her objects of belief, she was armed for action with considerable knowledge on the subject and sent him forth an armed twentieth century knight into the fray.

His desk nowadays is covered with pure food literature, and although he spends his day trooping the country around his Tudor home in Stonor Park with a gun on his shoulder, accompanied by a solitary keeper and shooting anything that comes his way, yet his evenings are devoted to the cause of pure food. When the AMERICAN correspondent mentioned the subject to him the other day, his first reply was carefully to select and hand over an influential of literature regarding the subject.

"It is all here," was his comment. "I can't tell you anything further."

SERIOUS WORK AHEAD.

"What about the prospects of the league?" he was asked.

"We are going ahead in tremendous style," was the reply. "All we want is an Englishman to succeed the eminence of Dr. Harvey Wiley, who would bring to the subject both expert knowledge as well as heartfelt enthusiasm. If the English people would only realize this one of the greatest questions of the day and is well worth serious study.

"We have to combat ignorance on the part of consumers as well as dishonesty on the part of others. We have got to convince the poor of England that economy is far removed from sand and that milk treated so as to keep for a fortnight is not real milk. It is those who are obliged to purchase in the thickest districts who are the chief victims of solicitous, yet who, at the same time, are the people least interested."

Miss Carey to Show Poultry at the Fair

English Woman Fancier Will Have Charge of British Exhibit.

LONDON, April 11.—No one in America will be surprised to learn that Miss Carey, the English poultry breeder and raiser of live stock, has been appointed chief organizer of the British section of the live stock department at the forthcoming Panama Exposition.

Miss Carey is quite well known in America, and it was from that country that the invitation came for her to co-operate in the coming fair. She made her debut in America some two and a half years ago, when she took a team over to the Madison Square show.

Miss Carey has spread out on a much larger scale. She owns a depot for live stock in New Jersey and trades as a woman export agent, not only for poultry, but for ponies, dogs and live stock of all kinds.

New German Paper to Help World Trade

Special Attention Given to Opportunity for Business in America.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, April 11.—The growth of Germany's interests in America and the consequent necessity for spreading the knowledge of the English language is chiefly responsible for the founding of the Anglo-American Journal, a new weekly, just started here.

German business men are keenly aware of the advantage to be derived from a mastery of the languages of the countries with which they are doing business, and the conspicuous object of the new publication is to give them an opportunity to familiarize themselves with contemporary English as actually used in the newspapers of the day.

Morgenthau Travels on U. S. S. Scorpion

Ambassador to Turkey on His Way to Visit Asia Minor.

CAIRO, April 11.—Henry Morgenthau, American Ambassador to Turkey, and Mrs. Morgenthau are now traveling on the American warship Scorpion to Jaffa, en route to Palestine, Syria and Asia Minor.

Mr. Morgenthau arrived in Alexandria by the Russian mail boat and proceeded to Cairo, accompanied by Olney Arnold, the American diplomatic agent in Egypt. Mr. Morgenthau proceeded to the Khedive's palace in the state carriage, the Khedive returning the visit at the Semiramis Hotel the same evening. Mr. Morgenthau also had an interview with Lord Kitchener.

Emigration to U. S. Shows Big Decrease

Shipping Companies Begin to Complain About Small Movements

LONDON, April 11.—There are signs of a large decrease in emigration to North America, and all the shipping companies are now complaining about the smallness of the movement, which last year constituted nearly a record.

Several sailings have been cancelled, and it is now possible to obtain berths on any steamer, no matter how near her sailing date may be.

According to the Board of Trade, the number of passengers leaving Britain in January and February for Canada and the United States was 7,905 less than in the corresponding period last year, there being also 8,941 fewer emigrants to Australia and New Zealand.

Auto Tourists Leave $750,000 with Swiss

Profitable Summer Despite Natives' Antagonism to Motor Cars.

GENEVA, April 11.—Americans who have traveled in Switzerland are one of the hatred the peasant population have against motorists.

The fact is more noteworthy because Camoys was not born a social worker, and it is doubtful whether his ancestor who fought in the battle of Agincourt, transmitted any such tendencies to this stock. It so happened that Lord Camoys married an American wife, who didn't appear to have inherited any inclination of the typical English nobleman's determined opposition to progress, though he should sacrifice some of his ornamental qualities—not per-made and his something useful.

France to Have Big Panama Fair Exhibit

Premier Says Delay In Appropriation is Due to Internal Affairs.

PARIS, April 11.—Formal assurance was given today by Gaston Doumergue, Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, that France will participate officially in the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

"Not only are we determined to participate," said M. Doumergue, "but we intend to make every effort to make the exhibit the finest ever seen in America, the delay in making the appropriation in no sense is to be construed as an indication that France is wavering in her determination to be represented at the exposition. It is a striking and positive manner. International difficulties which have recently monopolized the attention of the French people and the bringing forward or all matters not intimately connected with great domestic problems."

Arthur of Connaught First Irish Viceroy

King George's Young Cousin Slated for Home Rule Ruler.

DUBLIN, April 11.—A good many Liberals of more or less prominence have of late been discussing exactly what is going to happen when a Home Rule Parliament is actually set up on College Green in the course of next year.

It is said in these circles that Prince Arthur of Connaught will be the first Irish Viceroy under the new order of things.

There has not been a member of the British royal family at the head of the Government in Ireland since Queen Victoria's grandson, who was afterward known as Henry VIII., was appointed Lord Lieutenant or Lord Deputy in the year 1494.

Vivid Hues Rule for House Decorations

New Wall Paper Even Shows a Riot of Fruit.

LONDON, April 11.—House decorators are busy everywhere in London, and all who wish to be considered absolutely up to date use vivid hues in their homes.

Gone are the delicate-hued flower chintzes from the select drawing rooms, and in their stead are to reign Leon Bakst shades and "cubist" silks covered with strange devices. Black walls and black carpets are the things of the moment, with or without a pattern of bright colors upon them. A lot of the new wall papers have designs of fruit rioting over them.

Ulster, Fearing War, Stores Up Her Cash

Heavy Private Shipments from Belfast to London Security Vaults.

LONDON, April 11.—Ulster and the government are vying with each other in the matter of the "ring-in-the-day" to come.

While the latter is massing troops on the various frontiers of Ulster which divide it from the Nationalist parts of Ireland, the former is busy in valuable securities for safe custody in London banks and safe deposits.

So great is the anxiety in the northern counties of Ireland that masses of securities are being forwarded daily, many especially holdings by Ulster investors.

Queen Mary Gives Up Her Rubber at Whist

Royal Disapproval Shown of Gambling in London Society Set.

LONDON, April 11.—The gambling craze is more prevalent in London society at present than ever before, and this is why the Queen has given up playing the rubber of whist of which she used to be so fond.

The keenest of all players are women, and the greatest plungers, and even quite young girls now know all about "spotting" winners. Girls of the day say they have to do a little playing, because so much is expected of them.

ASQUITH IS PURSUED BY ACTIVE FOES

Larkin, "Labor Leader," and "General" Flora Drummond on Premier's Trail.

LONDON, April 11.—Prime Minister Herbert H. Asquith has two foes who hang about his heels in his great battle for home rule in Ireland. Mrs. Flora (General) Drummond, now the most prominent militant leader, and Jim Larkin, chief of the proletariat, are raising their voices to protest that Ireland's government is not the most important issue before the British people.

Mr. Asquith has just been returned unopposed to the Commons by East Fife. When he took the Secretaryship for War in addition to his duties as Premier, he was compelled to seek the approval of his constituents.

It had been taken for granted that Mr. Asquith would be elected, for the Unionists never considered nominating a candidate, and it was scarcely announced in Parliament his decision to assume the Secretaryship for War in addition to his place at the head of the Cabinet when his former Commons seat to put himself before the people's tribunal when James Larkin, the famous Labor leader, long a thorn in Asquith's side, announced he would continue his opposition. Larkin, contrary to the general impression, is not an Irishman. He went over to Dublin from Manchester and lead the dissatisfied transport workers.

ON PREMIER'S TRAIL.

The militant suffragettes did not take the inside of an announcement, but proceeded posthaste to the scene. Led by "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond, they began a continuation of their long campaign against the man who they believe to be the worst enemy of their cause.

Mr. Asquith's friends are sure he has come strengthened and fortified.

The final outcome may be a federation, like the United States; it may lead to further Socialist measures along lines of national insurance and old age pensions; it may be the final downfall of the House of Lords and the Crown; at the worst, it will be armed civil war, aristocrat against commoner, Catholic against Protestant, the renewal of the old conflict of Roundhead against Cavalier.

It is a critical period of English development. The United Kingdom is seething with discordant elements. Berlin looks on and smiles.

In this crisis the English government has a strong man at its head. Recent events, the splitting of the ranks of the Cabinet, have only served to show the greatness of Asquith. Few leaders have had to guide the destinies of the empire. He has weathered the storms which would have sent most Premiers to the bottom.

Such is the greatest contrast between the Premier and "Jim" Larkin. The latter is a child in the realm of logic. Larkin hurls his arguments at his audience without any sequence of reason. The latter is a prophet crying in the wilderness, full of rough, uncouth force. His sincerity is undoubted.

Larkin's strikes of the Dublin transport workers came near wrecking home rule. He was a figure in the labor world, which almost in an instant eclipsed all other leaders. While Sir Edward Carson was quietly drilling his men Larkin was leading in a real civic strike, with a long casualty list.

HURT GOVERNMENT.

The Liberal government, which was and is Asquith, imprisoned Larkin. But the result was not pleasing. The Liberal majority in a couple of bye-elections were seriously cut. At the end of three weeks of what was to have been a six months' sentence, Larkin was liberated. He then carried his "Party Cross" to England, where he won many by his furious eloquence.

Kaiserine to Stop Duelling in Army

Brings Her Seldom Used but Powerful Influence Upon Emperor.

BERLIN, April 11.—Kaiserin Augusta, whose devotion to her family and her housewifely duties have won her views and respected throughout the empire, almost never interferes in public affairs, but when she does her influence is powerful.

She now has taken a decisive stand on the dueling question, holding views diametrically opposed to those of the military aristocracy.

The Kaiser has always deprecated duelling on principle, but has yielded to the apparent necessity of tacitly assenting to the custom so long sanctioned by public opinion. Kaiserin's influence, it is now expected, will be exercised more energetically in favor of the entire prohibition of the duelling practice.

$5,000,000 American Exhibit of Pictures

Elaborate Display of Art Arranged for Shepherd's Bush Fair.

LONDON, April 11.—One of the most astonishing displays at the Anglo-American Exposition at Shepherd's Bush this year will be the Palace of Fine Arts.

This will contain only works by United States artists aid will be a revelation to the world of what America can produce in this great field.

The palace will be the largest picture gallery in the world and will contain over $5,000,000 worth of painting and sculpture by American artists. Many masterpieces are being sent from wealthy homes in the United States.

Hackett Will Put "Othello" on Mat

American Actor, Now in Europe, Unfolds His Ambition.

LONDON, April 11. — James K. Hackett is spending a week in London before going to Paris for the "movies" production of "Monsieur Beaucaire," in which all the principals will be American. He expects to return to New York in the middle of July.

"My plans," said Mr. Hackett to the reporter, "call for my presence in San Francisco in August. I am to make my first appearance in 'Othello' at the Greek Theatre in Berkeley on September 5. I want to do 'Othello.' It's one of the things I really want to do, and if I succeed in throwing Mr. Othello to the mat I will continue along those lines; that is, Shakespeare."

When asked whether he intended to leave the stage on the strength of the fortune he recently inherited, Mr. Hackett said:

"No. My ambition seen to accumulate wealth, I never should have adopted the stage. My fortune is purely a question of law, and it should be obvious that until the matter is settled I cannot discuss the matter with anyone."

As for whether there was any doubt about his eventually getting the money, Mr. Hackett said:

"So far as I know, none. My attorneys say none."

"American" Peer Fights for His Seat

Lord Fairfax, U. S. Citizen, Will Force Question to an Issue.

LONDON, April 11.—There is more than a probability that the question as to whether Lord Fairfax, as an American citizen, is debarred from sitting in the House of Lords will be settled in the courts of the land before long. Lord Fairfax already has more than once been a candidate for one of the seats allotted to the Lords to the peers of Scotland and is to be a candidate again at the next election, which cannot be long delayed. On this occasion he is likely to be successful, and his possibilities will be made familiar to the British and American public.

Ancient Arabic Art Treasure Found

Sculptured Case of Manuscript Discovered by Workmen in Ruins.

CAIRO, April 11.—While dismantling an old palace in Cairo, workmen discovered a large sculptured case which contained real treasure, consisting of a number of manuscripts, magnificent silver and bronze mosque lamps, rugs and other objects, evidently made during the time of the Arabic apogee.

HOUSEKEEPER OF FRANCE; SHE'S A BEAUTY OF 27

Woman Gets High Post After Winning a Record as a Lawyer.

PARIS, April 11.—Although the ballot has not yet been seriously sought by the women of France, the executive ability of French women is occasionally recognized by the government. Marie Galtier the celebrated Parisian woman lawyer has just been appointed Inspector General of the Administrative services of the Department of the Interior.

This is a post to which but two other women have ever reached and Mademoiselle Galtier succeeds Madame Monnier, who is the wife of the president of the Council of Ministers.

Her appointment is interesting because of the youth of Mademoiselle Galtier, and her brilliant career at the Parisian bar. Her duties give her charge of the public institutions of the Southern provinces of France, including hospitals, homes for the aged, female prisons, houses of refuge, and institutions for women. Her post is executive so she will have authority to institute reforms and recommend legislation for administration she desires.

The London Telegraph in commenting upon her appointment said "France needed a general housekeeper, and Mademoiselle Galtier has been appointed to the office."

Mlle. Galtier is only twenty-seven years of age. She was born in Corsica but came with her parents in infancy to France. She was graduated from the University of Paris and the law schools and was admitted to the bar about four years ago. At that time there was only a dozen women lawyers in all France. Her brilliant mind and personal attractiveness soon carried her to the front. When she pleaded a case the courtroom was always crowded, and she was returned the winner invariably.

Her biggest case was the defense of a woman who had murdered her lover. It was the first murder trial to be held by a woman, and she got her client off. Immediately afterwards she was offered the cabinet portfolio secretary to Poincare, then head of Secretary to Poincare, then the most celebrated lawyer in France, soon after became prime minister and then President of the Republic. His appointment of Mlle. Galtier as government at the Feminist Congress in Vienna last year. Her appointment to this post was the Minister of the Interior was won by competitive examination.

Lady Decies Hopes to Meet Royalty

Opportunity when King and Queen Visit Husband's Cousin.

LONDON, April 11.—Lady Decies, nee Vivien Gould, who, with her husband, Lord Decies, is soon to go to New York, has arrived at a critical stage in her career. Being a leader of society, her future in British society depends largely on whether she and Lord Decies are among the guests invited to meet the King and Queen when they visit Dublin during the Duchess of Montrose at Buchana Castle, near Glasowv, in the first part of July.

Lord Decies and the Duke of Montrose are first cousins and great friends, but in spite of this the Duke cannot be sure that Lord Decies and Lady Decies to meet the King and Queen unless he first obtains Their Majesties' permission. It is obvious, therefore, that for Lady Decies it is a question of life or death as invitations with the King and Queen on this occasion, or perhaps not at all.

FRIENDS RALLY TO WELLESLEY'S AID FOR SPRING TERM

College Authorities, Undaunted by Fire, Conduct Classes in Emergency Rooms.

ALL ENTHUSIASTIC FOR FUND

Wellesley College, not in the least discouraged by the loss of 75 per cent. of the college equipment in the fire which destroyed College Hall, is in the full swing of its Spring term. Every girl returned after the vacation which followed the fire, and classes began in makeshift class rooms fitted up in the society houses, basements of college buildings, and everywhere a cranny of room could be found.

The girls driven out by the fire found quarters in other dormitories, and a "doubling up" process gave every girl lodging.

The college authorities have issued acknowledgments of gifts and loans of equipment from different sources. The following have been reported:

LOANS ACKNOWLEDGED.

Harvard, through the courtesy of President Lowell, Dr. R. R. Daly, Professor Woodworth, Professor Atwood and Winthrop P. Haynes, has loaned a classified collection of rocks and fossils for so long as it may be needed, and has offered the use of the Gardiner collection of lantern slides, and eleven library copies of Professional Paper No. 60 for use in the course of physiography. Sets of delicate trays of minerals and rocks are being prepared for work in mineralogy. During the Summer Mr. Haynes, who has been appointed instructor in geology in Wellesley, will collect fossils and specimens in Nova Scotia.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge has presented eleven copies of Professional Paper No. 60 and one copy of No. 71.

Professor A. W. Grabeau of Columbia offers any needed materials, especially fossils.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, through Professor Henry Schimer, has given a collection of fossils, loaned a projecting lantern and has offered a teaching collection of rocks and fossils. Also offered physics apparatus to complete the year's work.

Brown University, through Professor Brown, offers specimens.

Princeton has placed its collections at the service of Wellesley.

Bryn Mawr has offered fossils.

Professor George H. Barton of the Teachers' School of Social Science has loaned charts and lantern slides.

The Fairbanks Museum of Natural Science in St. Johnsbury, Vt., has sent a collection of mineral specimens.

Curator Johnson of the Boston Society of Natural History has given a collection of fossils.

The American Geographic Society of New York has offered maps, atlases and text books.

The United States Geologic Survey is sending all topographic sheets now in print.

The Utah Wellesley Club is sending specimens and minerals.

Dr. William Lee Howard of Westboro has sent a collection of volcanic rocks from Iceland and the South Seas.

The Macmillan Company, Henry Holt & Co., D. Appleton & Co., Ginn & Co. and Houghton, Mifflin Company have sent desk copies of text books.

Many alumnae have contributed.

Classes at the college are meeting in the Art Building, the library and in an old geology lecture room, which occupies the small portion of College Hall still standing. A board staircase up the outside of the building leads through a window to this class room.

Most of the "doubling up" to accommodate College Hall girls is in the quadrangle dormitories. There are thirteen extra girls in Pomeroy, and about twenty more in the other buildings.

GIRLS RAISING MONEY.

The undergraduates are vigorously at work raising money for the fire fund. The plays of Cort Theatre netted about $5,000. A hurriedly planned vaudeville show, conducted during the vacation in three Boston towns, brought $262. There is to be a big auction bridge and luncheon at the Brae-Burn the latter part of this month—proceeds to go to the fund, and in Natick eight girls are planning a vaudeville entertainment in the Natick Theatre.

The girls in charge are: Alice Mulligan, 1914; Mae Moody, 1914; Chi Che Wang, 1914; Annie Montgomery, 1915; Dorothy Loker, 1916; Jane Diehl, 1916, and Lucille Brooks, 1916.

The program will consist of Mary Pickford in "The Caprice," kindly loaned by the Players' Film Company of Boston, in four reels.

Ruth Allen of Newton, solo dancer.

Mrs. Jeanette Hall, vocal selections.

Dr. C. Taylor, vocal selections.

Virginia Long, twelve years old, of Framingham, violin selections.

Tech Men Go to High Places

And Wife of Professor Fills Important Post.

Professor William T. Sedgwick, the famous Massachusetts Institute of Technology savant, is on a European trip as the Tech member to the celebrated "Cercolo Matematico di Palermo" (Italy) Jubilee, while Rainher M. Gunn, the youthful '05 scientist, who is filling his chair at the institute, has been appointed a member of the reconstructed State Labor Commission.

Mrs. David R. Dewey, wife of another noted Tech professor, is also a member of the new board.

ALEXANDER DEAN TO APPEAR HERE AS LEADING LADY OF DARTMOUTH PLAYERS

LIVELY JUNIOR WEEK AT TECH

Three Days' Festivities Open with Technique Rush on Wednesday.

Junior week at Technology starts on Wednesday, with the largest list of social and sporting events ever attempted at the institute. The Technique Rush, Tech Show, Junior Prom Freshman Prom, Tech-Technique baseball game, Spring meet, Architectural Tea and several fraternity house parties and teas will fill Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The first event, the Technique Rush, will take place Wednesday, at 1:15 o'clock in the lot in the rear of the Copley-Plaza. The first twenty members of the year book contain the autograph of the president of the Institute, and it is considered one of the big honors at Tech to secure the first book. They will be given out through a hole about two feet square after the successful participant has forced his head and shoulders into the hole, the other rushers meanwhile trying to keep him out.

Tech Show will give the two Boston performances in Boston at the Boston Opera House qn Thursday afternoon and evening. As a preliminary there will be a show at Northampton on Wednesday night. The afternoon performance at the Opera House will be given out to the undergraduates, and in the evening the alumni will hold the centre of the stage.

Friday night the Junior Prom will take place at the Copley-Plaza, and at the same time the freshmen will hold a prom at the Vendome.

Saturday evening the Spring concert and dance of the musical clubs will be held, also at the Copley Plaza. The Glee, Mandolin and Banjo Clubs will participate.

Many of the fraternities will hold house parties all during the week. Among them are the Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Beta Epsilon and Chi Phi.

The spring track meet will take place Friday morning. Four valuable cups will be given, and all the clubs will meet in a relay race. The Tech-Technique baseball game, the comedy affair of the week, will take place at Tech Field on Thursday morning. The institute will reopen on Tuesday, April 21.

The presence of several young men from Greater Boston homes adds local interest to the appearance of the Dartmouth players at the Plymouth Theatre in matinees tomorrow and Tuesday. One of them, Alexander Dean, is announced as a "stage beauty."

The organization known as the Dartmouth Players is made up of undergraduates of the college of that name who are pursuing dramatics, not necessarily for a career, but from a vigorous academic interest in stage art.

The matinees will each include three one-act plays. Tomorrow they will stage Carl Prehy's "Leave of Absence;" "The Man from the Sea," by Charles Goddard and Paul Dickey, and Gilbert Cannan's "James and John." The Tuesday's performance will include Maeterinck's "The Intruder," "James and John" and "The Man From the Sea."

BOSTON MEN IN PART.

The company includes George Henry Tilton, Jr., of Littleton, N. H.; Charles Mall Claeys of Brussels, Belgium; Arthur Bolton Leonard of West Newton; James Michael Killeen of Concord, Donald Shapleigh Page of Malden, George Westcott Hutchins of Sioux City, La.; Hugh Livingston Cole of Chicago, Alexander Dean of Boston, John Hillman Wolverton of Trenton, N. J., and J. Willis Rogers of Dallas.

The leading man of the company is George Henry Tilton, Jr., of Littleton, N. H., a senior. Even before the present movement towards producing contemporary plays at Dartmouth, when the classics held full sway, he excelled in acting. The fact, that he can interpret the old as well as the new, shows his range and versatility. He holds one of the associate editorships on the Dartmouth, the student newspaper; is a member of several social and intellectual organizations, and has participated in athletics.

REAL STAGE 'BEAUTY.'

Alexander Dean of Boston, a sophomore, has taken many difficult feminine roles. His performance in Maurice Barings' "Catherine Parr," made his college reputation as an actor. He, too, took part in "The Middling Lady," and was regarded by many of the collegians as being as handsome a "beauty" as many seen in current Broadway successes. Mr. Dean entertains no idea of following the stage as a profession. He will probably enter Harvard Law School after graduating from Dartmouth in 1916.

Arthur Holmes Leonard of West Newton enjoys the distinction of having "made" the role of Witter Bynner's "Little King" in the play by the same name. At the time the performance was given in Hanover, last November, Mr. Bynner said: "Leonard has acted the part with a skill and adaptation seldom seen outside of professional work." Mr. Leonard is known in the college world as a clever impersonator of feminine roles. He will be seen on Tuesday as Ursula in "The Intruder." In addition to being a proficient actor, Mr. Leonard makes up into an unusually attractive young woman.

War Museum at the Harvard Club

Room 22 in the Harvard Club of Boston is to be known as "The Room of the Class of 1862." The plan is to turn it into a sort of museum of Civil War relics and of souvenirs of the class of '62. Chairman Henry M. Rogers of the Class Committee has issued this appeal:

"I wish to obtain photographs and other memorials of the class for the walls and bookcase of this room. I ask the co-operation of the class and of those interested in the class to enable me to secure photographs of the class, of groups, of societies, and clubs, of boats and crews, of club tables, of war groups, and scenes whether Federal or Confederate, and of individual photographs that are significant in any unusual way. Also, I wish the books written by or relating to members of the class. I wish to locate such souvenirs now and to assemble them later. Kindly address Henry M. Rogers, chairman of the Class Committee, No. 83 State street, Boston, Mass."

Wellesley Girls Come to Rescue

Eight in Natick Put on Show to Aid Fire Fund.

Eight Wellesley girls out in Natick have devised a plan to raise money for the Wellesley College fire fund—which must reach a million and a quarter by next January.

They will give tomorrow afternoon at the Natick Theatre a benefit show. The money goes to the fire fund. The girls in charge are: Alice Mulligan, 1914; Mae Moody, 1914; Chi Che Wang, 1914; Annie Montgomery, 1915; Dorothy Loker, 1916; Jane Diehl, 1916; Marie Nelson, 1916, and Lucille Brooks, 1916.

The program will consist of "Mary Pickford in 'The Caprice,'" kindly loaned by the Players' Film Company of Boston, in four reels.

MRS. MARKS TO READ.

The Women Graduates' Club of Boston University has arranged a reading to be given in Jacob Sleeper Hall on Friday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, by Mrs. Josephine Peabody Marks, the well known author of "The Piper" and other notable volumes. Mrs. Margaret Deland, who had planned to read to the club, has been obliged to cancel all engagements this Spring because of illness.

NEXT SUNDAY IS IMMIGRANT DAY IN THE CHURCHES

Pastors All Over New England to Preach to New Comers from Foreign Shores.

April 19 will be Immigration Sunday.

Massachusetts ministers have been asked by the Civic League for Immigrants, No. 173 State street, to preach on this text: "What will make immigrants better citizens? What can the churches do towards their moral and social reforms? What special work may be done among them by smaller communities?"

The Massachusetts Federation of Churches will co-operate with the league in movements for the betterment of the educational and religious conditions of immigrants.

The Rev. Isaac Pearson, D. D., secretary of the Boston department of the American Tract Society, No. 50 Bromfield street, is a strong advocate of the league in its work.

"No work should appeal more directly than this to the New England churches," he says. "Immigrants are coming into New England towns every year, and the churches must awaken to their new responsibilities. Many of the new-comers do not understand our ways and methods. They stand apart from our churches. We should do all in our power to give them the glad hand.

"If we do not do this in the next fifty years, what will become of our New England churches? These immigrants are fast taking the places of the old New Englander. What now we to do? Simply get into closer touch with them when they come to our community, try to get them into our churches, provide means of getting them interested. In a word, do everything to win the immigrant to our organizations. Every church should have special services for them."

The Morgan Memorial in the South End, in order to meet the needs of immigrants, will soon establish a church of All Nations. Services will be held in Yiddish, modern Greek, Syrian and Polish.

Joseph G. Edgerly Resigns School Job

FITCHBURG, April 11.—Joseph G. Edgerly, dean of school superintendents in the United States, has resigned as superintendent of the schools of Fitchburg after thirty-nine years in this position. Mr. Edgerly has resigned several times before, but the school board refused his resignation and raised his salary.

Tech, Too, Has a Julian Eltinge To Star in "A Royal Johnny"

F. H. Smyth, the Julian Eltinge of Tech.

Harvard claims to have a perfect Julian Eltinge, but Technology men are backing the star in their Tech show, which will be given next Thursday evening.

Frederic Hastings Smyth of Brookline, now a graduate student at the institute, is the man. This is Smyth's third show season. He made his debut in "Frenkied French" three years ago, when he outshown all the other "girls" as "Dolly." The next year, as the heroine in "Castles in Spain," he took the part of Lolilita, a Spanish dancer. Last year Smyth did not come out for a part, but this season the call of the footlights brings him out prettier and more in evidence.

Smyth is a Sigma Phi man and already has two degrees, having won the '03 at Hamilton before coming to the institute, where he was given a Bachelor of Science degree last year in chemistry.

"Alice," the dancing girl, is the part in "A Royal Johnny" that Smyth will fill, and all indications point to his again making the hit. He has a good voice and is a graceful dancer, but it is the general appearance rather than these things that pleases the audience. Under the coaching of E. Sayer of New York he has developed into a genuine "chorine."

RAISE COTTON HERE FOR BIG TEXTILE SHOW

Arlington Farmer Growing Crop for South Carolina College's Exhibit.

An Arlington farmer is preparing to harvest a Spring crop of cotton. Cotton growing in Massachusetts is a novelty, but a Spring crop is an innovation. Strangely enough the cotton is being grown for Clemson College of South Carolina, for the exhibit at the Fourth National Textile Fair in Mechanics Building, April 27 to May 2.

The textile department of Clemson College is going to show cotton in the various phases of its growth. The climate in South Carolina wouldn't permit growing it at this season, so Charles S. Doggett, director of the textile department of the college, sent some seeds to an Arlington bothouse farmer to "force" so the college would have a generous supply in the boll for the exhibition.

This exhibit is but one of a hundred of the educational features of the coming textile show. Fifteen thousand young men and young women have graduated from the Lowell and New Bedford textile schools and many of them are holding responsible positions in this industry so at is only appropriate that these schools should make an elaborate display of the character of the training as thousands of mill owners, superintendents, overseers and other high officials will be in Boston to attend the show.

The Lowell Textile School, according to Principal Charles H. Eames, plans to have operating machinery turning out cotton, wool yarns and fabrics in its exhibit. They will also show mechanical drawings, parts of machines made by students who pursue the textile mechanical and engineering course, dyed materials and samples of chemicals representative of the work in the chemistry and dyeing department. Artistic designs of textiles will make up the exhibition of the textile design and power weaving department.

William E. Hatch, president of the New Bedford Textile School, says this institution will show by a display of yarnings and yarns the wide range of instruction in carding and spinning; by a collection of designs the character of work in the design department; by samples of many kinds of woven fabric the high grade of instruction in the design department; by made-up articles of hosiery and underwear the thorough instruction in the knitting department; by samples of dyed yarns and fabrics what the school is doing in chemistry and dyeing, and by various pieces of skillfully executed machine work the character of instruction in the mechanical and engineering department.

GAFFNEY CHARGES BASEBALL PLOT

Johnny Dundee Is Here

Fights Matty Baldwin

Johnny Dundee, the little New York featherweight who boxes Matty Baldwin at the opening of the Atlas A. C. at the Boston Arena tomorrow night, came to Boston today. He is one of the young fighters who has managed to stand ring prosperity without trying to fly in "high life" circles.

Johnny has been fighting professionally exactly four years and has a trousseau in New York to show for it. He has an ambition to amass $100,000 bankroll of $50,000 and a couple of 000, retire from the ring a champion and go into the real estate business.

He isn't anxious about getting the money for himself, but he has a charming young wife and a fourteen months' old daughter, Lucille, both of whom he wishes to put beyond the fear of worry in case anything should happen to him. Which accounts for the fact that he is one of the busiest fighters in the world today, appearing in the ring on an average of twice a week throughout the year.

When a youngster at school, he used to work afternoons at his father's fish store on Forty-first street, New York. Johnny particular job was guarding the front from the ravages of the youngsters of the district. Consequently, he soon learned to use his hands.

One of the managers of a New York club aplied Johnny one day standing off a crowd of kids and signed him up.

That was nine years ago, when the little scrapper was about fourteen years old. He took boxing lessons, and when he was sixteen started to appear in the amateur classes. His success was immediate and he soon had several titles.

Just four years ago he switched over to the professional end of the game, and has been winning ever since. He has battled more than two hundred times, and the worst he ever got was a draw decision. He had two fights with the featherweight champion, Johnny Kilbane, and both came out even.

The little Italian is in mighty good shape for his go with Matty Baldwin tomorrow night, and this morning weighed in at 125 pounds. He will have to concede his opponent about five pounds.

FEDERALS OPEN THE SEASON

BRAVES SUE FOR $25,000

NEW YORK, April 13.—President James E. Gaffney of the Boston National League club announced today that he intends to take legal action for conspiracy against the officers of the Federal League because of the desertion of Pitcher Jack Quinn to the Baltimore team of the Federals.

"I have determined," he said, "to begin an action against all those concerned in the signing of Quinn to a Baltimore Federal contract, including Edward Hanlon, Otto Knabe, the Federal League and its president, James Gilmore, individually.

"The action will be brought to recover the damages to which the Boston club is entitled by reason of the conspiracy entered into by these parties, which resulted in Quinn's breaking his contract with the Boston club."

Gaffney denounced the Federal League leaders as "hypocrites, who have been going around telling how upright and honorable they were." The amount to be asked by Gaffney is said to be $25,000.

Gaffney's statement follows:

No action has been taken against Player Quinn up to this

SOX RETURNING FOR 1ST GAME

By JACK CONWAY.

SPRINGFIELD, April 13.—The Red Sox party passed through here late this afternoon enroute for Boston, where they are due to arrive at 8:35 o'clock tonight.

Before quitting the West Carrigan's men stopped off at Cincinnati long enough to trounce Charley Herzog's Reds by a count of 4 to 0.

The Red Sox played a fast, snappy game of ball and outclassed the Reds. They secured six hits off Dowman, while they connected with one safety off Yingling's benders.

Everett Scott was one of the chief stars of the game. He made two of Boston's runs, while he lined out a smashing hit. In the field he played a sensational game, accepting thirteen chances without an error. He is as fast as a young deer and covers a great deal of ground.

LOU CRIGER IS DYING

30,000 AT FIRST 'FED' BALL GAME

BALTIMORE, April 13.—Mad with enthusiasm and cheered on by cloudless skies and a bright sun, 30,000 "fans" flocked to the ball grounds on York road here today to witness the opening of the new Federal League in Baltimore. Buffalo vs. Baltimore was the opening attraction.

Never since the days of Ned Hanlon's champion Orioles has there been so much enthusiasm in baseball circles around this town. Early in the day the "fans" began their rush for the ball park, and long before the hour set for the beginning of the battle all the seats were filled. All the reserved seats were disposed of a week before the opening date.

BIG PARADE BEFORE GAME.

The game was preceded by a parade of players, officials and rooters, in which brass bands, autos and vehicles of every kind participated. "Booster clubs," consisting of hundreds of "fans" on foot and in various kinds of vehicles, were also in line. The route of the parade was lined with thousands of persons.

Mayor Preston threw out the first ball, which was caught by Governor Goldsborough. Among the notables on hand were: President Gilmore of the new league, Charles Weeghman of the Chicago club, William Watkins of Indianapolis and the Ward brothers of Brooklyn. A big delegation of the faithful, accompanied by Mayor Fortham and the directors of the Buffalo club, came down from Buffalo to whoop things up for their team.

A MUNICIPAL HOLIDAY.

Several weeks ago an effort was made to have the government declare today a State holiday, but this failed. Mayor Preston, however, declared the day a municipal half-holiday and many of the business houses and factories closed down at noon.

Sympathy and regrets were expressed today over the severe injury Enos Kirkpatrick, third baseman of the Baltimores, received Saturday when, in an exhibition game, he broke his ankle, which will probably put him out of the game for the rest of the season. He had been looked on as a big factor in today's game.

NO HOPE FOR STAR CATCHER

ELKHART, Ind., April 13.—Lou Criger, once known as the greatest of all catchers, when he was a member of the Boston American League champions in 1903 and 1905, is dying at the home of his sister here, a victim of tuberculosis. The famous battery mate of "Cy" Young cannot, according to his physicians, live more than a month at the most.

He has been sick for the past year, but it was not until recently that his illness took such a bad turn that the doctors despaired of saving his life.

George Cupp, one time pitcher, who was a member of the Cleveland team with Criger before the American League came into being, lives here, and is continually at the bedside of the dying catcher.

Criger was born in this town in February, 1872. After the usual run of semi-professional playing, he entered league baseball in 1896 as a member of the Kalamazoo team of the Michigan State League. The following year he was purchased by Fort Wayne of the Central League, and so great was his showing that at the end of the season he was taken over by Cleveland, then in the National League.

Though the Naps at that time had two star backstops, the new youth displayed such ability that he was used regularly and soon had the reputation of being the star man in big league baseball.

When in 1900 the American League started in earnest to raid the old major organization, the Boston American agents approached and signed up the great Cy Young. Criger had been catching Cy, and when his pitcher jumped so did he.

With the Boston team he was a star of the brightest kind, and it was his splendid work behind the bat that helped the team into a pair of pennants. In the world series against Pittsburgh in 1903, Criger caught every game, and his magnificent coaching of the Boston boys buoyed them up and enabled them soon to pull the title out of the fire after Pittsburgh had the series practically won.

He remained with Boston till 1910, when he was traded to St. Louis shortly after his partner, Young, had gone to Cleveland. After a year with St. Louis, the once great catcher was shunted out to Milwaukee in the American Association, where he stayed a couple of seasons, only to come back to the Brewers in 1913 in the capacity of scout and coach of the young pitchers. Late in the season his illness became acute, and he was obliged to give up his active connection with the game.

President Insists on Mexican Apology

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The United States will insist upon the offering of a salute to the American flag by the Mexican Federals at Tampico for the insult in arresting and parading as prisoners a party of American marines.

It was plain from President Wilson's attitude today that there is no intention on his part to pursue a conciliatory policy toward the Mexicans at Tampico who arrested the American marines, but he let it be known that he will not state his

FIRST BASEBALL DEATH

Misjudged Fly Fatal

NEW YORKER VICTIM

NEW YORK, April 13.—John Nelson, eighteen years old, a printer, is dead at his home, No. 662 Hicks street, Brooklyn, as a result of being struck in the head by a baseball while playing Saturday.

He was knocked unconscious when a misjudged fly ball struck him in the forehead, but stayed the game out after he was revived. Yesterday he complained of pains in his head. A physician was called, but the young man died in an hour of hemorrhage of the brain.

GALLANT AND DUFFY READY FOR FAST GO

BOUTS TONIGHT.

At Cambridge—Johnny Gallant vs. Freddy Duffy, Gus Murphy vs. Victor Florios, Patsy Greene vs. Johnny Duffy, Fudge Murphy vs. Johnny Boyle.

At Buffalo—Jess Willard vs. Dan Dailey.

At Philadelphia—Johnny Kilbane vs. Frankie Daly.

At Baltimore—George Chaney vs. Joe Coster.

At Linton, Ind.—Gus Christie vs. Frank Hoe.

At Rochester, N. Y.—Pal Moore vs. Frankie Burke.

By RINGSIDE.

If Freddy Duffy succeeds in getting a decision over Johnny Gallant at the University A. C. in Cambridge tonight, he intends to go out after some of the big guns in the lightweight division, and will make Eddie Murphy of South Boston his particular aim. Duffy has been progressing very steadily for a number of years, but has not been very fortunate in the matter of getting good matches. He has decided to forego the waiting policy hereafter and to get out and hustle, so that he will have a chance to show just where he fits.

In Gallant, however, he tackles an opponent who is much better than he is generally given credit for—a boy who can battle in any style and who is never licked. He also is anxious to get up the ladder and is in splendid condition for the battle. Like Duffy, he has the idea that a bout with Murphy would be a good chance to move things along, and if victorious will fling a defi at the clever South Boston boxer.

* * *

Some time ago, according to Duffy, Murphy agreed to make a match if he could make 125 pounds the day of the fight. The Jamaica Plain boxer is now down to this weight and appears just as strong as ever. He is willing to post a forefeit to effect a match with Murphy. As several of the local promoters have this battle in view, it is a good bet that it will be staged very shortly. It would be a good drawing card, as both chaps have very big followings.

* * *

Murphy will probably be one of the principals in the star bout at next week's University meeting, though his opponent has not yet been decided. If he is willing, there is a possibility that the winner of tonight's main battle will be put up against him.

FOUR SLAYERS DIE IN CHAIR

NEW YORK, April 13.—It is reported here that "Dago Frank" Cirofici made a confession before he and the other three gunmen went to the chair this morning.

The report was that at 1 o'clock this morning "Dago Frank" asked to see his spiritual adviser, Father Cashin, and that he gave Father Cashin a complete story of his share in the crime. The story he told, taken down in writing, was forwarded to Governor Glynn—according to report.

When the report was brought to the ears of Attorney Wahle, chief counsel for the gunmen, he denied it absolutely. He said:

"I haven't heard about it and I don't believe it."

Nevertheless, so complete was the report that even the slayers of Rosenthal were named. According to the "confession" the men who fired the actual shots were "Lefty Louie," "Gyp the Blood" and Harry Vallon. Vallon is alive. The other two paid the penalty this morning.

CALLED AWAY TO HELP WOMAN.

Bride Witness in Siegel Case

Mrs. Diana E. "Dolly" Eddy-Brown, the bride of James Salisbury Brown of Providence, testified today before the Suffolk Grand Jury probing the failure of the Siegel bank in Boston and Henry Siegel's financial affairs generally. Mrs. Eddy-Brown, who was the central figure at the courthouse today, was in the Grand Jury room for fifteen minutes. She was the first witness.

The Grand Jury began its inquiry at 11:15. The second witness was James E. Lynch, chief clerk of the Siegel bank in Boston.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas D. Lavelle announced that Mrs.

China Cock Wins the Queen's Prize

KEMPTON PARK, Eng., April 12.—P. Nelke's China Cock, aged 4 years, won the Queen's Prize handicap, worth £5,000, here today. Bonfire ran second and Lady Carnarvon's Rivoli third.

Dago Frank admitted—so the story goes—that he was to have had a share in the killing, but that he was called away to help a young woman who had been arrested.

The four gunmen were electrocuted at dawn today. True to their predictions, they died game.

It required just thirty-nine minutes to execute the gunman who went to their death in this order: First, Frank Cirofici, alias "Dago Frank." Second, Jacob Seidenschner, alias "Frank Mueller" and "Whitey Lewis." Third, Harry Horowitz, alias "Gyp the Blood." Fourth, Lewis Rosenberg, alias "Lefty Louie."

Whitey Lewis alone made a statement in the death chamber. It was a jerky assertion that witnesses who swore that they shot Rosenthal were perjurers.

"Whitney" was on the verge of collapse. He suffered an emotional breakdown in his cell at the last moment. This unexpected turn of affairs compelled the execution plans to be changed at the last moment.

"Whitey" was shoveling and he was taken. Only the sounds of the electricians strapping the electrodes upon the condemned man broke the deathly stillness of the death house.
